The children from the Conservatory, who have been asked to participate, range in age from 3 to 10. They are: Penn Clarke, Lawson Clarke, Brook Gracia, Cynthia MacKay all of Hingham; Catherine Murphy and Pheobe Bernard of Norwell; Jane DeLima and Kate DeLima of Cohasset; Peter Gates, Jonathan Gates and Matthew Weaver, all of Scituate; and Sheila Hurd of Whitman. The children's teacher, Ms. Donna Jean Hurd, will be a rehearsal instructor at the Festival.

The South Shore Conservatory of Music in Hingham is a not for profit community music school and the Young Violinists class is just one of the many classes offered to children and adults at the school.

SSAC Accepting Applications For Membership

The South Shore Art Center is now accepting applications for Gallery membership from exhibiting artists. The special category of membership is available for professionals consistently working in the fields of painting, sculpture, printmaking, photography, weaving, fine crafts and mixed media.

Gallery membership allows artists to display work in monthly shows in the Members Gallery and to be eligible to apply for a show in the Invitational Gallery. Artists are chosen for membership by a selection committee which meets periodically to review submitted original work; the next meeting of the Committee will take place the end of May. Artists interested in submitting their work should leave their name and address at the Center Office on 103 Ripley Roads in Cohasset or telephone the Center Office at 383-9548 between 12 noon - 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

THE Shoe Closet OF DUXBURY

THE BOTTOM LINE

The catalyst that transforms this season's separate fashions into one total sleek and feminine look is the new shoe. The shoe is the essential element that throws everything into proper perspective and makes it "work." Many of the new styles absolutely demand a lighter, higher, and more graceful shoe.

The impact of a straight slit skirt is lost when worn with a low, bulky shoe. However, a graceful high heel, strappy sandal allows it to realize its dramatic potential. A soft kicky dress will look dowdy with last year's heavier shoe. This season's dresses, whether sleek and narrow, slightly bloused with a narrow skirt, or cinched at the waist and crisply flaired, all need this new shoe to be carried off.

The new straight leg pants are a disaster without a high shoe. Try a pair of open backed mules, or slides, available in many bright colors, for a happy coordination of the height and sport look needed. Many are totally padded on the inside for greater than imagined comfort, which certainly belies their sky high glamour.

The casual shoes this season are also stepping lightly. They are happy modifications of the graceful high heel, strappy sandals that give the dresses and suits their lift. Although the heels are lower, they are gracefully turned. The straps are narrower and placed seductively higher on the ankle. The vamp bands are also thinner and sometimes scalloped for an extra statement of feminity.

Fisherman sandals are a fun new casual shoe that offers both a comfortable walking heel and an airy graceful style. Low cork sole sandals, open toe aspadrilles, and colorful striped fabric or woven jute sandals, are all wonderful ways to achieve the light and airy look with ease.

The headlines in footwear are closely echoing those of the general fashion news this season. The bare, foot revealing message supports the body revealing theme of the dramatic new clothes.

However, whatever the fashion headlines, in footwear the bottom line is what best fits you and your lifestyle. Try a pair of seductively high high heels when you feel like a glamorous life and a pair of graceful lower shoes on days when you really do need wings on your heels!

Only the earliest went to California joining the Gold Rush. Later arrivals, beckoned to California with its temporate climate, engaged in pastoral agriculture or dairy farming. A small percentage labored as stevedores in New Orleans. In Massachusetts many were engaged in fishing or sought employment in the textile mills in Lowell, cambridge, Lynn.

The family and work ethic among Azoreans is strong.

Perhaps as many as 100 families settled in Cohasset from 1840 until the beginning of World War I when quota restrictions began. They quickly assimilated themselves into American life and were woven into the fabric of religious and political life as well as bridged any chasm which exsisted with Irish newcomers and English pioneers. Anglicizing their names, intermarrying, their dark eyes, and ruddy complexion have become part of the common stock.

The Minots Ledge Portugese Benevolent Society performed many charitable works and deeds among its own membership. It owned the building, now 86 Summer Street.

It owned its own function hall for dances and other recreational facilities. The building had a pool table. There were cake and cookie sales, women's handiwork, and bric-a-brac

The Association was kept alive by second and third generations until disbanded in the late '30s.

Still residing in Cohasset after three generations are a few pure-blooded Azoreans, probably under 40 persons with the distaff side holding the edge.

The first Azorean to establish permanent residence in Cohasset was Manuel Antoine born on Rico Jan. 20. 1820. He arrived in Cohasset about 1840, perhaps earlier. To put this date into proper perspective it was 20 years before the Civil War. Antoine married twice, was the father of 14 (five daughters and nine sons). Many families in Cohasset and other local communities can trace their families origin back to Antoine's beginnings. Doubtless including in-laws, members of fourth and fifth generations, and the deceased the number would amount to several hundred persons. Others followed his footsteps — his brother Frank Antoine of Pico, Manuel F. Bandura, John Francis of Pico, Manuel and his brother Thomas Grassie of Pico, Manuel Joseph of Pico, Antoine Joseph, Joseph F. Martin of Pico, Joseph Mcloud, Joseph F. Munnis, and Joseph Jason from the isle of Pico. To this list these earliest families must be mentioned Antoine Lawrence, Frank Silvia, Frank Pierson of Flores, George M. Ennice of Ribeiro Grande, St. Miguel and Antone Anderson who was born in Portugal, 1820 and settled here about 1859.

Portugese Azoreans commandeered vessels of the two masted square rigged type called brigantines, the three masted square rigged variety noted as barkintines or skippered smaller mackerel schooners.

These valiant men whose crew members numbered as many as a dozen were fishing the Georges Bank southeast of Long Island or braved the colder waters of the Grand Banks southeast of Newfoundland where fish were even more abundant. On their fishing journey they and their crew members were away as long as three months.

The following men's occupation are listed in the Cohasset Geneology as 'master mariner', 'mariner' or 'captain': Captain Manuel Soito Enos, and his brother Captain Joseph Soito Enos both from Faial; Manuel Valine of st. Calliete Isle St. George; Manuel Silvia Leonard of St. George; Joseph Enos Fratese of Faial; Joseph Grassie, Manuel Grassie and his brother Thomas Grassie both from Pico, and Francis Frates. Also to the list must be added the names of Manuel E. Brazil, George M. Ennice of Ribeiro Grande, St. Miguel, Manuel Silvia and lastly John Joseph Ferreira of Flores.

Cafeteria Plan Adopted

The School Committee this week unanimously approved adoption of a cafeteria plan for Deer Hill School.

The plan, which was chosen from four options prepared by Superintendent John Maloney, will accomodate modular cafeteria equipment to be installed in an auditorium previously used by the fourth and fifth grade open space class. When the equipment is not in use, it can be rolled away in an adjacent storage space, and the auditorium can be further utilized by other classes.

The cafeteria equipment was appropriated by the school department during budget proceedings as a part of a federal cafeteria program. Three half-hour lunches will be scheduled for the new mobile cafeteria.

School Committee Chairman Jack Langmaid explained that because Deer Hill will have one less fifth grade class next year, the open space class can be easily absorbed into other classrooms. The open space class would have been phased out anyway, he said, because of declining enrollment.

The cafeteria plan option chosen constituted the least relocation of staff, Principal Kenneth Ekberg said. He further outlined complications in scheduling students into lunch periods because of music, art, library and gym class scheduling difficulties.

Director of Food Services, Pat Winchell, praised the community dining room idea, feeling it would encourage students to develop good nutritional habits and manners. Committee member Diana Kornet agreed and commented that the value of students having their own lunch room far outweighed any scheduling hassles.

The Committee also unanimously approved an in-service course for teacher on gifted and talented students. The space provided by the auditorium at the Deer Hill School will serve as a classroom for the after school course.

The course, which will be aimed primarily at elementary school teachers, will focus on what it means to be gifted and talented, Maloney said. He also encouraged secondary school teachers to attend the classes.

The classes will be held after school at approximately 3 or 3:15 p.m. to avoid unnecessary travel for teachers.

A $1500 grant from the Massachusetts In-Service Institute may be available to the school department to defray the $2200 cost of the course.

William D. Weeks, Jr., son of the William D. Weeks of Border Street and a senior at Milton Academy, has been accepted at Wi'liams College in Williamstown.

Local garden clubs were well represented in the fourth annual "Art in Bloom" festival at the Museum of Fine Arts. A blue container used in her flower arrangement by Mrs. John J. Hickey of the Community Garden Club complemented the hues of Monet's painting of Rouen Cathedral. Mrs. William Morse, representative of the Cohasset Garden club created a flower arrangement whose background was Winslow Homer's 1869 painting entitled "Long Branch, New Jersey". Mrs. Morse is currently horticulture chairman of the Garden Club and received the Marie Hancock Cook award in the New Englands Spring Garden and Flower show.

Kent will be based in Boston with new office facilities scheduled to open on June 1 in Park Square. Temporary headquarters are at 6 Bound Brook Court in North Scituate.

The CHS varsity girls' track team won 4 of their first 5 meets. The Skippers team features some of the top athletes on the South Shore: Mary Jo Mahoney in the mile, Hannah Clinton in the two mile and Nancy Lave in the discus. Others in the top positions are Ellen Figueredo and India Turner in the 100-yard dash, Lorraine Carroll in the 220-yard dash, Ann Parziale in the quarter mile, Erin O'Brine in the half mile, Barbara Gurnis in the mile, Diane Gunville in the low hurdles and high jump, Heidi Brow in the shot put and Heidi Chase in the javelin. Tina Birman, Tracy O'Brien, Holly Grant, Patty Walsh, Karen Smith and Leslie Carroll, Donna Chisolm are led by co-captains Jocelyn Kennedy and Ellen Figueredo.

ROBERT HARRIS

Cadet Robert B. Harris was one of 191 graduates of the Mass. Maritime Academy at the 136th graduation exercise in the Alumni Gymnasium at the Taylors' Point Campus. Cadet Harris is the son of Charles L. Harris and Ann L. Harris of 14 Locust Rd. He received his Bachelor of Science degree in Marine Engineering and a license as Third Assistant Engineer in the U.S. Merchant Marine. While at the Academy Harris was an active member of the Scuba, Auto and Photo Clubs.

The final lecture in the Derby Academy series, planned by Mrs. George Rabstejnek of Border Street was given May 16 by John Metgzer, director of education of Earthwatch. His program, "Youth in Humanities: A Search for Answers" combined slides, film and commentary on research projects which involved an archeological dig, marine biology study, animal behavior investigation and a volcanic eruption in Mexico.

Margie Knox and Marilyn Adams are Cohasset homemakers and mothers of small children who have become pinata entrepreneurs. They debuted their pinata business with a pushcart full of bunnies, bears, princesses and other characters at Boston's Quincy Market at Eastertime. Margie and Marilyn can create custom orders along with their regular charming papier-mache figures, and are able to produce 50 pinatas a week.

Mrs. John Halloran and Mrs. Donald Woolf recently attended the reception and tea at the Museum of the China Trade in Milton honoring Col. and Mrs. Edmund FitzHugh, who brought to the museum from England the priceless charger which is the only piece of the original FitzHugh blue and white porcelain pattern. Mildred Mottahedeh of New York, who owns the greatest collection of Chinese export porcelain in the world, has agreed to reproduce at her factory a similar platter designed for the Boston wedding of Samuel Cabot and Elizabeth Perkins in 1812.

The Pilgrim Cooperative Bank financed the printing and distribution for a special brochure supporting the Lothrop House restoration at 14 Summer St. The Cohasset Historical Society chose Lothrop House for its architectural excellence, the space it will provide the Society for its extensive collections and archives, and facilities for all historical activities in the community. The Historical Society presently maintains three other buildings which are summer museums, useable only during the warm weather.

Trish Grinnell of the Community Garden Club recently taught a course in flower design for the Flower Show School in Williamstown, sponsored by the Garden Club Federation of Mass.

A colorful new art display is being exhibited in the children's room of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. The art work was done by Miss Flynn's third grade class of the Joseph Osgood School under the instruction of Mrs. Wyman. The display was arranged by Marilyn Hobson of the Friends of the Library.

Martha Gaffey was cast as Ella in the Curtain Call theatre's musical comedy "Bells are Ringing" in Braintree.

Staff Evaluation Committee

The School Committee unanimously voted Monday night to organize a committee to formulate a staff evaluation instrument with written instructions for implementation by the school administration next September.

As proposed by teacher evaluation sub-committee member Frank England, the committee will be comprised of three members from the community with knowledge of evaluation techniques, one member of the school administration, two teachers, and one School Committee member. Committee member Diana Kornet was designated as the board's representative on the committee.

England felt the committee should address objectives, attributes, and the strengths and weaknesses of personnel in drawing up the new evaluation form. Kornet said she hoped to report back to the School Committee by the end of July with the completed form.

Committee Chairman Jack Langmaid said that residents interested in becoming a member of the committee should contact him at 383-6433.

Maloney Arm Wins In Softball

Behind a brilliant two-hitter by pitcher Diane Maloney, Cohasset's softball team blanked East Bridgewater, 4-0 last week.

Maloney improved her season mound mark to 8-3 which is identical with the Skippers South Shore League record.

Shelly Townsend's single scoring Heidi Brown in the third inning collected the first Skipper run, and as it proved, the only one needed.

But in the fourth inning, the Skippers got three more on singles by Heather Fairchild and Gina Froio scoring Lindsay Gilmore and Brown.

Diane Maloney turned in five innings of five-hit pitching wherein she struck out three and walked only two and Cohasset softballers wiped out Middleboro, 18-4 to improve their record to 7-2 last week.

Maloney in addition to her pitching, banged out a double and two singles for five rbi to lead the attack featured by a three-run homer by Liz Gilmore and Jodi Sandblom who collected a triple, two singles and three rbi.

Youths Arrested On Drug Charges

Two Norwood youths were arrested on drug charges at the Junior/Senior High School last week.

Kevin Kampen, 17, and William Fitzgerald, also 17, were charged with possession of marijuana with intent to distribute, possession of marijuana and possession of alcohol, police reported. They were arrainged at Quincy District Court Wednesday morning. The case was continued to June 14.

Patrolman Brian Cogill received a call at noon on Tuesday from the high school concerning youths in a car cruising around the school grounds, Cohasset Police said. Cogill investigated and was informed by students in the front of the school that a white Chevrolet Camaro had traveled around the east side of the building.

Cogill reported that he saw two girls get out of the car in question. He pursued the vehicle and signalled for it to stop. When he approached the car he observed two open bottles of beer in the front seat, he said.

As the operator was showing his license and registration, Cogill said a pipe fell to the floor of the car. He then place both youths under arrest for transporting alcoholic beverages and informed them of their rights.

Cogill said he further observed a cellophane bag in the car containing a brown substance. He radioed to headquarters for a backup unit. When Patrolman David Pomarico arrived, he placed both subjects into his cruiser.

Cogill went to the Vice Principal, Gino DiGerolamo's office, and asked to speak to the girls, both juveniles, he had seen leaving the car. One girl had been on her way to work and was not at the school. The other came to the office, Cogill said.

The latter alleged that the car operator had asked her to buy marijuana. She was reportedly in the process of telling the youth she didn't have any money to purchase the marijuana when she saw the cruiser arrive and she left.

Cogill returned to where Patrolman Pomarico was waiting with the youths. He asked the operator for his car keys, he said, and opened the glove compartment of the Chevrolet where he found nine cellophane bags containing what appeared to be marijuana and some pills. Cogill gave the evidence to Patrolman Pomaric who then took it and the subjects to the station. A wrecker was called to remove the youth's vehicle.

Patrolman Pomarico took the substances to the Forest Hill labs division of the Food and Drug Administration for analysis. Reports on the substances haven't yet been received by Cohasset Police.

DiGerolamo said that the parents of the girls involved in the incident had been notified. The student who had been questioned by Patolman Cogill, he said, received disciplinary action in a two-day detention.

The vice principal further commented that the school has a need for more grounds security. The administration has alerted the gym teachers, he said, to be aware of suspicious activitiy outside and around the school as they often traverse that area going back and forth from the playing fields.

Open House For Scouts

Cohasset Girl Scouts and non-Scouts are invited to attend an Open House at Blue Hill Girl Scout camps Saturday, May 19.

Camp Dorothy Carlton for girls entering grades 2-6 is located on Long Pond in Plymouth, and Camp Favorite for girls entering grades 7-12 is in Brewster on Cape Cod.

Each camp will be open from 11 a.m. until 3 p.m. and families are invited to come, bring a picnic, tour the camp and ask questions. Guides and staff will be present at both camps to be of assistance.

For more information and directions to the camps, please call the Council Service Center at 472-5960.

Annual Spring Flea Market

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold its annual Spring Flea Market on the grounds of the Lothrop House at 14 Summer St. Saturday, May 19, from 9 to 2.

Offered for sale will be a wide array of donations to the Historical Society over the winter, including a variety of bric-a-brac and collectibles, furniture, cookware, books, jewelry and knick-knacks. In addition to the material assembled by the Historical Society, a number of dealers will offer their specialty items. Refreshments will be available.

Proceeds of the sale will go to the Historical Society to help support the operation of its three Village Museums and other historical enterprises.

LAUGELLE COMPLAINS

Selectman Rocco Laugelle complained for the third week in a row about the junk, paper and debris he finds cluttering the back of stores at Cushing Plaza.

Selectman Arthur Clark said that he has mentioned the problem to Fire Chief Charles Piepenbrink, but suggested that the Board of Health and the Building Inspector also be notified.

THE MOST EXCITING PART OF YOUR EUROPEAN VACATION COULD BE THE BMW YOU BRING HOME.

Buying a BMW in Europe affords you the rare opportunity to challenge both the world's fastest highways and some of the most tortuous roads ever conceived.

And, at the same time, it makes your BMW a little more affordable. Because you save money on the BMW you buy as well as on the rental you don't need.

If you'd like to take advantage of our European Delivery Program, phone us and we'll explain it in detail.

Edition 24 Of Arts Festival

The 24th Annual South Shore Arts Festival will be held from June 30 through July 8 at the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset.

The juried show includes the categories of oils and acrylics, drawings, prints, watercolors, pastels, sculpture, photography, and original crafts. there will be a $100 cash prize for each category.

The painting, sculpture, and craft jurors are Dr. Stephen B. Andrus, Ms. Marilyn Hoffman, and Mr. William Wyman. Dr. Andrus is the director of Impressions Workshop and Impressions Gallery in Boston.

Ms. Hoffman is the director of the Brockton Art Center-Fuller Memorial, having served as Curator from 1971 to 1973. She has been associated previously with the museum of Fine Arts, Boston, Brown University, and the Metropolitan Museum of New York.

Mr. Wyman, a well-known potter who has exhibited all across the United States and Europe, is currently on the faculty of the School of the Museum of Fine Arts. His work is in the permanent collections of many museums and universities, including the Smithsonian Institution, Mass. College of Art, Museum of Contemporary Crafts, New York. In Boston, Mr. Wyman's work is shown by Impressions Gallery.

The photography jurors are Mr. Peter Anderson and Mr. Michael Weymouth. Mr. Anderson is a widely traveled photo-journalist whose career started during World War II with the British Army film unit in Malta and West Africa. He has worked in the Middle East, South America, Central America, and the Caribbean. His work has been used in Time, Life, and The Saturday Evening Post.

Mr. Weymouth is a graphic designer, specializing in annual report photography and design. He has won many awards for his work, including the Hatch Awards in Boston, and the Boston Advertising Club Art Director's show. His work has also been chosen for the Mead Library of Ideas.

Artists who wish to exhibit can obtain entry forms at the South Shore Art Center at 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset. Works should be delivered to the Art Center on Thursday, June 7th from 7 - 9 p.m., or Friday, June 8 from noon to 4 p.m.

A new feature to the Festival is the 1st Annual Student Film Festival to be held on July 7th at the Cohasset Town Hall. Entries will be accepted in 16mm and super 8 film and will be divided by age (grades 1-6, 7-9, 10-12). Films should be brought to the art Center on Saturday, June 9th between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Student Film Festival jurors are Ms. Gail Banker, who teaches film Animation at the Cambridge Center for Adult Education, and Ms. Stacey Bressler, Field Coordinator of Media Services for Mass. Educational TV.

The festival will be held at the South Shore Art Center this year, not at the Cohasset Common as in previous years. This is due in part to the expense of renting tents. It is hoped that the 25th Anniversary Show will be back on the Common next year.

For further information contact the Art Center at 383-9548.

Obituaries

Frances Downes

A funeral Mass was celebrated Monday in St. Anthony's Church for Frances Downs, 95, who died Thursday at the Ripley Road Nursing Home after a long illness.

A life-long resident of Cohasset, she attended Cohasset schools and was a graduate of the Chandler School, Boston.

Before her retirement 50 years ago, Miss Downs was employed as a secretary in Boston.

She was a member of the Cohasset Historical Society, the Cohasset Women's Club, the Womens' Republican club of Norwell, and was a charter member of the Amateur Gardeners' Club of Cohasset.

She leaves by a sister, Eleanor T. Downs of Cohasset; and several cousins.

Burial was in St. Paul's Cemetery, Hingham.

Testimonial Set For Paul Cifrino

The recent retirement of long-time food and nutrition spokesman Paul Cifrino as executive director of the Mass. Retail Food Ass'n. has prompted friends and colleagues in the food industry to honor him with a testimonial dinner May 22 at the Woodland Country Club, Newton.

Cifrino who had been executive director of Mass. Grocers, which represents every major food retailer in the Commonwealth and about 1000 small, independent retailers since 1974, has been associated with the food industry all his life. From 1945 to 1967, he was president of Supreme Markets which became part of the Purity Supreme supermarket chain, and Cifrino became chairman of its board for two years.

Between 1970 and 1975, Cifrino served with the U. S. AID program in India as chief of the food and nutrition division, in the nutrition department of the Harvard School of Public Health and as executive director of the Carroll Center For The Blind.

A Harvard graduate, Cifrino has been retail food industry liaison to the White House Conference on Food and Nutrition, director of the National Food Chain Association and the Supermarket Institute and has lectured and written extensively on food marketing and nutrition.

Presently, Cifrino teaches a course on food and nutrition at the Boston Center for Adult Education and serves, by appointment of the governor, on the Massachusetts Nutrition Board and as a board member of the United Nutrition Education Foundation.

Cifrino resides on Jerusalem Road.

Portuguese Festival At CCC

Saturday, May 19th will bring the Portuguese Festival to the Community Center for its First Annual Fete.

Beginning at 10 a.m. there will be games and pony rides for the kids, craft tables and a flea market with many members setting up their own tables. Lunch will feature a Portuguese grille with wine and beer to be served throughout the day.

Entertainment in the afternoon will include a movie featuring Portugal and Portuguese folk dancing will be performed on the Common by the Encantos Folcloricof in native costume.

In the evening a Portuguese dinner will be served and the folk dancers will perform for the diners. After dinner raffle winners will be announced with some of the top prizes being two seasons tickets to the Music Circus, dinner for two at many of Cohasset's fine restaurants and over 10 pounds of lobster donated by Cohasset's own lobstermen.

Art Signup Time

Enrollments are now being taken for an outdoor Painting Workshop with well-known Artist Rosalind Farbush on Saturday, May 19th through the South Shore Art Center at 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset.

The one-day session will begin at 10 a.m. and end at 3:30 p.m. with a break for lunch. Students should come prepared to paint in their choice of medium suitable for outdoor work. Ms. Farbush will both demonstrate and critique the student's work stressing color, form, technique and composition.

Rosalind Farbush has exhibited at Boston City Hall, the Concourse Gallery, Brandeis University and has won awards for many years in the Boston area. She teaches at the School of the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston as well as teaching College Credit Courses at the South Shore Art Center.

For further information on this workshop and other Center offerings, call 383-9548 Monday through Friday between 12 - 4 p.m.

Last Derby Lecture Program

On Wednesday, May 16, the fifth of the Derby Academy Lecture Series will be held at 8 p.m. in Sarah Derby Hall at the Academy. This final program will be presented by Earthwatch, a nonprofit organization which combines scientists, scholars and lay volunteers in the adventure of field research.

To date, expeditions have involved 300 scientists in forty five countries and twenty states, conducting health and medical investigations, marine biology explorations, and conservation of natural resources and endangered species studies, among many others.

Wednesday's presentation, "Youth in the Humanities: A Search for Answers", offers slides, film and commentary on research projects from an archealogical dig in Nevada, to animal behavior investigations of the wild ponies of Assateague and Chincoteague to documentation of the eruption of a volcano in Mexico.

The public is invited to attend. Tickets will be available at the door for what promises to be a stimulating introduction to the extensive projects undertaken by the members of Earthwatch.

Election Of Officers At Next Jaycees Meeting

Election of Officers will be held at the next general meeting of the Jaycees on May 15. Nominations for the eight posts will be accepted at the meeting. Announced or nominated candidates include John Pereira for President, John Kinchla for internal vice-president, Tom Cook for secretary, Allen DeVito for treasurer, Mike Equi and Tom Fiore for state director, Larry Cullivan, Mike Quinlan, Peter Trask, Gary Drinkwater and Joe Andrade for the three directors posts. No one has been nominated for the external vice-presidents seat.

The Junior Athletic Championship is scheduled for May 19. John Kinchla has volunteered to direct this program for children ages 8 to 16. The competition will be held at Milliken Field, the High School Track at 9:30 a.m.

Events include the 50 meter dash, softball throwing events and agility run, long jump competition and either a 400 meter or 800 meter run depending upon the age of the child. The competition is open to all children on the day of the event. A birth certificate must accompany all registrations.

The Community Center Portugese fiesta is slated May 19. Jean Salvador is planning a dinner of authentic Portugese dress and foods. Tickets are in short supply. Jean also needs help during the Saturday event to staff flea market tables and carnival games.

The Community Center also recently opened its refurbished bowling alleys.

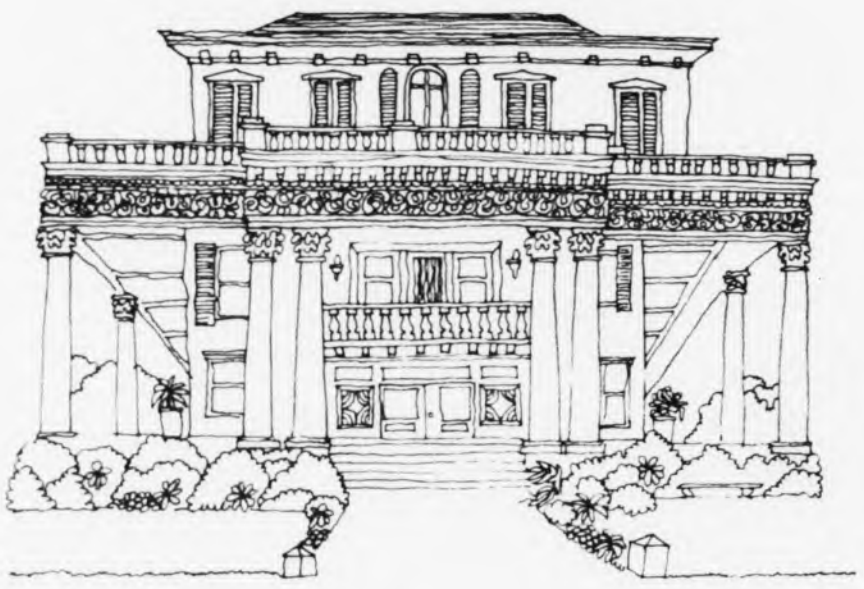
The Mass. Jaycees will run an officers school at Southeastern Mass University. Members from the Cohasset chapter should plan to attend this special and valuable one day affair.

The Scholarship Committee selection process is almost complete. Roy Fitzsimmons, John Kinchla, and Mike Equi have reviewed the scholarship applications of 22 Cohasset students. The number of seniors applying for this scholarship was half of the number from the year before, and the scholarships have doubled in size from last year's $200 — to $400. Roy Fitzsimmons will make the award later this month.

Allen DeVito responded to the Cohasset Courtside Clubs idea the community should do "something special" for the Town's Championship High School Basketball Team. Allen asked the Jaycees to buy a felt banner with the words "1979 State Semifinalists" to be hung from the ceiling of the Sullivan Gym.

The Jaycees also sent Camp Lincoln Hill another check for $100. So far this year the Cohasset chapter has donated $500. to the camp for non educable youngsters.

Welcome Wagon Lunch



The Scituate-Cohasset Welcome Wagon Newcomers Club will hold their Installation Luncheon on Monday, May 21, 1979 at the Greenhouse Restaurant in Cohasset from 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Any member interested in attending can call Carolyn Horn (383-1645) ro Janet Herring (545-52245). There will be babysitting available at the Community Center for $1. per child. Reservations for the luncheon must be made by calling Judy Volungis at 383-0752 by May 14.

There are a limited number of tickets available for the Boat Cruise on June 2 from 8:30 p.m. to 11:30 p.m. at $15. a couple. Anyone interested in going call Sandi Bieryla (383-1543; or Meri Wehe (545-0060). The boat will depart at 8:15.

Marchers Wanted

The George H. Mealy Post 118 of Cohasset is requesting daughters or granddaughters of veterans wishing to march in the Memorial Day Parade as flower girls to please contact Jill Pattison, 383-0372.

Most banks give loans to people who don't need them.

At South Shore, we figure that if you've got a home and you want to increase the value of that home with a bit of improvement, you're probably just the kind of customer we like having.

So, we're fast. In many cases, we can have your check for you within 24 hours. Our rates are good. And while you're here, ask how you can save a full percentage point off any loan over $1500.

That's a good deal for you and a good deal for us. Because even when you no longer need a loan, you'll still need a bank. And it's a pretty sure bet that the bank you stay with will be us.

A Tribute To Mary Jeanette

State Rep. and former Selectman Mary Jeanette Murray was toasted (and roasted) Sunday night for her contributions to Cohasset at the South Shore Country Club in Hingham.

Mary Jeanette said she was "surprised, very humbled and pleased" at the attendance of 300 friends and constituents. And rather than solely accept the praises bestowed her, she deferred them to her husband Philip and to the memory of her father, the late Nate Hurwitz of Hull.

Jack Conway emceed the orations which capped a fine roast beef dinner. Rev. Charles Keohane, pastor of St. Anthony's Church in Cohasset, gave the invocation, and James Driscoll of Hingham, administrative assistant to the governor led the Pledge of Allegiance to the flag.

Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark, described by Conway as Mary Jeanette's "oldest, sometimes adversary, but always friend" was the first to give verbal honors and highlighted their humorous moments spent together as Selectmen during the last nine years.

He related the story about the time they went to check on the suitability of the mud flats as a clam breeding area. Mary Jeanette had borrowed a pair of boots for the occasion from the Fire Department, and unbeknowst to her, they leaked. Clark claimed he

Apartment Plan Draws Mixed Revie'

The proposed conversion of a single family home on Sohier Street to four apartments brought mixed reactions at a hearing before the Zoning Board of Appeals Tuesday night.

The eighteen room house at 205 Sohier Street, owned by Thomas and Ruth Payne since 1973, comprises 5714 square feet and is from one to two and a half stories in height. According to the Paynes, a servants cottage attached to the main house by a roof and walkway has been rented for over 20 years. The 39,000 square feet of area needed for the conversion under the town's bylaws could be met my merging another lot with the one containing the house, the Paynes said, and a parking area could accommodate eight cars.

The Paynes further stated that the sewage system is equipped to cover two homes with 14 rooms and 10 baths. Impact on neighbors would be minimimal and exterior changes to the house would be slight, they said.

A special permit was sought for this conversion, the Paynes concluded, as they had reached retiremer sta s, had been unsuccessful in selling the house since 1977 and would find themselves in a hardship to continue living there.

A question of whether a request for a variance should have been registered was raised by Board member Myrna Putziger. She noted that one of the proposed apartments was situated on the third floor and cited the bylaw area regulation which prohibits a full dwelling unit above the second floor.

Despite the drizzles Saturday, Cohasset's Portuguese Festival drew a good crowd. Among those w ame away pleased were Amanda Holthaus, left, luxuriating with cotton can nd eight month-old Adam Donovan who feigned bordom for photographer Greg Derr.

A Dump Is A Dump Is A Dump

By Judith Epstein

"Today's treasure is tomorrow's trash," the slender smiling man said to his visitor at the place where Cohasset residents throw their refuse. "And remember, this is just a dump," he added.

Joseph ("Skinny") Laugelle is the dumpmaster of the Cedar Street dump, which in recent years may have been lablelled 'recycling center,' 'sanitary landfill,' 'solid waste disposal,' and a number of other terms designed to unpollute the term dump.

However, Laugelle (a.k.a. 'sanitary engineer') rightfully adheres to calling the 43 acre trash drop-off spot what it is — a dump. It is a smelly and messy place, but the best dump around according to Laugelle. And it serves all of the town, as there is no municipal solid waste collection system in Cohasset.

On a busy weekend as many as 1500 cars may visit the dump per day. "People like to come and talk, but as for cocktail hours up here, there are none," Laugelle quickly assured. He noted that a pleasant aspect of his job is the many friends who drop by his office to say hello after using the dump.

The dump's facilities include a regular pit where household rubbish is thrown, as well as areas for bulky refuse, and building, commercial and demolition wastes. There is also a recycling center where glass and paper are collected.

The pit is compacted by bulldozer every day. "Rubbish is supposed to be covered every night by six inches of compacted fill," Laugelle said. "In order to have a proper landfill, we should have our own fill on site," he commented. As it is 75 per cent of the town dump land is ledge and fill has to be hauled in from Sylvester Ray Enterprise in Marshfield.

Although Laugelle contends that Cohasset has a "good dump" he has his gripes. He was upset the day the Mariner visited because of the "bad wind" that was blowing paper around. Loose papers concern him because they contribute to a violation of state health regulations.

According to a study done by SEA Consultants in 1977 the dump is not in compliance with rules and regulations set by the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE).

"What can you do?" Laugelle asked. "We're very high. If any amount of wind blows, it's almost impossible for people to dump in the pit." The proposed study includes in its recommendations the installation of portable or snow fencing at any disposal area in use.

"Trash is the nation's number one problem," Laugelle said. "The town

Memorial Day Parade Steps Off Monday

The annual Cohasset Memorial Day parade will form in front of the George H. Mealy Post 118 on Summer Street at 8:15 a.m. Monday. The procession will visit the town's cemeteries and honor rolls to pay respect to those who died in service to their country.

Veterans, the high school band, the legion auxiliary, Girl Scouts and Brownies, Boy Scouts and Cub Scouts, the Deer Hill School Band, a marine firing squad, and the Fire Department serving as the color guard are all expected to march. Stephen Wigmore, parade coordin-is going to be forced, as well as other towns and counties, to go into regional incineration systems."

"You'll never see Cohasset go into a rubbish pick-up system," he predicted. "You won't see it here. There are too many private ways and it could leave a mess on the sidewalks and the side of the road. People wouldn't stand for it."

Papers weren't the only thing flying around at the dump. As everyone well knows, "Joe Laugelle's seagulls" frequent the pit, as well. As for their being a health hazard, Laugelle attested, "If you look up at the wrong time they are," in his usual jocular fashion. Seagulls keep the rodent population down, he added more seriously, and exterminators come down from Quincy twice a week.

"This dump is almost rodent free. It would show if they were here, but they don't come out and there are no rat holes. I don't like them, I'm scared to death of them," Laugelle admitted.

Eight years ago, until legislation was passed prohibiting open burning, burning was practiced at the 32 year old dump. The conversion of the site to a covered landfill has brought about a reduced life span of the dump. Both Laugelle and the SEA study foresee approximately another five years of continued filling as currently practiced. Laugelle contended that controlled burning for brush and excess building materials should be allowed even now.

He also feels that people should be forced to recycle glass products and newspapers. "Only about five per cent of people in Cohasset recycle at all," Laugelle said. And those who do, he said, don't bother to separate clear, brown and green glass.

"People should recycle, tie their papers and separate their glass. Public enemy number one at the dump is newspaper and cardboard," he said. The SEA study also recommended the continued and encouraged use of the recycling program.

People are quick to complain to town authorities if there is an inordinate odor from the dump, or it there is too long a wait at the pit, Laugelle commented. What irks him the most is that between five and seven people a week dump their trash outside the dump gate either when closed or after hours.

Laugelle undauntedly goes through the rubbish in the hopes of finding a letter or bill with a name on it. Usually he finds out who left the stuff there and calls them. "I inform they they're subject to a $50 fine unless they come down and clean it up." Ninety-five per cent of the people comply after this tactic, he said, the others were on their way out of town for good when they dumped illegally.

Most residents, however, try to abide by the Board of Health's rules and regulations. Residents who have automobiles registered in Cohasset may use the dump free of charge if their vehicle is displaying a sticker obtainable from the Town Hall. Commercial collectors, and building contractors are subject to a fee of 50 cents per cubic yard of waste with a minimum charge of a dollar payable by coupon. Demolition dumping goes for $4 per cu. yard, and by special written permit of the Board of Health.

Hours for depositing waste material are from 8 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4 p.m. except when closed on Mondays, Wednesdays and all legal holidays.

Although Laugelle, who has been working at the dump for 10 years, insists there is no cocktail activity at the dump, he did admit to having one of the best known Christmas parties around these parts.

"More people got elected by campaigning at the dump than anywhere else," he added. "They're at both gates, in-coming, out-going, and at the pit." It sure is a popular place.

Appeals Hearing

Duncan Payne, the Payne's son, further questioned the need for a variance, but requested the board to consider the conversion proposal under the special permit application, anyway. The matter of the variance was taken under advisement.

Marge Doherty, a realtor, noted that large houses are becoming increasingly difficut to sell and for owners to maintain. "It would benefit the people who would like to stay in Cohasset to have super apartments available," she said. Another real estate agent in town concurred and remarked that Cohasset has been under pressure to offer more apartment type dwellings. "This might relieve some of the problem," she suggested.

Building Inspector and Zoning Officer James Litchfield reminded the assembly that condominiums are allowed in Cohasset within the town bylaws.

Before Board Chairman Robert Booth turned to those in opposition he read a letter from the Board of Health requesting an engineering opinion on the property's sewage system. Engineer Neil Murphy had responded to the request and stated in a letter that he had inspected the two systems and had found no evidence of system failure.

However, Booth said that he had personal knowledge of a failure within the system in the past and wanted further studies conducted. Mrs. Payne mentioned that a doctor had lived in the main house a few years ago and had conducted his offices there. His activities, she claimed, may have placed a strain on the system then, but she defended its current functioning.

Contractor Robert Pape of Sohier Street said that he knew of frequent system overflows at that property before the Paynes purchased it. Neighbor Laurens McClure remarked that he had recent sewage system problems at his home.

McClure said he was concerned about the prospect of four apartments one house away from his home. He advised the Board to consider the possible change in character to the neighborhood the conversion might create, the tax rate impact, the parking situation and the impact on Sohier Street traffic.

was charged with the job of towing her out of the mud.

Another time, he said when she became a grandmother, the Selectmen and the press spent the better part of a weekly meeting looking at her grandson's baby pictures.

Clark apologized for being the type of person who could only think about and tackle one subject at a time. Whereas, he pointed out, "Mary's very remarkable. She can talk about five things at once."

He presented her with a plaque — the resolution voted unanimously at Town Meeting citing Mary Jeanette's nine years of diligent and honorable service as a Selectman and her kindness and concern as a state representative.

John Crowley of Charlestown, along with three other basketball buddies of Nate Hurwitz, recalled the old days of the Charlestown Boys Club where Mary Jeanette tried her best to outshoot the club members, and often succeeded.

State Rep. William Robinson, Republican leader of the Massachusetts House, highlighted Mary Jeanette's "ability to get elected." "She relates to her constituency. She carries that message to Boston very clearly. If ever there is a legislator's Hall of Fame, you'll find Mary Jeanette Murray there."

But above all, he reiterated one of Mary Jeanette's favorite phrases, straight from her days in the Marine Corps during World War II. "There's no such thing as an ex-marine. She's as tough as they come."

William Weeks (a former Republican State Senator) and Charles Humphries of Cohasset, also praised Mary Jeanette's many other contributions, especially her work on housing for the elderly and youth services. Humphries presented her with a caricature enumerating a seemingly endless list of her activities and interests.

Massachusetts Senate President William Bulger wittily attested, "We all love her on the other side of the aisle," even though he noted the Republicans have a place on the vanishing species list.

Mary Jeanette, herself, said she had more than a tough decision to make in not running for Selectman again. However, she promised to be back and to give the business in the old style to Arthur and Henry — from the other side of the table.

"If you need me, you know where I am," she said, per usual.

The committee responsible for the gala were Jack Conway, Ray and Pat Buckley, A.J. Antoine, and Chairman Charles Humphries.

Cohasset Man Arrested

A Cohasset man was arrested last Wednesday by a federal and state drug task force team in connection with possession and intent to distribute large quantities of LSD and other drugs.

Theodore Kelly, 20, of 30 Norfolk Road, was apprehended in Boston with Eric Von Briesen Menken, 32, of San Francisco. Kelly's rented home of three months was searched Tuesday night and a quantity of drugs, including cocaine and marijuana, and $8000 in cash were found. Cohasset police were informed of the search and Lieutenant Charles Stockbridge accompanied the task force to the Norfolk Street home.

Large amounts of LDS, 750,000 tablets, and $40,000 was found in a Dedham safe deposit box registered to Kelly's sister, Nancy Florek, 22, of Dedham. The total amount seized estimated $1.5 million worth of LSD tablets and approximately $100,000 in cash.

Both parties were charged with possession of a controlled substance with intent to distribute. They were arraigned in the U.S. District Court in Boston. Kelly was held in lieu of $25,000 bail and Menken was held in lieu of $75,000 bail.

Indictments from Norfolk County grand jury will be held in Dedham. Further arrests in connection with the case are expected.

AGENDA CLARIFIED

The School Committee voted to list names of staff on School Committee meeting agendas when being considered for reappointment, tenure or any situation.

GATE CLOSED

The School Committee unanimously voted to keep the gate at the Joseph Osgood School playground kept closed 24 hours a day all summer. The Recreation Department will be asked to close off the drive with stanchions.

Supt. John Maloney remarked that little or no activity occurred at the playground in the evenings and didn't see the need to block off the driveway leading there. Committee chairman Jack Langmaid disagreed, claiming that vandalism at the playground was invited by allowing cars to park on the school property.

BOOKS CHOSEN

Two new textbooks were chosen for Social Studies students at the high school this week. They are Rise of the American Nation, at an 11-12 reading level, and Our American Heritage at an 8-9 reading level. About 125 copies of the first and 30 of the latter will be ordered.

Social Studies Department Head Edward Sheehan had been looking for new textbooks all year.

Recreation Report

SPRING RECREATION PROGRAMS

All spring programs are currently filled with the exception of three openings left in the dog obedience and golf classes from 7:30 to 8:30, Monday evenings. If your dog is at least six months old and if you are interested in training him, please call the Recreation Office immediately as classes will begin shortly.

SUMMER '79 SCHEDULE

This summer the Recreation Department will offer the following activities and programs:

—Six-12 year old full day Playground Program.
—Four and 5 year old half day Playground Program.
—Youth Tennis Lessons
—Adult Tennis Lessons age 18 and over —Morning Adlut Tennis age 18 and over —Gymnastics
—Summer Basketball Leagues
—Dog Obedience
—Golf Lessons
—Eight Movies (feature films every week)
—Six Band Concerts on Common
—Special events and trips

A six-page flier depicting all programs, activities and events will be available at the Recreation Office during the second week of June. The flier will also be handed out to school children.

Due to the success of the Summer Playground Program for 6-12 year olds, the department will institute a four and five year-old, half day, (9 a.m.-12 noon), program this summer as a supplement to the regular program.

In order for this program to be a success, we will need support from parents, and would request that each mother with a child in the half day program, volunteer a minimum of one morning per week to help out with activities. Also, we would like to see junior and senior high school students, who enjoy working with young children and would like a supervised experienced doing so, volunteer a few hours per week to help out. Volunteers may call the Recreation Office for details.$

Not unlike the six-12 year old program, the four and five year olds will be offered a variety of low-organized games, group activties, arts and crafts, team sports, and many special activities, geared to their age level.

The program will be structured and offer the widest variety and exposure to as many different activities as possible.

Attend The Memorial Day Parade

Will The Voters Have Guts?

By Gilbert Tower

Commentary

Will the voters of Cohasset be sufficiently informed and will they have the guts to attend a town meeting in September and vote to authorize the expenditure of a large amount of money for a sewage system? Briefly, that is the question confronting the town, as the writer now sees it up to this time.

The matter has been delayed and postponed for years. Now the time has come when the town must act. The town's share of the cost will be only 10 percent. 90 percent will be contributed by the federal government and the state. Every year of delay has increased the cost. Therefore, viewed from every angle we must make a decision.

It is not too much to say that the life of the town depends upon having a sewage disposal system. We have become accustomed to the idea that the ground absorbs water. Now that is not true. We are forced to change our thinking on that point. It is true that the ground in Cohasset will absorb water up to a point, but beyond that refuses to percolate. The difficulty is that there is ground water in the soil.

Sewage is mostly water. Water is from rain fall and also from town system of water pipes. Much of it flows into the ocean through street drains. Some of it is piped into houses where there are pipes conducting the water to cesspools and septic tanks. The principle of septic tanks, is that microbes, or bacteria, consume the human waste in the drainage from houses. The human waste is carried to the septic tank in water from waterclosets and the quantity depends upon the number of people who flush the toilets. Water conducted to septic tanks, consists also of so-called gray water from kitchen sinks, lavatories, bath tubs and shower baths.

Most people today do not remember the back-houses, or privies, which years ago sued to be a common sight in the backyard of every house. Their purpose was to dispose of the human waste without the means of water. The disposal process was a dry process. If every domicile where people live in Cohasset could have a privy, or dry system of disposal we would not need any public disposal system so far as human waste is concerned. That idea would be impossible because now-a-days people live close together and there would not be enough land for privies, or back-houses.

For another reason a dry process for disposing of human waste is not practical because now-a-days sewage is mostly water from the flushing of water closets, kitchen sinks, clothes washing machines, bath tubs and so forth. All that water from house drains in former years used to be absorbed into the ground by means of cesspools, or septic tanks, that is to say that the system does not work. Generally speaking the soil in Cohasset refuses to absorb water. The soil will not percolate. That is why we must have sewer pipes to conduct a large quantity of waste water to the ocean. The disposal of human waste in the sewage water is only a part of the system. The disposal is accomplished by bacteria that eat it up, or by circulation of air which oxidizes, like burning it up.

Cohasset's public water dates from 1885. The installation of water pipes in houses resulted in bathrooms and water closets, and resulted in the eliminating of back houses. Bathrooms and flush toilets also destroyed the smell without protest.

They had to live with it. Now-a-days people's noses are so sensitive that the word "sewer" to them has an intolerable odor. That intolerable odor exists only in their imaginations. The writer has visited the Scituate treatment plant and is convinced that there is no noticeable odor. In Plymouth there is a restaurant 200 feet from the treatment plant and no complaints are made.

The writer has been working diligently with the purpose of bringing about a town decision in September. It appears that there is a hang-up somewhere and the intention has been to get the sewage matter off the hook. Between now and September, Cohasset voters must be informed so that they will attend a special town meeting and vote the money needed.

Every voter will be expected to have the guts to see his duty and to do it. By the word "guts" is meant determination, courage and confidence that the decision to be made will be the right decision. It is hoped that this letter will help to bring about a general understanding of the subject by voters.

The writer has been waiting to read a report from Metcalf and Eddy accompanied by an acceptance of the report by the sewer and water commissioners. It now appears that the method for informing voters has been different from the writer's understanding. We are told that the sewer commissioners meet on the first and third Monday evenings of each month and anyone interested was expected to attend the meetings. I have also found at the library voluminous reports by Metcalf and Eddy and a brief summary describing the sewage system proposed.

In the meantime a public spirited citizen has been urging consideration of a dry method of consuming human waste. In the October 1968 issue of Country Journal there is a very excellent article telling all about dry methods of disposing of human waste. It is understood that one such method is called the "carousel, or merry-go-round" method. It has been urged that if that method were to be adopted by Cohasset it would not be necessary for the town to spend a huge amount of money. The writer does not see it that way, for this reason: there is much more to the problem than the disposal of human waste. There is a large quantity of gray water to be disposed of also.

Now the life of the town depends upon a public water service. Kitchen sinks and clothes washing machines mean that a lot of water must be conducted to somewhere. Privies, or dry methods like them would not be sufficient. They would not get rid of the wastewater. The proposed sewer system will dispose of both waste-water and human waste.

The dry method would not do that. Therefore it does not seem that the whole matter should be delayed to investigate the "carousel" idea. The engineers know all about that and it is understood they took it into consideration.

Right now the hang-up is that abutters interpose objections to every location proposed for the treatment plant. It is believed by the writer that their objections are based on misunderstanding. They would have no reason to be aggrieved because of any imagined effect of a treatment plant upon the values of their properties to themselves, or others.

Therefore the objections by abutters should not be permitted to stand in the way of a very important project. If abutters persist in their opposition the town should be ready with an article in the warrant to impose the procedure of eminent domain by which the properties of the abutters would be taken by the town to remove the objections. It would be painful to do this and hopefully it would not be necessary. Probably the objecting abutters will be convinced that a treatment plant near Whale Meadow would not be harmful to them. The proper place for the treatment plant will be in the meadow space between Bellamine House and Great Neck upland, meaning house lot properties south of Whiteheads Roads.

That area of filled marsh is now grown up with small trees. The next thing should be the preparation of a map showing where a treatment plant should be placed and how large it should be. Besides having no odor it would be noiseless and unobjectionable in appearance because it would be screened by trees. The town should own that marsh which was filled some

FORD ASSISTS

Hingham Town Counsel George Ford will act as a special assistant to Cohasset in the Civil Service dismissal case of former patrolman Douglas Smith. Town Counsel J. Blake Thaxter declined to serve as the town's attorney as he had represented one of the key witnesses in the case on a private matter in the past.

RATES DECIDED

At Town Counsel's advice, the Blue Cross/Blue Shield rates to go into effect for town employees will not include maternity benefits for individual female policy holders, for the time being.

A recently passed federal law allows individual female policy holders to obtain maternity benefits. Although not yet case tested it was the opinion of the company's representative that the town could be held liable for maternity expenses not made available to individual policy holders.

Individual rates will increase from $39.52 to $40.54 and family premiums will increase from $99.82 to $107.02 monthly.

PROPANE STUDY

School Supt. Dr. John Maloney requested Selectmen to allow a joint engineering study with the School Department to determine whether or not it is feasible to convert all the town buses and vehicles from gasoline to propane.

Maloney said that the School Committee would be willing to share the expense of such a study which will determine the conversion costs. He added that the study should project further savings for the town.

Maloney requested that Selectmen seek cost proposals for the study so that he could present them to the School Committee

ENERGY STUDY

In another letter from Supt. Maloney, the School Committee's wish to fill the outstanding vacancies on the School Facilities Committee was outlined. The School Committee plans to meet with the newly constituted Committee and ask that they conduct an energy study of the existing school buildings.

"Due to the fact that engineering and architectural expertise will be necessary in the consideration of solar heat and other means to conserve energy, we ask that some consideration be given to appointing persons with this background," the letter stated.

SALVADOR COMPLAINS

Robert Salvador of Atlantic Avenue complained to Selectmen once again last week about parking and drinking near Wadleigh Park in the area in front of Black Rock Beach, the land which abutts his property. Salvador felt that surrounding towns were more strict that Cohasset in the enforcing of the new drinking age and drinking in motor vehicles.

The parking problem outside his home seems to becoming worse now that summer is on the way, he explained. He complained of late night noise and litter from the parked cars. "I'm entitled to peace. It's a residential area. I just keep coming down here and nothing gets done," Salvador said.

He claimed that Town Counsel was supposed to have made a ruling some time ago about the legality of closing the extension from Forest Avenue where most of the parking violations occur. "I can't put up with it all summer," he said. "Put a policeman down there or I will go to court."

Selectman Arthur Clark agreed that cars aren't supposed to be parking in the area at all. Selectmen decided to ask Police Chief Randolph Feola to attend the next meeting to discuss the matter.

TRANSFER APPROVED

John and Mary Muncie of South Main Street were allowed a transfer of liquor license for Cohasset Harbor Liquor store. No objections were voiced for the transfer to the new owners. The licenses issued were for seasonal all alcoholic beverages and for year round wine and malt.

JUNE MEETINGS

Selectmen will hold meetings semi-weekly for the summer months. Next month's meetings will be June 6 and 13.

LITCHFIELD ASKED

Zoning Officer James Litchfield will be asked to attend the next meeting of Selectmen to discuss the cease and desist order he issued Wayne Sawchuk for stockpiling stone and gravel in a residential area.

Sawchuk claimed the stockpiling wasn't intended for filling wetlands on that property, his mother's home on Route 3A, and that such activities were in practice there prior to zoning bylaws.

CLEAN-UP WANTED

Jack Hubbard, Chairman of the Conservation Commission, requested CETA help to help clean up the Cohasset side of Straits Pond. Selectmen took the matter under advisement.

Jackson Patrolman

Selectmen last week appointed Robert Jackson of Ash Street to the position of permanent patrolman with the Cohasset Police Department. Jackson was scheduled to start work Sunday.

Jackson was the second person on the Civil Service list eligible for the position. He received a 92 on the Civil Service exam (five points were for veterans preference).

Jackson will graduate this spring from Northeastern University with a bachelor's degree in law enforcement. He already holds a B.A. in political science and has worked toward a master's degree in law enforcement. He has worked as a security officer at Osco Drug in Dorchester.

Paul Rooney, a patrolman in Yarmouth and the first candidate for the job, had indicated to Selectmen several weeks earlier that he wanted the maximum salary of $13,662 for the position, not the minimum $12,762. Rooney, however, had signed the Civil Service form accepting the lower figure during his interview, which he requested be held in executive session.

Selectmen wrote to Rooney after the interview to ascertain whether he had decided to accept the job at the minimum salary. Rooney didn't respond to the request within the time he had said he would.

Selectman Henry Ainslie felt that Jackson was the most qualified in both experience and education and remarked that his appointment wasn't made solely because Rooney was unavailable.

years ago by hydraulic dredging of the channel. A town road through that marsh is contemplated in connection with the dredging of Whale Meadow for boat moorings. That is another subject which concerns the same location.

In a letter dated April 24, 1979 the writer sketched out a words a new system of sewer pipping. It turned out to be approximately what Metcalf and Eddy had proposed, as learned from their summary report at the library. For the main sewer pipe there is a natural route down Beechwood St. into Jacob's Meadow and down to the meadow between the Yacht Club and Whale Meadow. That route would be mostly easy digging with a minimum of ledge. The plan suggested either Jacobs Meadow, or Whale Meadow, for the treatment plant, but for some reason which the writer cannot clearly explain Jacob's Meadow is ruled out although acceptable for the present treatment plant for a few more years. A better explanation could be supplied by the commissioners.

That leaves Whale Meadow. That has been repeatedly recommended and is believed by the writer to be the correct location. I hope the town will see it that way so that a decision can be made in September, so as to get the sewage matter settled. I hope to study the matter further but I am bothered by being blind and obliged to have everything read to me. It would help if others would review the situation and find out where the writer is wrong in his conclusions.

It is wished that Metcalf and Eddy and the sewer commissioners would report further to the town and I believe that they are about to do so. It is not to be expected of Metcalf and Eddy that they should conduct a campaign to tell the town what to do. They have a contract listing in detail what they will do for money received. The contract price was $93,000 of which $88,394.69 has been paid leaving $4,605.31 unpaid. There is a complication in respect to step one and step two, discussing them to inform the voters.

The above is the best I can do at this moment. It is hoped that others will speak up and say what they think. There should be enough discussion so that voters will see the situation clearly enough to make up their minds.

The theme of the 5th annual Snappy Sneakers marathon at the Joseph Osgood School was "Everyone a Winner." The marathon focus was changed from a competitive one to emphasing the importance of partaking in and finishing the race. T-shirts were worn with the mascot, a jogging turtle, and the words "I finish what I start." About 400 spectators watched the Ripley Road course, which had the cooperation of the fire and police departments, school staff and volunteer parents.

Kristen Westerhoff, daughter of Mrs. Loret Westerhoff of Summer Street was chosen to be a member of the Colby-Sawyer College Key Association. She is a freshman in the liberal arts program and was selected for her enthusiasm for the college, congeniality and responsibility. Key members conduct tours of the campus, welcome prospective students and parents, and guide college placement officers.

Officers elected at the Community Center's annual meeting were: president, John Doherty; 1 vice-president, John Kuhn; 2nd vice-president, Rocco Laugelle; treasurer, John Conroy and clerk, Kathy Stevens.

The Boosters Award will be presented to one member of each varsity team chosen by teammates at the Boosters Spring Sports banquet held tonight at the High School cafeteria.

Lynn O'Toole, daughter of the Austin O'Tooles of Haystack Lane, was elected a delegate by members of the SE. Mass. Association of Student Councils. Lynn is president of the junior class and as a delegate, she will be a member of the SEMASC policy-making executive board. Other student council members who attended the annual spring convention were CHS Council president David Gunville and representative Ron White.

Lillina Marie Humphreys, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Humphreys of Atlantic Avenue, graduated from Curry College in Milton May 6. She received a Bachelor of Arts degree in Psychology.

Bruce Cameron of Jerusalem Road has been appointed vice-president of E.F. Hutton Co. He is branch manager of the Chestnut Hill office. He is a graduate of Boston University and is a member of the Boston Investment Club, South Shore Playhouse, Inc., the Cohasset Golf Club, the Tennis and Squash Club, and is a board member of teh Cohasset Youth Athletic Association.

Students at the Deer Hill School will be happy to hear that Joanne Magoun, fifth grade teacher, gave birth to twin sons May 15 at the South Shore Hospital. Benjamin weighted in at 7 lbs. 3 oz. and Christian at 6 pounds.

Participants from Davenport Farm on Cedar Street in the Dressage Show at Wheelwright Park were: Leah Pfaffman, who won a blud ribbon, Tina Figueiredo, Consuelo Halloran, Tammy Earnestine, Becky Greenman and Jan Malloy. On the first level, test one, of the Cohasset's Riding Club's dressage event Amy Murphy on Pappy, finished as the Champion. Others were: Marley Rabstejnek, Sheila Ailcox, Susan Cuff, Liz Conklin, Liz James and Lisa Powers.

Navy Ensign George Barsunas, son of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Barsunas of Jerusalem Road, graduated from Officer Candidate School at the Naval Education and Training Center in Newport, R.I. During the 19-week course, Ensign Barsunas studied leadership, management, navigation, communications, naval history, seamanship and the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

The Cohasset Golf Club held its annual luncheon and fashion show to inaugurate the golfing season. The cloths, modeled by club members, were from C. Churchill Ltd. and the pro shop. Nancy Cox made a hole-in-one at the golf club with a 6 iron on the par 3 120-yard fourth hole. Witness to the event were Barbara Grimwade, Rose Gammond and Mary Roy.

Dennis Koval, Cohasset sculptor and artist, attended a reception at the New England Aquarium on Boston Harbor to celebrate its 10th anniversary. A 50 foot mural depicting underwater life designed by Maud Morgan and Clara Wainwright was unveiled at the party.

A son, Taylor Sullivan Devin, was born to Robert and Shiela Devin of Oak Street May 7 at the South Shore Hospital. Grandparents are Mrs. Frederick Sullivan of Pleasant Street and Mr. and Mrs. John Devin of Jerusalem Road.

What a difference a Bilco Door makes!

Here's the way to add new beauty to your home. Replace that wooden hatchway with a modern, all steel Bilco Door. It's ruggedly built, weather-tight, and so easy for everyone in the family to use! What's more, it will make your basement more secure against intrusion. And it will pay for itself many times over by saving repair and replacement costs.

If your home was built without the convenience of a direct basement entrance, ask us for Bilco's new handbook "How to Add Valuable Living Space to Your Home."

Stop in and see our display. We'll give you free literature on how to do it. Or, we can suggest a man to install it for you.

Community Center News

FLEA MARKET

Those who missed out on the fun of last Saturday's Portuguese festival will still be able to share in some of the same in the way of flea market tables this weekend before the town's Memorial Day Parade. The Community Center will continue its sale of items donated by local merchants for the benefit of the Center's activities.

SUMMER PROGRAMS

The Program Committee is readying a mailing to the Center's memberships, announcing details for a youth summer program. Gymnastics, theatre workshops, and tennis instruction will be offered. The mailing should be received the first week of June.

MUSIC CIRCUS

Jack Doherty, president of the Center and the Board of Directors have announced that the South Shore Music Circus has again come forward with a generous donation for the Center's support and maintenance. This gift is to be used to facilitate the renovation of the utility area of the kitchen.

Friendship Bus Trip

A friendship bus trip to the mountains of Sharon, Vt., has been planned by the local Mormon Church for Saturday June 2.

The bus will leave from the Hingham Chapel, 379 Gardner St., at 8 a.m. and return by 10 p.m. Enjoy a picnic lunch and tour the lovely Visitor's Center at the Joseph Smith Memorial (birthplace of the founder of the church). A barbeque supper will be prepared by the Vermont women. Cost for the bus is $10 plus $6 for two meals.

For reservations, (before May 26) call Mrs. Polly Doggett at 383-1847.

Knoll Gets Treat

The Cohasset Barbershop Chorus performed at the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home last week as part of the Home's observance of National Nursing Home Week.

Bryan Marks, director of the Barbershop Chorus, coaches these junior and senior high school students and has developed a delightful repertoire of songs arranged in four-part harmony. Many of the songs were tunes familiar to the residents, who enjoyed hearing them sung in this style of arrangement.

Four of the members of the chorus comprise a Barbershop Quartet and they sang a few selections that included solos and a lively performance from the opera Rigoletto. The chorus brought props along to use as convincing accompaniments to some of their songs.

After singing in the main living room, the Chorus sang their songs in the hallways enabling those residents unable to attend the large group to hear them sing. The singers were pleasant, congenial and eager to meet the residents.

It was a lovely morning for all the residents and as the Chorus was leaving they were invited back to perform again. The students are a wonderful group and brightened up everyone's day.

The Knoll Nursing Home staff extends their thanks to Bryan Marks and to all the members of the Barbershop Chorus for providing a morning of song and laughter, and for helping to make National Nursing Home week a success.

John Leone New Football Coach

John Leone has been baseball coach at Scituate High School since 1973 and will continue in that capacity as well as a business teacher, but he's also the new football coach at Cohasset.

At this point, Leone may continue as Cohasset wrestling coach but probably not as Scituate mat aide and obviously not as Sailor grid assistant.

Leone, who lives in Carver and is a graduate of Norwich Free Academy, his Connecticut home town, and Boston College, is 34. He succeeds Denis Walsh, who re signed after two seasons in order to continue master's studies but will continue his teaching duties.

Walsh in his two seasons compiled a 5-5 record in 1977 and 2-7 last season.

Leone hopes his exposure at Cohasset as an assistant will generate interest and increase the turnout for football next fall.

"I hope the students I know will spread the word and get kids to come out," he said. "I've met a lot of them and had 25 out for wrestling. There's pride and tradition in Cohasset. I've always wanted to coach football and am looking forward to it."

At Boston College, Leone was All-East his senior year as a linebacker and won the Scanlon Scholar-Athlete award.

Opening day of baseball season.

Tracksters Lose To Norwell

Cohasset's girls track team ran into the Norwell powerhouse last week and bowed, 83-35.

The Skippers took their shares of first-place honors but couldn't match the Clipper overall depth.

CHS firsts were scored by: Gurnis, 880, 2:34; Mahoney, mile, 5:39; Clinton, two-mile, 12';24.2; Turner, hurdles, 15:7; O'Brien, long jump, 15-11.

Second place finishes and points came from: Turner, 100 and Burman, high jump.

And thirds from: Clinton, 220; Chisholm, mile and Kennedy, two-mile.

Cohasset Boys Lose To Norwell

Cohasset boys tracksters took the relay, hurdles, high jump, pole vault and shotput but lost to Norwell last week in the battle for other first places and backup points and bowed, 92-53.

Firsts came from: Muir, high hurdles; 17.5; the mile quarter, 48.6; Taylor, high jump, 5-10; Dylan, pole vault, 12 and Collins, shotput, 46-1.

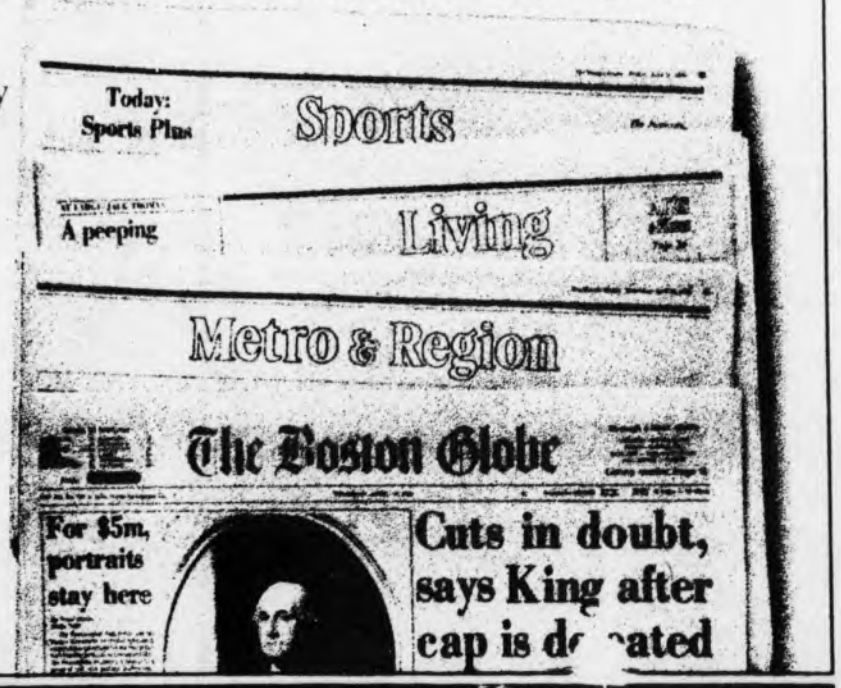
Second place points were supplied by: Tye, 100; Sawicki, 880; Cahill, mile; Taylor, low hurdles; Dyland, long jump; Ellis, high jump; Duffy, triple jump; Collins, pole vault and Collins, discus.

Thirds were provided by: Hawley, 220; Sawicki, long jump; Ellis, high jump and Kelly, discus.

Softball Team Loses To Abington

Cohasset's softball team was unable to improve on a 4-all tie and bowed to Abington last week, 10-4, in a game abbreviated by fog.

Although the Skippers were able to collect only two hits off the Green Wave, they were in the running until the fourth inning when Abington exploded for three runs.



The Skippers record dipped to 9-3.

THERE'S NOTHING MORE REVEALING THAN A NAKED DIAMOND

The diamond you buy should have nothing to hide. That's why you should select your stone and mounting separately. At De Scenza you select your stone before it is mounted, so you will be able to see and compare the brilliance of different stones yourself. Brilliance is the key that unlocks the beauty of a diamond. When it is properly cut, its 58 facets will act like tiny mirrors, reflecting the light and bouncing it back to your eye in a fiery blaze. A diamond that has been cut and polished to the exacting standards will bring out its natural beauty.

School Board Approves Summer Workshop

The School Committee this week approved a summer workshop which will develop a handwriting curriculum for the school system, particularly the elementary grades.

The four week course which will cost $2500 will identify an appropriate handwriting technique to be used consistently in the Cohasset schools. It will develop also a sequential curriculum in handwriting which would be implemented in the elementary grades as well as providing those grades with a checklist for performance.

An occupational therapist/handwriting consultant and teachers from both the Joseph Osgood School and the Deer Hill School will comprise the three professionals in the workshop. Those teachers from the elementary schools will then serve as in-school instructors to implement the handwriting technique and curriculum in September.

Director of Special Education Stephen Hart said that staff had been noticing the difficulty students had been having in forming letters. He felt that the lack of consistent and uniform handwriting education was to blame.

Kenneth Ekberg, principal of the Deer Hill School, said, "This is a felt need. There is not a standard handwriting system in Kindergarten through third grade, through sixth grade, or anything." Ekberg said that occasionally a writing workbook is used at the Deer Hill to augment spelling exercises and doesn't focus primarily on handwriting.

Joseph Osgood School Principal Jack Craemer concurred with Ekberg. "We are lacking uniformity and techniques. Teachers can cast handwriting aside. It has been ignored and children feel it."

Superintendent of Schools John Maloney said that utilizing staff members who will implement the new curriculum in the fall will avoid the necessity of buying into a large handwriting company which would provide services annually.

Several Hundred Attend Portuguese Festival

Despite rain and drizzle, the Community Center's Portuguese Festival shined when several hundred children and adults enjoyed the myriad activities offered last Saturday.

Costumed dancers and musicians wandered through the maze of tables exhibiting scrimshaw, pottery, stained glass, quilts, honey, linguisa, stationery, and much more. Outside a goat sheperd, the Portuguese cock, games, and pony rides graced the Center's grounds.

The barbecue coals were kept afire though the air was dank, and chilled visitors lunched on linguisa, a hot Portuguese sausage served on rolls. Dan Volungus, Manuel Salvador and Jerry Schultz were among the hearty souls who manned the barbecue.

A traditional Portuguese dinner of green soup, chicken, rice, beans, salad and cake dessert was served at the Unitarian Church Parish House thanks to the cooking efforts of Marge Ritter, Larry Figuiredo and Martha Gjesteby; and the hospitality of John Carzis, who allowed the meal to be prepared at Kimball's Motel. Rev. Ralph Enos, originally from Cohasset, delivered the invocation and Burt Pratt emceed the evening festivities.

A special thank you is extended to Jean Salvador and her hardworking committees and to the townspeople for their continuing support. And a special tribute to the three eldest Portuguese people in attendance: Mrs. Maura Mello, Frank Jason and Ellery Sidney; and Lanier Grassie and Edward Barrow, the two youngest.

Shepherd Peter Tolman leads his 'Bonita' to festival.

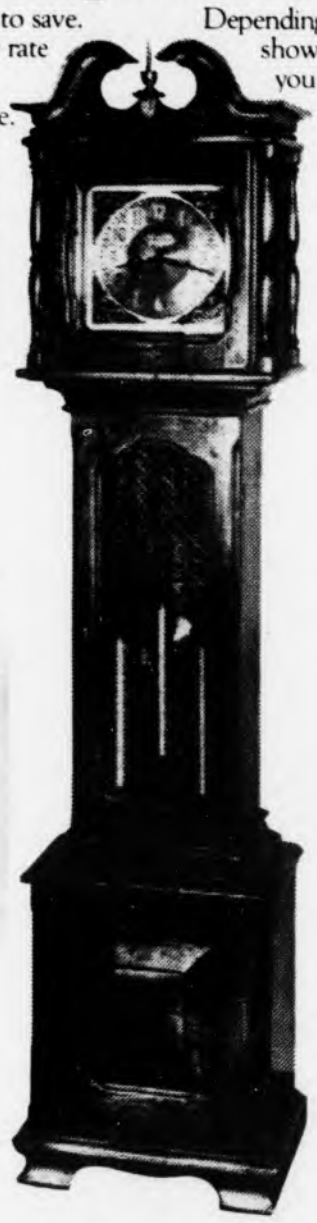
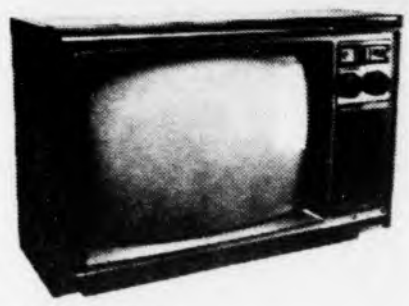
8 of the best savings incentives ever.



7 great gifts plus 7¼% interest.

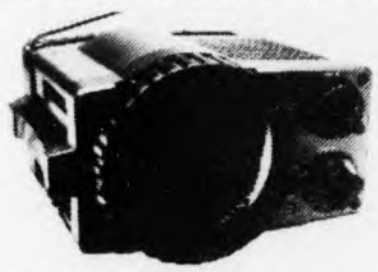


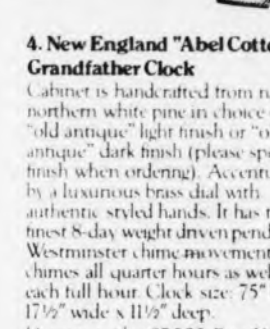
We've never given you greater encouragement to save. Because we're offering seven great gifts plus one terrific rate of interest. (Gifts in lieu of one year's interest.)

Just come in and purchase a Four-Year Savings Certificate.

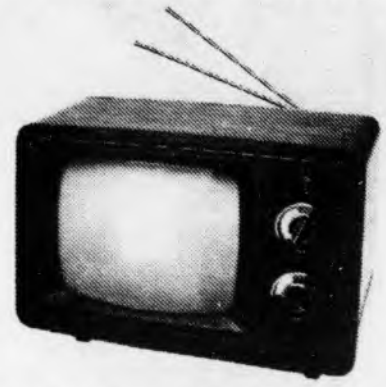
Depending on the amount you save, you'll get one of the gifts shown here. Or, if your Certificate is for a large enough amount, you could get more than one gift. But don't wait.

Get the incentive to save at South Shore Bank.





1. Magnavox 19" Color Portable TV
The automatic fine tuning will give you accurate, bright, and clear color on both VHF and UHF. It comes in a beautiful walnut finish that makes this TV an attractive piece of furniture in any room.
It's yours with a $5,000 Four-Year Savings Certificate.



2. Sharp® Microwave Carousel™ Oven
No other oven cooks as evenly as the Sharp. Because like a rotisserie, the Sharp Microwave actually rotates your food automatically while cooking. So you get a perfect meal every time, the easy, speedy and totally convenient way.

Employe Status To Remain, Thaxter

Town Counsel J. Blake Thaxter ruled last week that the special municipal employe status designated to many town officials in 1962 should remain in effect. Selectmen had questioned the applicability of that status today and asked for the ruling.

Thaxter said in a letter to Selectmen that the special status was made by the then board to maintain some uniformity with other towns. "In my opinion it would be inappropriate to now change the designations," he said.

Prior to the action being taken by the then Selectmen, Thaxter explained, many meetings were held by the state Town Counsel Association and determined which boards would be special and which would not. Special municipal status exempts town employes from certain sections of the conflict of interest law.

It was agreed by the town counsels, Thaxter said, that a list of the newly Seventy-nine Atlantic Trust developers are seeking the final approval to install a multiple disposal system — the first of its kind in Cohasset — at their breathtaking 18-acre property overlooking Sandy Cove.

The application and granting of a special permit for the proposed multiple system with the Board of Appeals hasn't been an easy road for the trsut for many reasons. Their final decision is still forthcoming.

Since plans to develop the former Elizabeth Bigelow Estate were first submitted in October 1978, permission from the Planning Board to subdivide and approval from the Board of Appeals, the Conservation Commission and the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering to install a new water main, two fire hydrants, gas service and resurface the existing driveway came rather easily.

However, the multiple "cluster" disposal system to be constructed in the flood plain and watershed protection district raised various new questions for the Board of Appeals to consider. Again the Conservation Commission, the Board of Health and the DEQE also have to approve the system;tentative approval from each of these boards has been given. The official written approval from State Engineer Thomas Clority of the DEQE and the Board of Appeals' final decision are holding up development at 79 Atlantic Ave.

Among the most controversial of the system's aspects is the precedent it would be setting for the town. The communal leaching field which would be near the existing driveway, is five times the size of one field, thereby accommodating all the homes on a common system. Individual leaching fields for the homes have also been tested.

Wayne Sawchuk, principal member of the trust, said at a recent Conservation Commission meeting that multiple systems have been successfully used in Sherborn and Sudbury. He said it would be the most practical system for the area because it would facilitate easy tie-in with public sewering which he predicts will come down Atlantic Avenue.

Sawchuk, who with Douglas Purdy and Glen Pratt, own the property, didn't feel that precedent setting was at issue at all because the system conforms to the state sanitary code and the Cohasset Board of Health regulations. The proposed leaching area has the percability to support five homes, he said, and it is not subject to flooding or wave action. The percolation tests were performed by Robert Crawford of EET with Health Agent Kevin O'Brien.

Furthermore, Sawchuk was convinced no pollution would reach Treats Pond or the bathing beaches after the Conservation Commission engaged John Modzelewski, physical engineer with Civil Designs Inc. of Boston, to further review the site. Modzelewski suggested, and Sawchuk agreed to fill the expansion area because it would obviate the need for disturning the road to provide a buffer to the area in the future and insures adequate leaching area.

How liability for the maintenance of the common system would be divided has also been heard as a question of concern. An association of homeowners has been formed to allow for the maintenance of the system as installed, according to Sawchuk. All owners of the property are collectively reesponsible for the installation, maintenance and repair of the system.

O'Brien doesn't see any problems with the proposed disposal system or the association, Sandy Cove South Association. O'Brien said the system, although he finds failure unlikely, would usually show signs of failure at the point at which the system goes wrong. If something fails, it would show quickly, he said.

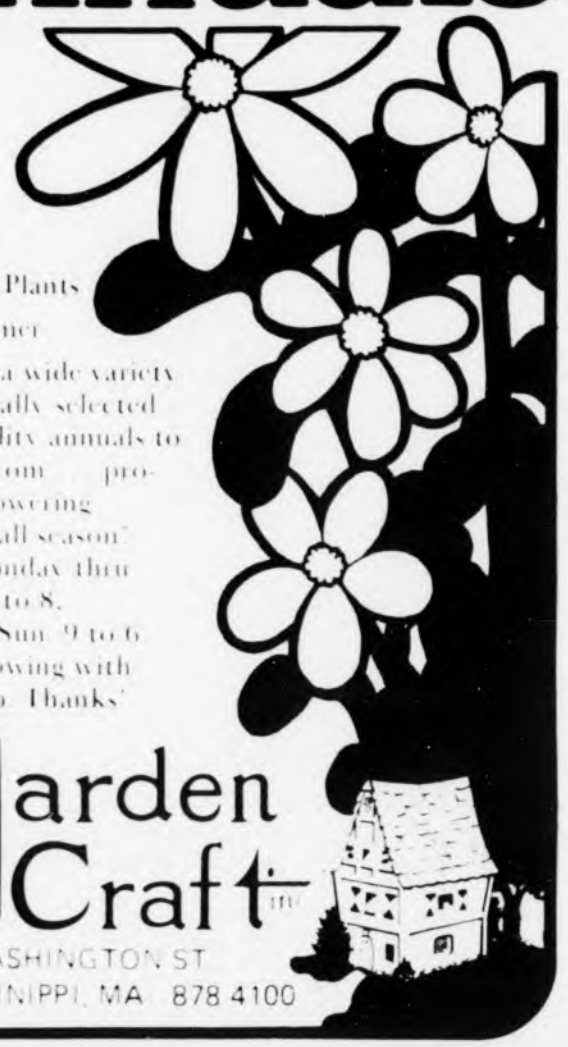
O'Brien finds the cluster system a good precedent for Cohasset if there is good soil and area. But, he added, there aren't many places in Cohasset that can show good soil. As for the percolation tests at 79 Atlantic Ave., O'Brien added, "It's good stuff."

Treats Pond is ditched and then piped underground where it finally empties into the ocean, O'Brien said. The closest area to open water from the leaching area is 80 feet, far enough away to dispell fears of pollution.

Although O'Brien agrees with Sawchuk that the one large leaching field will reduce the number of trees that would have to be cleared to individual systems, he acknowledges that it would cost less to do it this way and be easier to maintain. If individual systems were installed, he said, they would have to be on the lot, within 10 feet of the property lion and involving a lot more area.

Awaiting is the Board of Appeals' final decision, pending coordination of the approval of all concerned. Sawchuk is anxious that the decision won't come until the end of June, taking up the full 90 days the board has to come to a decision. Every lot is under agreement, he said, but he can't pass papers until he knows the property can be built on.

Studds At Town Hall Saturday



U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds of Cohasset will be at Town Hall Saturday from 3:30 to 5 p.m. to conduct the 11th in his series of open meetings with constituents of each town in his district.

Studds generally discusses issues and problems of national, state and local importance.

classified employes would be submitted by Thaxter to Selectmen. Thaxter noted that most towns had used similar designations, that the then board held several meetings with different persons and department heads from the town before the decision was made, and that if the designation weren't made, many capable people wouldn't have been able to serve the town.

Two members of the Planning Board, Chairman Glen Pratt and Vice Chairman John Bradley were recently exonerated of conflict of interest charges by the district attorney's office under their special municipal status.

Bradley had acted as an agent to obtain a building permit for a lot owner in Cohasset and was alleged to have violated the conflict of interest law. However, the district attorney noted that under the special municipal employe status, Bradley was exempt from the section of the law prohibiting a municipal employe from receiving compensation from acting as an agent or attorney for anyone other than the town in a particular matter in which the town has a substantial interest.

Similarly, Pratt had been questioned in violation of the law for purchasing and developing tracts of land in Cohasset as a business. No evidence was found in this case, as well, that Pratt as a special municipal employe violated the conflict of interest law by participating in any particular matter in which he, his family or business associate has a financial interest.

Town officers classified as special employes include: moderator, School Committee, Board of Health, Planning Board, Water Commissioners, Recreation Commission, South Shore Regional High School Committee, Registrars of Voters, Advisory Committee, special police officers, Auxiliary Police, Civil Defense director, deputy Civil Defense director, assistant town counsel, building inspector, Board of Appeals, Personnel Board, Conservation Commission and harbormaster.

Arbor Day Program

Students at the Joseph Osgood School presented a delightful program to celebrate Arbor Day. Theme of the presentation, directed by Mrs. Sandra Conklin, was a special thank you to the Cohasset Garden Club for its contribution of plantings at the school grounds. Mrs. John R. Hoopes, Jr. created the landscape design.

Children sang Spring songs. The program ended on a festive note with a maypole dance.

Cohasset Garden Club members Mrs. Grace Russell, who initiated the Arbor Day celebration 30 years ago, received a basket of flowers from the children on behalf of the Club.

Class Of '79

We at the Mariner have had occasion to grow fond of the Class of '79. We have been critical at times, but for the most part, we have been cheered by the young people we have come to know...by their essential optimism and what we perceive as their uplifting spirits. We have been especially pleased with those who have worked with us in one capacity or another.

Graduations stay in the mind. We remember our own as if it were yesterday. We recall thinking the middle years — the thirties and forties and beyond — as being an eternity. In retrospect, those years skipped by too quickly. But the joy of commencement remains fixed.

Last year, Rodney Dangerfield spoke at the baccalaureate of Harvard College, and after running through his "I don't get no respect" routine, offered two words of advice to departing seniors.

"Don't go," he said.

We say "Don't go," and we say it because we need you.

Ten years ago graduating seniors faced the prospect of fighting an unpopular jungle war in Vietnam. This year's class enters a world at peace. But there are still challenges and, as Robert Frost wrote, "Miles to go before we sleep."

There is still hunger and poverty around us.There are the loss of resources and wildlife...outmoded methodology and an omnipresent technology that threatens to overwhelm. There is crime and corruption...apathy...disease. There is bigotry. There is the energy crisis which, despite our best protests, looms as a parlous threat that will eventually change the way we live.

The Class of '79 will decide just how those changes will be made.

At commencement, we always look ahead; we hope for something better and that is no different this year. To the seniors who will go, we say congratulations on what you have done. We look forward to what you will do.

Finally, some mundane advice. If June is a month of joy, it is also a time of tragedy. Not a June has passed in 20 years wihout our reading that this son or daughter, a recent graduate of that high school, will never get gray in their sideburns or have a baby of their own. We worry that this June will be no different...that more tragedies will push their way onto the front page.

So some frank advice that you've heard before and will again. If you have been drinking, don't ,drive; let someone else take the wheel. If you are with someone who is drunk, don't ride with them; walk home if you have to. Let the drunk who insists on driving get offended and deal with parental displeasure in the morning.

Finally, stop the drunk from driving if you can. Take his keys and don't give them up. If a temper tantrum ensues, you will know you were right and that tomorrow, when the sideburns turn gray and babies start going to hockey camp, you'll be thanked.

From the Mariner, we wish you the very best.

Commentary

Short Gas Means Substitutes

[Following is a commentary by John Worley, Recreation Director]

As it now appears, this summer may be a difficult one for family vacations, trips and, in general, the pursuit of recreational activities. The essential problem being our demands on gas for both travel and pleasure.

Where it stands to reason we will not be albe to take our trips, drive to our recreational areas or plan to go too far from home as we have been accustomed to, we will turn to our local governments to provide recreational opportunities within the boundaries of our individual towns and cities.

The gas crisis should be a mandate to public officials to offer broad spectrum, multi-interest, and comprehensive recreation programs for all ages. In so doing, citizens are not only afforded an alternative to travel, but town officials will be playing an important role in helping to cut down the volume of gasoline that would ordinarily be consumed in the pursuit of recreation and leisure time activities, hence travel.

Recreation professionals should view the current crisis as a challenge for more comprehensive programming. Traditionally, many summer community recreation programs have been geared primarily to the young. While needs for this type of programming are as important as ever, leisure needs for adults must also be identified and appropriate programming offered.

'Home bound' recreation may take form in a multitude of ways.Structured programs are, perhaps, the matrix of most recreation department offerings. However, as a supplement to the structured programs, it is necessary to offer a variety of special events and activities of anon-continuous nature. In so doing more types of activities, appealing to a broader range of interest groups and ages, can be offered by each municipal department.

Perhaps the concept of 'family recreation' becomes even more important now. This concept simply stated, involves programs that appeal to the entire family i.e. all ages, and offers the opportunity for the family to recreate as a unit, in the same place, at the same time. The advantages of 'family recreation' range from sociological to economical.

Band concerts, movies, fishing tournaments, jogging clinics, golf tournaments and many other family oriented speical activities are the types of activities, of a non-continuous nature, that not only may appeal to the entire family, but can accomodate large numbers of individuals as well as meet the needs of many interest groups.

Local areas for passive recreation must be provide and maintained by each municipality for use by residents. While most towns do have varying amounts of lands set aside for his purpose, there will probably be a critical shortage, in the near furture, for both passive and active recreational lands, facilities, and areas.

Now is the time to plan for our not so distant future needs.

The gas crisis is upon us. It makes little difference of why we are being afflicted by it, all that matters is how we respond to it. The field of recreation is usually the first to feel repercussions from economical stress. It should, therefore, be the field of recreation that responds first to our current problem. It offers a challenge to all of us, Town Officials and residents alike. We must meet the challenge with innovation and positive attitudes. We must remain flexible and seek alternatives to our present life sytles. We are, after all, facing a change in our life style like it or not!

Around Town Hall

Sgt. John Rhodes of the Police Department suggested in a letter to Selectmen last week that the traffic lights at Sohier and Ripley Roads be converted to a flashing yellow light with a push button for pedestrians.

Selectmen approved of the change but want to check first with the DPW about the conversion process.

SPORTSMEN'S CLUB?

Selectmen are requesting the meeting minutes and names of officers of the Sportsmen's Club on Route 3A. The club, which was given permission to use town property, is under suspicion of being used as a tax-free residence. Selectman Arthur Clark is anxious to find out if an organization still exists there.

SCITUATE REMINDED

Selectmen Arthur Clark reminded his board that Scituate officials are due back with further suggestions regarding mutual harbor concerns. Scituate's Town Administrator and Harbormaster two months ago had offered to pay Cohasset one half of the mooring fees of Scituate boats anchored in Cohasset harbor.

Selectmen had agreed to further discuss the matter after Town Meetings were over in both towns, but Scituate has not yet revisited Cohasset. Cohasset officials agreed that a reminder to Scituate is in order. Cohasset would like to share a part of the harbor's upkeep with that neighboring town.

PARKER AVE.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said the ramp to the harbor on Parker Avenue is in need of repair. Laugelle said that the asphalt on the ramp is being torn up from the large hydraulic boom used there to get boats in the water. Laugelle suggested repairing the ramp with cement which would better stand the strain of heavy equipment.

Litchfield To Investigate

Zoning Officer James Litchfield will further investigate possible zoning violations by Wayne Sawchuk at his mother's property at 302 North Main St., as directed by Selectmen last week.

Litchfield issued Sawchuck a cease and desist order two weeks ago for stockpiling stone and gravel in a residential area. Selectmen requested Litchfield's attendance at their meeting last week to discuss the matter. Sawchuck wasn't requested to attend and he did not.

Litchfield said he received a letter from Sawchuck which claimed that the stockpiling wasn't intended to filling wetlands. The letter further stated that Sawchuck would obtain affdavits from neighbors attesting that businesses have been conducted at that property for 75 years and weren't subject ot zoning bylaws.

Litchfield agreed that the stockpiling was not in a wetlands area but was near water. Selectman Rocco Laugelle said he had "heard around" that a brook near the property was being diverted by a pipe. Litchfield said he hadn't observed the brook but that he would look for it and would take photographs of the involved area.

WATER, WATER was everywhere in making best of it were Ian Ewart and Peter Buckley with canine friend who doesn't mind duck pond soaking a bit. Jim Dillon keeps dry on his skateboard with paper canopy as Husky Marishka braves it out. Fisherman on Lily Pond is oblivious to all except the lure of a catch.

Words Of Caution For Gardeners

By Joanne Young

In the last few years, the number of home and community vegetable gardens has rapidly grown. Hundreds of experienced and novice gardeners have taken advantage of the opportunity to grow fresh food on garden plots.

The rewards are substantial in this time of spiralling food costs, and the flavor of fresh-picked vegetables and those canned for future use are more delicious compared to market products.

Government agencies such as the Mass. Dept. of Food and Agriculture offer free advice as do the local garden clubs.

The quality of seeds and the high percentage of those which produce make gardening easier for the novice.

But there is one hazard I recently discovered after fifteen years of successfully gardening home plots. To make seeds resistant to pests in the soil, and to preserve their life before planting, they are treated with permagard or captan-thiram-methoxychlor, trade names for the preservign chemicals. While these have no residual effect on the crop, they are poisonous if ingested as a foodstuff.

As I was saying goodnight to my young son, he said: "Those pumpkin seeds in the package didn't taste as good as the ones you buy in the store." I immediately realized he was talking about the pumpkin seeds I had bought to plant for a colorful fall harvest. I also knew they were treated with diatomaceous earth, a natural insecticide for control of insects during storage.

I called the Poison Center in Boston and was instructed to give him one tablespoon of Ipecac, one glass of water and have him jump up and down to speed vomiting. After an unpleasant experience, he slept well and so did I knowing his stomach was free of any potentially dangerous matter. Although the diatomaceous earth is labeled a non-toxic substance, the poison center believed it to be harmful to a small child. Other seeds, such as hybrid corn, are chemically treated and are dangerous if ingested.

If your child accidently swallows the seeds, the number of the Poison Center in Boston is 232-2120. The staff is competent and concerned, and always available.

Selectmen Weigh Oil Treatment For Park Dust

The proposed oil treatment to keep down the dust on the Wheelright Park riding ring was discussed and taken under advisement by Selectmen last week.

Sally Davenport of the Cohasset Riding Club told Selectmen that after consultation with others who have used the process, the club decided that applications of oil with washed sand would be the best treatment for the riding ring.

Davenport expressed the club's desire to have the ring graded to remove a mound of sand from the middle of the riding area and evenly spread around the ring before the oiling process. She also asked for the town's assistance with the grading.

Selectmen approved the grading as it covers a minimal area and won't affect surrounding land. It was noted, however, that there was no town equipment capable of grading the riding ring.

Selectman Arthur Clark was concerned about the use of oil there and the effect drainage would have on neighboring property.

Davenport said that a state inspector would first examine the ring and would check on all aspects of concern to neighbors. Selectmen withheld their decision until they receive a letter from the engineer.

Clark indicated that he would help in engaging a private contractor with the appropriate equipment to grade the ring in the meantime.

New Police Officer Gets Welcome....And Advice

Newly appointed Patrolman Robert Jackson was congratulated and welcomed by Selectman last week — and given a word of advice for the future.

Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark prefaced his remarks by explaining that the board has been "concerned with some of the things that have gone on in the past" with the Police Department. It was their hope to prevent future troubles, he said, and added that the board wasn't implying the possibility of any problem with Jackson.

Jackson started work with the Police Department last week on the midnight to 8 a.m. shift. He said that he needs further police training and that Chief Randolph Feola is looking into available programs for him. In the meantime, he said, he has been assigned desk duty.

"Look and act. Do things that will earn you the respect of the community," Clark advised. "We want to make sure there are no misunderstandings."

Selectman Henry Ainslie underscored Clark's comments. "We're not going to take any fooling around from anyone. If it takes clamping down, we're going to do it," he said.

Clark continued, "I just hope you're smart enough to avoid throwing snowballs somebody else might make. Just keep your nose clean." Clark said that the Selectmen don 't want to become unduly involved with the Police Department.

"More awesome than the powers of arrest are the people who you arrest," Ainslie counseled. He added that there had been no favoritism involved with the appointment of Jackson as the choice had been made "by looking at all factors."

"We don't expect you to be a saint," Clark said, advising Jackson to watch his off duty conduct. "I don't think the town can stand much more embarrassment."

Jackson thanked Selectmen for the appointment and said "I won't embarrass anybody."

Serigraph Exhibit At Art Center

An exhibit of serigraphs by Nancy Callahan and etchings by Joyce Zavorskas at the South Shore Art Center Gallery will continue on view until June.

The various printmaking processes are explained in a booklet accompanying the exhibit and the Center welcomes group visits by school art classes interested in printmaking.

Both Zavorskas and Callahan live and have studios in Plymouth and are well known exhibitors on the South Shore and in the Metropolitan Boston area.

For information on this and other Center activities, telephone 383-9548 Monday through Friday 12-4 p.m. The Gallery is open the above hours and on Saturday from 10-1.

Selectmen Ask Harbormaster's Presence To Settle Dispute

Selectmen requested that Harbormaster Harry Ritter attend next week's board meeting to settle a dispute voiced by fisherman Gerald Pattison.

Pattison claimed he was denied a mooring for a 30 foot fishing boat although he had applied for a 36 foot mooring eight years ago. He also said that others had gotten moorings ahead of him and that they hadn't been on the waiting list as long as he had. He demanded an explanation.

Pattison now has a 20 foot mooring for his old boat, but has purchased the larger boat which he wants to put in the water as soon as possible, he said, for spring fishing.

Selectmen Chairman Arthur Clark agreed to invite Ritter in to discuss the matter next week but couldn't decide anything about the problem until that time. When Pattison persisted, Clark became annoyed and told him that he shouldn't have dropped in without the harabormaster present and demand answers from those who weren't acquainted with the problem.

William Figuerido, who accompanied Pattison, said that he thought it was unfair for a young man who wants to be a commercial fisherman to be made to wait.

Pattison said he was losing money by not fishing now and wanted to know if he could launch his boat without having the authorities after him. Clark said that Ritter was in charge of the harbor and any violations that occur there.

Harbormaster Ritter said this week, "I go by the waiting list. I don't play games." He declined to say more before this week's Selectmen's meeting.

Rev. Enos Delivered Invocation

The invocation at the Community Center's first Portuguese Festival was delivered by Rev. Ralph Enos, a longtime resident of Cohasset and now serving a parish in the Bronx, New York. Father Enos talked about the virtues and talents of the Portuguese, who have enriched Cohasset and made it a desireable place to live. Mrs. Jean Salvador was chairman of the event.

The choir of the Second Congregational Church will present 'The Pirates of Penzance' by Gilbert and Sullivan at the Town Hall on June 14 at 7:30 p.m. The performance will be followed by a strawberry dessert served in Bates Hall. Members of the choir are featured in the leading roles and in the chorus. The production is under the direction of Ellen Fryling. Joan Kenney is the choreographer and Taffy Nothnagle the chief cook.

A Lasell Medallion was awarded by the Lasell Alumnae Association to Mercie V. Nichols of Cohasset. This award is presented annually to alumnae and friends who have added distinction to the name of the College. The medallions were a gift of Chester Lasell, grandson of Josiah Lasell who was co-principal of the school from 1852 to 1861 and brother of its founder, Edward Lasell.

Miss Nichols studied at the New School of Design, Vespa George School of Art and Columbia University. She has been an art teacher in the public school system and is a founder of the South Shore Art Center. She also opened the first gift shop at the South Shore Hospital. Always active in community affairs, she is a member of the Evening Discussion Group, Cohasset Community Garden Club, Historical Society, Friend of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library and the Second Congregational Church.

MEDALLION award is presented Mercie Nichols by Lasell Junior College Alumni President Nancy Withers.

Navy Lieutenant Daniel S. Keefe, son of Ruth M. Keefe of Cohasset, recently cruised under the North Pole. He is the weapons officer aboard the fast attack nuclear submarine USS Archerfish, homeported in Groton, Conn. His submarine has arrived in Devonport, England, following the two-month voyage that covered nearly 13,000 miles. The archerfish remained submerged for 48 days during the trip and surfaced at the North Pole to enable crewmembers to take a walk on the polar ice cap. The Arctic voyage was made to gather oceanographic information and to maintain the capability of operating submarines in polar conditions. The Archerfish's cruise under the Arctic ice cap coincided with the submarine service's 79th anniversary as well as the 70th anniversary of Commander Robert E. Peary's first visit to the North Pole. The Archerfish is 292-feet long and has a crew of 120 officers and enlisted men. She is armed with antiship and antisubmarine missiles and is designed to seek out and destroy enemy submarines as well as surface vessels. Keefe is a 1968 graduate of Thayer Academy, Braintree, Mass., and a 1972 graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy, with a Bachelor of Science degree.

Exciting Recreation Summer Season, Staff Ready

This summer promises to be an exciting one in Recreation programs, activities and special events. An outline depicting the 79 summer will soon be available.

This year's summer staff is perhaps the strongest and most qualified ever assembled for Cohasset. each individual was employed for a specific purpose from a large field of candidates. Results offer not only well qualified members, but a wellbalanced, multi-skilled, enthusiastic group

Heading the playground staff if Kurt Rever for his second year . He is a teacher at the High School involved with youth and children on a year round basis.

Also returning will be Larry Drago, now a junior at Colby College. Larry brings talents in sports, low-organized games and group leadership.

Pam Gunville, a junior at Southeastern Mass. Universsity, is returning for another year. Pam will be applying her talents in sports and games .

Shelanne Sladen, also returning for her second year, is now a sophomore at the University of new Hampshire. Shelanne has had prior training as a C.I.T. at Camp Daniel Webster and is a Physical Education major at U.N.H. Shelanne's expertices lies in the areas of structured games and activiities and team sports.

Two instructors returning from two years ago are Ann Donovan and Allison Haskell. Ann is now , a senior at Dartmouth and has been with the program since 1974. Ann is a varsity basketball player at Dartmouth and has had a great deal of experience instructing children. She is presently student teaching. Allison, a senior at U.N.H., will be in charge of arts and crafts as she was during 1977. Allison will offer ecology as part of the playground program and will integrate arts and craft projects into study of local environment.

Newest member is Leslie Travers in charge of Special Needs children. A significant concept of the program is to provide a degree of ocntinuity, during the summer months, to children in Special Education programs or have special needs. Leslie, Speical Education major at Bridgewater state College in her senior year, will work with the children in small group settings or individually. The philosophy behind the Special Needs program is to help the children into the regular program as quickly and smoothly as possible. Children with Special Needs are not isolated form our regular program but an intrgral part of the program.

Parents of Special Needs children should consult with Director Jack Worley at registration to discuss needs of the child.

This year the department will operate a half day program (9 a.m. to noon) for four and five year old children.

The program will be held at Osgood. School but will be independent of the 6-12 year old program with its own staff and volunteer force.

The three members of the four and five year old staff are: Christine Riley, Kathryn Anderson and Christopher MacKenzie. Christine is a sophomore at Lesley College majoring in Early Childhood Education and has student taught at the Harvard Law School Day Care Center. Kathryn is a Special Education major at Bridgewater State College and has worked on the school's work study program and as a volunteer worker in a private day car center. Christopher will be gin college this fall and has worked for the Department for three years as head soccer league referee and at Deer Hill Camp School. Chris has taught wrestling to 5th, 6th and 7th graders.

YOUTH TENNIS PROGRAM STAFF: The Summer Youth Tennis Program is staffed with two instructors. Returning for his second year is John Roy, now a sophomore at Trinity College. New is Christopher Nawn, a junior at Colorado College who has taught tennis to children aged 8 to 18.

School Communication Councils Need Parents

If you'd like to know more about the schools than what your child may or may not tell you, the best way is to join one of four Communication Councils - Osgood, Deer Hill, Junior or Senior High Individual councils meet monthly with their school principals to exchange ideas, make suggestions and discuss school programs and problems. Parents serving on the councils gain first hand information concerning school programs while becoming better acquainted with the administration and staff.

Specific activities, in addition to regularly attending meetings, might include planning open house functions, assisting with volunteer programs, preparing newsletters and serving on various subcommittees as such needs arise.

Each council is composed of three to five members for each grade level. The by-laws provide for a consecutive two-year term, thus ensuring participation by more people. Therefore, each year at least one half of each council's membership is lost due to expiration of terms. We are now looking for interested parents to fill these vacancies. The need is particularly great at the Senior High which has had a high rate of attrition. Those who have served on a council may again be eligible after a year's absence. In addition, anyone not serving as a council member may, nevertheless, serve on a subcommittee.

Only with your help can there be better communications between schools and the community. If interested in volunterring obtain a blank at the Office of the Superintendent, 143 Pond Street.

Leone Picks Up Skippers, Takes Grid Coach Reins

John Leone has been baseball coach at Scituate High school since 1973 and will continue in that capacity as a business teacher, but he's also the new football coach at Cohasset.

At this point, Leone may continue as Cohasset wrestling coach but probably not as Scituate mat aide and obviously not as Sailor grid assistant.

Leone, who lives in Carver and is a graduate of Norwich free Academy, his Connecticut home town, and Boston College, is 34. He succeeds Dennis Walsh, who resigned after two seasons in order to continue master's studies but will continue his teaching duties.

Walsh in his two seasons compiled a 5-5 record in 1977 and 2-7 last season.

Leone hopes his exposure at Cohasset as an assistant will generate interest and increase the turnout for football next fall.

"I hope the students I know will spread the word and get kids to come out," he said. "I've met a lot of them and had 25 out for wrestling. There's pride and tradition in Cohasset. I've always wanted to coach football and am looking forward to it."

At Boston college, Leone was All-East his senior year as a linebacker and won the Scanlon Scholar-Athlete award.

Frio Paces Softballers

A three-run triple by Gina Froio, who scored the other run paced Cohasset's softball team to a 4-3 win over Holbrook last week, with all the Skipper runs tallied in the third inning.

Holbrook battled back with two runs on a double steal in the fourth inning and one run on a similar maneuver in the sixth.

Hull topped the Skippers later in the week with a 10-4 decision.

Cohasset's softball team was unable to improve on a 4-all tie and bowed to Abington last week, 10-4, in a game abbreviated by fog.

Although the Skippers were able to collect only two hits off the Green Wave, they were in the running until the fourth inning when Abington exploded for three runs.

The Skippers record dipped to 9-3.

Trackmen Gain Share

Cohasset compiled 34 points for seventh place in the South Shore League track meet at Duxbury last week won by the hosts for a second straight year with 150 points over runnerup Middleboro with 90.

Skipper points came on a second by Conlon in the shotput, thirds by Sawicki, 880 and Tye, 440; a fourth by Hawley in the long jump; fifths by the mile relay quartet and Dillon in the pole vault and a sixth by the mile relay quartet.

India Turner Posts Mark

India Turner posted a record clocking of 15.6 in the 100 meter hurdles for Cohasset in the South Shore Principals meet at Norwell last week.

The only other Cohasset points came on a first in the long jump by O'Brien who leaped 15-7 1/2.

WINNER in South Shore Principals track meet hurdles was Skipper hurdles star India Turner, still only a CHS junior.

Girl Tracksters Suit Coach In SSL Meet

While finishing fourth behind winner and host Norwell and Duxbury and Abington which tied for second place, Cohasset's girls track team satisfied Coach Tom O'Neil with its 53 point performance in the South Shore Meet last week and eight placements in the state meet, yet to come.

"That's the most we've ever placed in the states," explained O'Neil, whose charges didn't have the depth to contest Norwell's 123 points and the 86 each for Duxbury and Abington.

Over the season, Cohasset won five meets and lost only three — once each to Norwell, Abington and Duxbury.

The Skippers won two events last week with Mary Jo Mahoney taking the mile in 5:41 and the mile relay quartet winning its event when Duxbury was disqualified.

Other Skipper points were posted on seconds by Turner in hurdles and O'Brien, in the long jump.

Third place points came from: Clinton, two-mile; fourths from Carroll, 220 and Parziale, 440; fifth by O'Brien, 440 and Gurnis, 880 and a sixth by Birman, high jump.

Skippers Lose

Jack Ayer singled and Paul Plante doubled in two runs, but it wasn't enough, and Cohasset baseball forces lost to Holbrook, 3-2, last week.

In its second start of the week, the Skippers ran into a two-hitter unfurled by John Cass of Hull and bowed, 2-1, letting the Pirates clinch at least a tie for the South Shore League championship.

Cohasset pitcher Bill Kurtz only gave up five hits while striking out three and walking but four but lost the mound duel to the Hull hurler who struck out 11 and gave up no walks.

Mundhenk, Skipper jayvee coach for two years, is looking forward to next fall with six starters returning from a club that posted a 6-2-2 South Shore League record and qualified for the post-season tourney. Mundhenk succeeds Ron Mazza who resigned.

Among veterans Mundhenk will inherit are All-Scholastic Craig Langford, co-senior Phil Tye and junior Todd Langford, Craig's younger brother.

All scholastic Scott Muir is graduating. But his younger brother, John will seek the goalie slot.

Mundhenk, a guidance counselor at the high school studying for his doctorate, is a Brockton resident and native of Long Island. He is a 1972 graduate of Boston College and earned his Masters at B.C.

He played soccer in grade school and was captain and MVP in high school.

For three years at B.C., he was a greater Boston League All Star and Eagles captain, leading the Maroon and Gold in scoring.

GUN SAFETY COURSE

The State Department of Law Enforcement will conduct a gun safety course for area residents aged 14 and over, beginning Wednesday, May 30, at 6 p.m., Wampatuck State Park, Union Street, Hingham.

Anyone interested in participating in the six session course should call the Recreation Department Office, at 383-6791 immediately.

Course dates are May 30, 31, June 6, 7 and 11.

Louise Smullen Scout Director

Mrs.Louise Smullen of Cohasset was elected a member-at-large to the board of directors of the Blue Hill Girl Scout Council, for a three-year term at the council's annual meeting last week.

Mrs. Gordon Goodwin, also of Cohasset, was elected to the nominating committee for a three-year term as a member-at-large.

Mrs. Smullen is currently a junior consultant and troop committee chairman. In the past she has been a Junior leader, Brownie leader and served on the council nominating committee. She has also served on the staff of the Konahasset Day Camp.

She is past president of the Second Congregational Church Women's Fellowship, and past chairman of the church music committee.

Mrs. Goodwin is currently a Cadette consultant. In the past she has been a Brownie leader and assistant leader, a Junior assistant leader, and a Cadette leader and assistant leaader. She is active in church activities in the community.

Golf Models

Models in the Cohasset Golf Club luncheon and fashion show were Sharon Achilles, Celeste Churchill, Ann Collins, Kathleen Croninger, Elenor Dizey, Gene Patterson, Kathy Pocock, Jean Repolgle and Rich Thibeault. Mrs. Croninger was the show's coordinator and Mary Hartwell gave the commentary.

Ellen Morrissey has completed a two week training course given to sales representatives for Compugraphic Corp. of Wilmington.

Jordan Gets DMD Degree

Among 23 women and 74 men to receive their Doctor of Medicine degrees from the University of Mass. Medical School on Friday, June 1, at Mechanics Hall in Worcester was Chris Jordan of Cohasset.

Obituaries

Rosemary O'Leary

A funeral mass was celebrated Tuesday in St. Anthony's Church for Mrs. Rosemary (Rosano) O'Leary, 65, of Cohasset, who died Friday at South Shore Hospital after a brief illness.

Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Mrs. O'Leary was born in Cohasset and lived in Wollaston and Marshfield before returning to Cohasset. She graduated from CHS and the Burdett Secretarial School in Boston. Mrs. O'Leary was a clerk for the state before retiring.

She belonged to the Scituate VFW Auxiliary, St. Anthony's Church, the Massachusetts State Employes Union and was a former member of St. Christine's Church in Marshfield.

Wife of the late John C. O'Leary, she leaves two brotheres, Anthony and James, both of Cohasset; two sisters, Josephine Rosano and Mrs. Mary Fiori, both of Cohasset; and several nieces and nephews.

Ralph Farrell

A Mass of Christian Burial will be celebrated today, Thursday, at 10 a.m. at St. Anthony's Church for Ralph Guy Farrell, 58, of 59 Deep Run Road, who died Monday at home after a long illness.

Burial will be in Woodside Cemetery.

Mr. Farrell was born in Bridgeport, Conn., and lived in Rowayton, Conn., 17 years before moving to Cohasset 11 years ago.

Mr. Farrell graduated from Greenwich, Conn., schools, the Peddie School in New Jersey and attended Yale University. He was New England district manager for Farrell Lines Inc. of Boston.

Mr. Farrell belonged to the Boston Shipping Association, the Boston Marine Society, the Propeller Club of the U.S., the International Business Center of New England and the Foreign Service Club. Mr. Farrell won the 1979 National Maritime Day Award for Distinguished Service for promotion of the Port of Boston.

He was in the Merchant Marine during World War II.

Mr. Farrell leaves his wife, Viola; two sons, Kevin of New York and Thorn of Cohasset; two daughters, Karen and Mary Ellen, both of Cohasset; two brothers, William of Louisiana and Robert of Virginia; and a sister, Mrs. Helen O'Mara of Connecticut.

Memorial donations may be made to the American Cancer Society.

Music Conservatory Has Fall Openings

The South Shore Conservatory of Music in Hingham has a few openings in the Pre-School program for next fall. Registrations are being accepted at the school Monday thru Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

This popular nursery school is taught by trained pre-school specialists. It is unique in that a music specialist, educated in the Orff-Schulwerk method of early childhood music training, works with the children several times a week. For further information call 749-7565.

Summer Focus

is coming

The Summer Focus is your guide to what's happening in the coastal towns during the summer months. We've made every effort to give an accurate accounting of where to shop, dine, fish, boat, swim, camp and play . . . where to enjoy summer art and culture, crafts, nature, historical sites and more.

To guide you through the summer events listed in Summer Focus, we've engaged the services of a summer bird who will be your host for this special issue. We hope his bird's eye view and our's helps to make your summer a completely enjoyable experience.

Take it from us.

Federal regulations require a substantial penalty in the event of premature withdrawal. If you redeem your certificate before maturity, you will be entitled to the difference between the amount you deposited and the cost of the gift you received (including sales tax and delivery charges), plus interest on that amount at the then current interest rate payable for regular savings deposits, less three months' interest at such rate. The cost of the merchandise you choose will be considered income for Income Tax purposes in the year you invest in your certificate. South Shore Bank will send an interest statement to you indicating this amount.

Please allow 4 to 6 weeks for delivery. We reserve the right to withdraw any item in this selection if no longer available, and to replace it with one of equal or greater value.

Music Circus Starts 29th Season

By Judith Epstein

The South Shore Music Circus will start its 29th season June 14 — with a special air of festivity and creativity.

The festival atmosphere, according to producer Ronald Rawson, is the product of a theatrical evolutionary process.

"Thirty years ago we had musical comedies," Rawson said. "People who didn't live in urban areas had a chance to see recognized performers."

"Very little musical comedy is being done now. It isn't adaptable to our type of production. We can't begin to get the right scenery."

The evolution of the theater was probably generated by the ever-changing tastes of the audience. Rawson indicated that people tired of the musical comedy diet and preferred a variety of acts with an occasional "book show" or musical play. This year one such play, 'Guys and Dolls,' starring Abe Vigoda, Hugh O'Brian and Kathryn Crosby will be sure to be a major attraction.

The Music Circus is a perfect place to see performers, Rawson said. No seat is more than 20 rows from the stage, "close enough to shake hands," he added. The circular stage revolves, so that all viewers get a good look at the show. It can move at imperceptable speeds or fast enough to swing a performer off the stage, Rawson added laughingly.

Thirty years ago tent theaters were more prevalent, as well. Rawson estimated that from the 30 tents once in existence only three in the U.S. now remain — in Sacramento, Hyannis and Cohasset. The decline in the tent's population, however, didn't deter their popularity as anyone at the Music Circus can attest.

"We know we're a unique facility. The feeling and ambiance of the tent is like a magnet. There's nothing else like it," Rawson said.

Despite continued viewer popularity, this season has been a difficult one to book for week long performances. Usually there are 12 to 15 attractions, Rawson said, but this year, because performers are staying shorter periods of time there will be more than thirty different shows.

Contributing to the festivities this year are shows which Rawson finds particularly creative and exciting, including a Musical Tribute to George Gershwin, featuring the original Paul Whiteman orchestrations and starring pianist Peter Nero; The 50 Piece John Philip Sousa Band starring singer Anna Maria Alberghetti; Virgil Fox, In

Graduation . . . A Rite Of Passage

Ecclesiastes dictates that there is a time for all things under heaven, and last Sunday saw another of these rites of passage — the graduation of the high school class of 1979.

The young men in black robes and the young women in white marched as many have before them to the sounds of 'Pomp and Circumstance' to their reserved sections in the Music Circus tent. They were a beautiful group — beautiful because they are young . . . because they are officially closing the childhood chapter of their lives . . .because they are commencing on adult adventures.

Darilynn O'Neil, Senior Class President and Salutatorian, said it in a phrase during her welcoming speech, "This is the official beginning of independence and adulthood." "We have continued traditions and have started new ones," she said, enumerating the athletic talents, the scholastic excellence, the dramatic expertise, and the accomplished and well-rounded nature of the class as a whole.

Darilynn questioned her most valuable educational experience at CHS in her Salutarian's speech. Perceptiveness, how to deal with people, adaptability, and the human quality of wanting to belong were all traits displayed in class and school activities. All of these, Darilynn suggested,

Wine And Malt License Raises Debate

The application for a beer and wine license for Papa Gino's Restaurant under construction at Cushing Plaza was taken under advisement by Selectmen last week.

Papa Gino's Restaurants specialize in Italian food — primarily pizzas — and patron desire for beer and wine as an adjunct to meals has become obvious over the years, attorney Howard Wayne explained. There are now over 70 Papa Gino Restaurants in New England, Wayne said, and over 50 have beer and wine licenses.

In Cohasset the consumption of the alcoholic beverages would be served in glasses on the premises, Wayne said. The price of beer and wine amounts to less than 5 per cent of the restuarant's profits, it was noted, yet increases the volume of food sold because of the beverage's quality of making food more attractive.

The restaurant under construction will be a one floor structure with two entrances, two exits, restrooms and a dining and food preparation area. The applicants already hold a common victualer's license and expect to be open for business by early July.

Papa Gino's is not a franchise, Wayne noted. It is privately owned by Michael Valerio and has been maintained as a family restaurant.

"Minors have never been a problem," Wayne said. "We don't serve drinks without a food order. There is no bar and no stools."

The store manager assured a careful serving policy and described what will be the store's cantena-like atmosphere which would ensure controlled table

Annual Policeman's Ball

The Cohasset Police Association will hold its annual Policeman's Ball at the South Shore Country Club in Hingham on Friday June 8 from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m.

The Les Smith Orchestra featuring vocalist Karen Camron promises to supply enjoyable dancing entertainment.

The proceeds of the ball benefit not only the police officers in time of need but also serve many of the Town's organizations. Last year a scholarship fund was established and two of Cohasset's High School seniors received the awards.

The Police Association looks forward to seeing everyone there, and promises a fine evening for all.

Papa Gino's Gets Mixed Reaction

service in the dining area which will seat 105 people. There will also be a take-out area, he said.

A proponent for Cushing Plaza, Craig Swain of Crown Investments, supported the granting of the wine and malt license. There was opposition of residents who lived in surrounding areas, particularly areas of Beechwood who felt that the availability of alcoholic beverages would increase problems with young people in the area.

Osborn Ingram of Beechwood St. said, "We have been troubled by people coming up the dead-end and gathering in droves drinking there." He feared the wine and malt license if granted would exacerbate the situation and suggested that Papa Gino's open without the license on a trial basis.

Another resident in opposition felt that Route 3A was already a trouble spot for accidents especially involving groups of youths that congregate in the area.

Malcolm Stevens questioned why the Marshfield Plaza Papa Gino's hadn't been granted a beer and malt license. Wayne explained that the application had been denied for reasons apart from problems with youths.

"We don't add to it," Wayne said of the problems residents have been having with youths loitering. "Better lighting there should detract from it," he said.

Selectman Henry Ainslie said that it would be difficult for the board to change their decision if the license was issued. "We would have to find you in violation of the liquor laws within the restaurant, not because of gangs congregating outside."

Selectman Arthur Clark said that the matter would be taken under advisement and checked with the Police Department for their opinion. Selectman Rocco Laugelle suggested a further dye test for the sewerage system there, to see if the system could take the additional burden of alcoholic beverage consumption.

Annual June Bloodmobile

The regular annual June Community Bloodmobile conducted by the Cohasset Chapter, American Red Cross, will be Monday from 1:30 to 7:15 p.m. at the Unitarian Parish House, 23 North Main Street.

This bloodmobile is being directed by Chapter Blood Co-Chairmen Jill O'Donnell (383-0299) and Roella Hobbs (383-1723).

Music Circus To Start 29th Season Yet Problems Lurk

Concerned citizens and Music Circus officials are awaiting legal actions before the court — over increasing doses of noise and traffic charged by the former and a counter-suit for adverse publicity and harassment by the latter.

Where the matter rests now Rawson was unable to say because he doesn't know. "It's a case of hyberbole," Rawson said of the Sohier St. traffic brouhaha which caused motorists to usurp use of the road a few nights two summers ago creating a one-way situation. Rawson said that one-way traffic isn't in danger of happening again as there are ample Music Circus and Police Department personnel to direct motorists to keep the road two-way.

Neither does Rawson consider the general traffic impact on Cohasset a problem. "I can't think of any other street in Cohasset where citizens are less affected than on Sohier Street. There are few homes, it's directly off Route 3, it's an excellent location."

As for the noise complaints, Rawson said that Circus has passed the most rigorous of state and federal tests, and that people who complain of the "escaped sound" are upset because it's there, not because it's loud.

"We had never quantified our sound before," Rawson said when he had an engineer from the Department of Environmental Engineering (DEQE) come down and test the outdoor sound conditions. "We were way, way within the guidelines of the DEQE," Rawson said.

To further satisfy the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) requirements, which are more stringent than the state's, the Circus had a private acoustical engineering firm, Bolt, Beranik and Newman of Cambridge, analize escaped sound under the most extreme conditions. That test was performed to the tunes of the Duke Ellington Orchestra.

"Under the most extreme conditions, while close to upper tolerance of the EPA, we are still within and meeting their guidelines. Any other opinions are subjective," Rawson said.

Rawson acknowledged, however, that escaped sound is subject to wind direction and humidity levels which can cause sound to travel more sometimes than others. He maintained, however, that the noise never approaches that of airplanes passing.

Last week, while all last minute arrangements were being made and while tickets sales were starting up hot and heavy, a new wrinkle over the weekday entertainment license appeared. It seems, as Rawson and Selectman Arthur Clark attest, that the dates on a license had been inserted incorrectly. The Selectmen's clerk had used the last year's license season closing date of Sept. 4; this year's end falls on the 15th, a date which couldn't have been known about ahead of time, Rawson explained. When the correct date was substituted for the old, it simply corrected the clerical error, Rawson said. It in no way illegally extended the season, Clark said, as some would have made it sound.

There are lots of rumors, gripes, and questions flying over the Music Circus, but one thing is for sure — that people from Cohasset and everywhere will particularly enjoy the 1979 Festival of Special Events this summer.

Deer Hill Students Visit Duxbury Outdoor School

The fifth grade students at the Deer Hill School attended the ninth annual Outdoor School at Camp Wing in Duxbury recently.

The Deer Hill Outdoor School program objective is to provide students with an enriching experience of educational activities beyond their traditional classroom. In each subject, there is learning carried on outdoors, fulfilling the ideal that learning and doing go together. The influence of the woodland setting, close personal association and responsibility is expected to result in a positive outlook on education, a broader understanding of each other and a greater appreciation of nature.

The curriculum, under the direction of 10 teachers and 26 junior leaders chosen from the freshman class of CHS, includes astronomy, nature art, nature poetry, map skills, survival in the outdoors, conservation and ecology. Junior leaders assisted teachers with cabin, dining room and activity supervision. The services of the regular camp personnel included a chef, kitchen employes and water safety instructors.

The recreational program concentrated on the camp facilities for swimming, fishing, boating and archery.

Storytellers

A storytellers' workshop will be sponsored by the Cohasset Public Library Tuesday at 9:30 a.m. in the children's room.

The two-hour workshop will feature easy but effective techniques for sharing picture books with young children including fingerplays, felt boards presentations and puppets.

Water Dept. Tour

The Board of Water Commissioners invites the public to attend an informal open house at the new Water Treatment Facility on King Street Sunday June 10 from 1 to 5 p.m.

The new facility officially opened May 11, 1978 and the last year has been spent in finely honing all processes within the department. The Aaron River Dam and Reservoir was completed during that time and is now in use. Visits to the dam and reservoir will also be a part of the open house.

The cleaning of the town's water storage standpipe last December brought in a lot of complaints about dirty-looking water. But thanks to that cleaning, Water Superintendent Edwin Pratt said there have been no rusty water complaints in months.

Pratt is confident that the synchronized functioning of the entire system will continue to provide ample and clean water to Cohasset residents.

Efficiency And Equanimity

One hates to apply the term "petty" to the action of any town board, however, that word as well as nitpicking, picayune, and niggling might well serve to describe the goings on at last Monday's School Committee meeting.

When approval of the previous week's minutes and warrant take up more than an hour of the Committee's (and visitors') time, when Committee members themselves complain that old business never gets attended to, when board members embark on discussions not directly relevant to the agenda item at hand, we suggest that meeting policy be reviewed.

The Mariner was told (during a much needed recess Monday night) by one board member that she didn't know if she would make through the meeting without bursting an artery. We later questioned the Chairman if he felt anything had been accomplished that night, and he responded, "I don't know."

We would be the last to deny School Committee members their right to question the policies and action of the board. But when objection is made because a board member other than the Chairman has signed the payroll to help ease the workload, and when it becomes necessary to have a debate and official vote specifically denoting the Chairman responsible for the signing of or designating a signer of the payroll, we say enough is enough. Enough ridiculous bureaucracy and needless suspicion because there is no need for it when a huge agenda with all kinds of matters — important ones, if they could ever be reached — still await the Committee's consideration.

It's a good Committee and that business needs its attention.

Badger Poses Alternatives

To the Editor:

In referring to Mr. Tower's "commentary" — "Will The Voters Have Guts" — in your May 24 edition, it would seem to be less a matter of "guts" than knowing the facts of the wastewater problem, to bring the voters out.

First, Mr. Tower spends a lot of time on the matter of the dry process of disposal of sewage. This method has not even been discussed, except out of intellectual curiosity, and found wanting in every respect.

Secondly, it was the Country Journal of February 1979 (not October 1968) that describes the financial troubles of another small New England town by getting involved in a multi-multi-million dollar central treatment plant.

The the Dutch "Carrousel" or "merry-go-round" as it is referred to is not a dry disposal system. On the contrary it is very similar to the liquid rotary aeration plant now working overtime in Jacobs Meadow. The Dutch Carrousel, however, is widely proven as a remarkable system in Europe. It is as popular there as the Volkswagon auto is in this country. Therefore, it must be good to be as widely used as it is in Europe. We, however, need to learn about the Carrousel to understand its refinements, durability and remarkable cost effectiveness. As an innovative alternative to the recommended costly plant, it deserves consideration.

It is said in this "commentary" of Mr. Tower's that the town's share of the costs will be only 10 per cent. However, nothing comes that free in this life, for what the Federal Government or the town spends, comes only from us as citizens. Let's not kid ourselves about costs as outlined.

Much is said about our "soil not percolating" but three-quarters of Cohasset's sewage disposal is by on-lot septic tanks. Most of these tanks have been working well for years, and only about two per cent or less need repair each year.

Whale Meadow requires pumping everything to reach it, while Jacobs Meadow is the lowest spot in town and gravity takes all liquid material there without pumping, therefore, avoiding its associated costs of maintenance.

Furthermore, the Dutch Carrousel at the upper end of Jacobs Meadows's 18 acres, requires only two acres of land compared to the four acres for Metcalf and Eddy's recommended plant. The Carrousel would also be inoffensive and attractively built. It is of interest that neighbors surrounding the present plant in Jacobs Meadow do not object ot its presence.

From an environmental angle much is said pro and con about Jacobs Meadow as a bird sanctuary but it would be interesting to have some bird watchers count its use, in the center of town, by wildlife over a period or a week.

I remain realistic that Cohasset citizens should have the priviledge of understandign that there are other smaller, less pretentious, less costly, more cost effective plants for Cohasset that have not in the past, nor are being given now, any serious though publically by the Sewer Commission. We should of course look for low maintenance expenses. Furthermore greater efficiency in function can produce a purer effluent.

There are already a few of the town officials who are beginning to support this idea of alternatives in type of disposal plant but the citizens must speak their minds and question the perpetrators of the recommended costly giant disposal plant. The life style and pocketbook of every citizen of Cohasset is in jeopardy if the present Metcalf and Eddy plant is accepted.

Mooring Dispute Questions Harbor Rules

Harbormaster Harry Ritter denied commercial fisherman Gerald Pattison a mooring for his 30-foot boat at the Selectmen's meeting last week.

Selectmen had requested that Ritter and Pattison attend the Board meeting to discuss the dispute in which Pattison claimed that other fishermen had "jumped over" the waiting list procedure and had received moorings without following harbor regulations. Ritter said that there was no space to accommodate Pattison's 30 foot boat in the commercial fishing area of the harbor.

Pattison now has a 20-foot mooring for his old boat, but had applied for a 36-foot mooring on Oct. 1976.

He charged that fishermen Bernard Salvador had received preferential treatment at the Selectmen's approval and allowing him to have more than one boat in the harbor. Pattison said that recently Salvador had replaced two old boats with new ones which were larger and oversized for the moorings.

Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark later explained that several years ago Salvador had one boat in the harbor and succeeded in gaining another mooring with the board's approval by registering it under the corporation name of Audrey P. Selectmen thereafter changed the regulation allowing such a practice, Clark said, and now mooring regulations dictate that only one boat per person may be moored in Cohasset Harbor.

Ritter said the Salvador simply brought in two new boats in the berths where two older boats had been. Salvador's 'Audrey P' was larger by 18 inches, he said, but the mooring could accommodate the increase.

Pattison further charged that the measurements of Salvador's new boats were given incorrectly and that Salvador had had more than two boats moored in the harbor. Ritter said that during the winter only Salvador had moored the old 'Audry P' as well as the new in the harbor when plenty of space was available.

Pattison referred to the permission that Salvador had received from Selectmen as the "loophole" and suggested that he and nay other fisherman wanting a mooring find a similar means of getting boats in the water. He said that none or all of the mooring and harbor regulations should be adhered to.

Ritter said that Pattison is entitled to the next 30 foot mooring, by way of inserting his name in the 30-foot section of the waiting list according to the date of original application. Ritter said that he could replace Pattison's name on the 30-foot list because the boat size was "within a ballpark range," although mooring regulations require that application be made again for boatowners wishing to moor boats of different size.

Flashing Lights For Dangerous Intersections Urged By Residents

Selectmen will investigate the costs of flashing lights and reflectors at the intersections of North Main St. at Ripley Road and particulary Jerusalem Road at the request of concerned citizens.

Mrs. William Cox last week spoke for the North Main St. residents and their concern about the speed of cars at the intersections and the safety of pedestrians crossing or walking along the street.

Cox urged that flashing lights, or some type of signal, be placed at the intersection. She also urged that a policeman be on duty during Little League games because of children walking in the area and motorists' apparent disregard of stop signs and their failure to negotiate the curves onto North Main St.

"We are generally afraid for the safety of all who walk there," Cox said. She added that she knew of individuals who perpetually run the stop sign coming out of Jerusalem Road, and could name them.

"I would hate to think that somebody would have to be killed on that corner before something is done," she said.

Selectman Arthur Clark predicted installation of flashing lights would be very expensive, although he agreed to discuss the cost with wire superintendent Stephen Wigmore. Clark also noted that residents may object to flashing lights disturbing them in their homes.

Clark suggested that abnormal speeds of drivers going around the Jerusalem Road corner onto North Main Street may be at fault.

Theresa Williams was concerned about the safety conditions of the intersections, but represented the faction of neighbors, she said, who would not like flashing lights installed. She suggested that a dangerous curve sign be used.

Mr. and Mrs. William Good noted that there is no continuing sidewalk along the left hand side of North Main Street. They felt that there should be a continuous walk there for access to the Little League field and the swimming pool located behind the playing field.

Graduation

contributed to her educational experience and taught her and her classmates to be people-wise.

Valedictorian Leslie Jones thanked CHS for her excellent education, which enabled her to be able to pick and choose from an array of colleges. The Advanced Placement courses she studies also enabled her to gain some college credit ahead of time. What she learned about people, she said in agreement with Darilynn, was learned by playing by the rules.

Leslie called the shots as she saw them. Take home exams were a grave mistake, she cautioned. The independent student who worked on his or her own may not fare as well, unjustly so, as those who huddled heads together and came away with the better grade. Leslie also admonished the lack of consistant standard for guidance and the existence of unenforcable rules, such as, 'No smoking in the schools.' The answer, she recommended, was to give students their freedom gradually.

Cohasset High School is at a disadvantage, she said, in that one building is used to serve as the educational home of people ranging in age from 12 to 18 years. The three "R's" are great, she said, but there should be two more "R's" — rights and responsibility, at varying levels to satisfy the needs of the disparity in ages of CHS youngsters.

"Be proud," Leslie concluded, "but don't be content."

Cohasset High School Principal Richard Streeter awarded the National Honor Society students with plaques for their scholastic achievements, their character and contributions to the school. Arthur Glasfeld, National Merit Scholar, and Leslie Jones, National Merit Commended Scholar, received extra bouquets of recognition and admiration.

Superintendent John Maloney thanked the 1979 class for all their contributions and added a work of advice for their personal futures. Take your time in choosing a mate, Maloney advised, and quoted the 50 per cent failure rate of marriages over the past few years. He suggested that this new crop of young men and women try to change the trend. Maloney then presented Jack Langmaid, Chairman of the School Committee, who after a few words of congratulations, got down to the business of presenting the diplomas.

Seniors refrained from holding their applause until all had been presented diplomas, and each recipient received his or her own private ovation. The day belonged to them.

GRADUATION TEMPO was provided by CHS Band directed by Tony Hyde.

Public Library Celebrates 100th Birthday

By Elizabeth Glasfeld

In 1879 the Town of Cohasset voted funds to create the Cohasset Free Public Library. The original collection was housed in the Town Hall and was moved to its present building, the gift of Harriet E. and Sarah S. Pratt in memory of their father, Paul Pratt, in 1903.

If the first librarian could see the book collection today, he would be outraged at the inclusion of fiction — novels were considered to be a sinister influence and were not suitable reading for any age. He would, however, be pleased to see how the library has grown, and how much the library and the community have given to each other.

The Friends of the Cohasset Library have been saving their money for the past few years in anticipation of the library renovations. Now that the last of the plaster dust has been swept away, they have been able to celebrate the 100th birthday with some very fine presents.

On the outside, the handsome new clock face designed by Richard Dabrowski was installed. The gold leaf mackeral schooner featured on the clock is echoed in the newly gilded mackeral weathervane — both testimony to the fishing economy that built the town.

Attractive new directional signs lead through the door to various areas of the library and its special book collections. New books, large print books, reference books, children's books and more are all clearly marked in the new blue and white signs.

Less obvious, but much appreciated are the new window shades throughout the library, new record cabinets, staff room cabinets and children's room magazine racks.

The children are also the recipients of a fund to provide books for prizes in the summer reading program and Cohasset Library T-shirts for the children's volunteer program.

Much appreciated by the adult volunteers who manage the "books on wheels" program, are the sturdy new canvas bags for carrying books to and from the nursing homes.

This year, and for many years, the Friends have funded interesting programs for children and adults and have made memberships at the Museum of Science, New England Aquarium and Museum of Fine Arts available free to all library patrons. They also provide the volunteers who make possible many special services provided by the library.

All in all, the Friends of the Cohasset Library have given the Library a grand selection of 100th birthday presents. They will climax this 100th year with a grand birthday party at their annual meeting, Friday, June 8th. Edward Rowe Snow, popular local historian, will give a glimpse of the South Shore a hundred years ago, following which dessert and coffee will be served. The public is invited.

There's more to the color of a diamond than "white" or "tinted."

Every diamond has a specific color grade; each customer should know the exact color of their stone. Diamonds range from colorless to deep yellow and can be virtually all colors of the spectrum. Colorless, icy-white diamonds are very rare; diamonds with a tinge of color, so faint, seem to have more fire, giving the diamond more warmth than icy-white stones. De Scenza grades every diamond to a specific system, which is comparable to the GIA (Gemological Institute Of America) — every diamond should be.

Theatre Olio Presents Silly Soup

The South Shore Art Center is pleased to announce that the Theatre Olio production of "Silly Soup" will be presented on Sunday, July 1 at 2 p.m. at the Parish House of the Unitarian Church in Cohasset Center in conjunction with the 24th Annual South Shore Art Festival.

"Silly Soup" for kids little and big is a collection of six zany short plays by Carol Korty about noodles or noodleheads — happy, zany simpletons who do outlandishly crazy things with the utmost seriousness. These noodlehead plays are drawn from traditional tales about Mad Merry Men of Gotham, which originated in medieval England and about the Wise Men of Chelm of Polish Yiddish culture. The plays were originally developed through improvisation and experimentation.

Appearing are Mike Pevzner of Duxbury, remembered by South Shore kids as Zeno, the Sorcerer, in "King of the Ice Cream Mountain;" Robert Gillet of Kingston, King Bumpygruff in "Ice Cream Mountain" and Marie Miller of Marshfield, an actress and dancer joining Olio for the first time. Director is Judith Montminy, an actress and director with many shows to her credit.

Admission/donation is $1. for children and $.50 for any adults they bring.

Vo-Tech Grads

Cohasset residents among the 69 seniors receiving diplomas at commencement exercises at South Shore Vocational Technical High School last week were:

Robert Brown, Paul Flanagan, Michael MacDonald and Dale Sestito.

Photography classes are now being enrolled at the South Shore Art Center at 103 Ripley Road. The spring term of eight classes begins Monday, April 9 and is taught by Linda Wasko for Beginners on Monday evenings and Intermediate/Advanced students on Tuesday evenings.

Beginners will learn how their camera works, how to develop and print, how to compose a good photograph and how to work toward a finer print. In the Intermediate/Advanced class students will concentrate on developing a finer print, they will concentrate on sequences, explore tone-line separation, solarization, high-contrast prints, montage and other topics.

Both classes will be taught with a lecture-critique-demonstration method with separate time scheduled in the Center darkroom to complete assignments between classes.

Ms. Wasko is a professional photographer who teaches at Chamberlain Junior College, MIT and the Copley Society. Her work has been exhibited in Boston at the Prudential Center, Boston City Hall and most recently at the Art Complex in Duxbury.

For information on Photography classes and other offerings during Spring Term, telephone the Center Office at 383-9548.

Special Program For Public Library Birthday

On Friday the Friends of the Cohasset Library will celebrate the 100th birthday of the Cohasset Free Public Library at their annual meeting.

The program will be at the Unitarian Parish House at 8 p.m. A business meeting will precede the program at 7:30.

As a special birthday present to the library and its patrons, the Friends have asked Edward Rowe Snow, noted mariner, historian and folklorist, to give a program on Massachusetts Bay and the South Shore 100 years ago. Snow is known throughout New England for his vivid tales of pirates, shipwrecks, lighthouses and ghosts, and for his ability to recreate history as a human event.

Following Snow's program, dessert and coffee will be served.

David Sharpe Gallery Debuts

The David Sharpe Gallery recently opened in Cohasset Village with a mixed media exhibit.

Featured is sculpture by Norman Gardner of New York City and Gita Packer of Fort Worth, Texas.

This month the gallery is also displaying a series of dolls by Laura Olsen and mixed media by Anet Paglierani, both South Shore artists.

The gallery is open through June 16 Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. After June 18 it will be open Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. or by appointment.

Summer Handwriting Workshop Supported

The School Committee Monday night discussed the possibility of introducing a commercial standardized handwriting course into the school system. The Committee rejected the idea in favor of the previously adopted summer workshop which will develop a handwriting curriculum for the schools, particularly the elementary grades.

Committee member Patricia Walsh had moved for reconsideration of the summer workshop, suggesting that various handwriting courses were available at low costs for annual programs. The courses offer student and teacher workbooks, as well as wall charts depicting the proper formation of letters.

Committee member Diana Kornet pointed out that thc "grass-roots" summer workshop, which would show teachers from both the Joseph Osgood and Deer Hill Schools how to serve as in-school instructors to implement the handwriting techniques and curriculum in September, wold obviate the need for a yearly course from one of the proposed courses.

Frank England, Vice-Chairman of the board, questioned the handwriting goal that had been set forth for the schools a few years ago and what direction it had taken. Superintendent John Maloney responded and said that the goal emphasized the need for neatness, not methodology.

Mary Benbow, occupational therapist for the school, agreed that lack of method was not the primary problem with children, but rather a deficient understanding of child development and the need of proper motor instruction so that young students could learn how to handle writing tools and form letters. Benbow will work with the staff in implementing the handwriting programs in the schools.

Former board member Richard Silvia said that he was "alarmed" at the present discussion of a handwriting program, because he recalled similar goals set when he was serving the Committee. He was chagrined, he said, to think that something as basic as handwriting had been neglected for so long.

Supt. Maloney said that a few years ago a handwriting evaluation had been conducted in the elementary school grades when it was found that construction of letters was not at issue as much as the problem with sloppiness.

A split vote of the Committee failed to pass the motion to reconsider the summer workshop. The four week course which will cost $2500 will identify an appropriate handwriting technique to be used consistently in the Cohasset schools.

CHAIRMAN DESIGNEE

The School Committee voted to empower the Chairman or his designee to sign School Department payroll.

MUD ROOM

The Committee considered renovation of the "mud room" at the Jr./Sr. High School to be converted into a large storage area. The proposed renovation was estimated at $10,000 to $12,000 and the board voted to advertise for bidders.

SUB-COMMITTEE

A Teacher Evaluation Subcommittee has been appointed including School Committee member Diana Kornet, school staff members Patricia Wunschel, John Craemer, and residents Julian Hartwell, Ralph Dorminzter and Mrs. Paul Desmond. The subcommittee will design an evaluation instrument to be implemented in the schools in the fall.

RELEASE DAYS

A release day proposal for the 1979-1980 school year was approved by the School Committee. Five days will be allotted to the Jr./Sr. High School, and eight days to the Joseph Osgood and Deer Hill Schools. The administration urged the continued cooperation of teachers in conducting after hours consultations with parents who can not visit during school hours.

DEER HILL PHONE

A log of the phone calls made from the Deer Hill library phone will be examined by Committee members to ascertain if unauthorized use indicates the need to close down that outside line. Committee member Diana Kornet urged retention of the outside line as it is the only one available in that portion of the school.

NEXT SC MEETING

The June 11 School Committee meeting will consider solely School Committee goals for the 1979-1980 school year.

names before Pattison's on the 30-foot list, Pattison will be entitled to the next commercial area opening because he earns more than 85 per cent of his living by fishing. The commercial mooring area, which has been newly designated since last year, is outlined by the northwest corner of Laurence Wharf straight across the cove, from the steps on the south point of the Cox estate to the white channel marker off the end of Bassing Beach from the white channel marked to the northeast corner of Fisherman's Pier.

Clark offered to accompany Pattison to the harbor to view the spots where Pattison claims he can fit his boat. Ritter, however, maintained that there was no room for the boat and added that he wouldn't have 180 names on the mooring list if that kind of space were available.

Teacher Evaluations Modified

By Ann Fogg

The School Committee hammered out a two-part charge to the sub-committee which will develop new instruments for teacher evaluation, "the most sensitive issue facing education," according to Superintendent Dr. John Maloney.

Wrestling with the question posed Monday night by Secretary Patricia Walsh, "Are we trying to rank teachers or to improve education?" the Committee decided the primary purpose of whatever instrument they devised was to improve the quality of instruction.

Dr. Maloney pointed out that the improvement of teaching and "riffing" (deciding who stays and who goes) cannot be done by the same person or by the same instrument. "The present instrument isn't working," he said. "We need drastic measures. But no one else has solved the problem yet either."

Committee member Diane Kornet suggested the wording of the charge that Mrs. Walsh put into motion. "The purpose of this evaluation is to improve the instructional quality of our teachers."

Vice Chairman Frank England suggested that since the reduction in staff, would probably never exceed 10 per cent, that a more honest approach would be to include the fact that the goal of the evaluation was also to retain the best teachers. He moved an amendment to the motion: "The secondary purpose of this evaluation is that, should we find it necessary to reduce our faculty, this instrument shall be used to aid the school committee to retain the best teachers."

Chairman Jack Langmaid pointed out that the Committee needed to develop a method to determine the most qualified. The vote on the amendment lost, 1 to 4 with one abstention, and the motion passed, 5-1. England told the Committee they had just blown the whole thing, but Mrs. Walsh suggested they develop a second instrument.

Dr. Maloney pointed out that he was the one who had to recommend those who had to go, and that school superintendents had not been successful in riffing by using existing evaluation systems. "We must get a separate instrument."

England said that they needed a more mechanical way to deal with a situation in which, for example, the system had 10 English teachers, all on tenure, and needed eight.

Mrs. Kornet said that improvement of teaching quality requires an instrument that keeps teachers from fear and agreed that riffing needed a separate instrument. She said that many things must be considered, such as the fact that older teachers have a harder time on the job market than younger ones. She recommended Duxbury's point system that looked objectively at categories such as department chairmanship and extra-curricular activities.

MAN AND MEMORY — Harry Trask, local resident now a school teacher in Boston, and the photo that won him a Pulitzer while he was photographer for former Herald Traveler — the sinking of the Italian liner the "Andrea Doria."

The Shot Seen 'Round The World

By Judith Epstein

How many of us have had a moment in our lives that changed us forever? Not many. But for some it may have come as a moment of tragedy or triumph. For Harry Trask it came as both.

It came 22 years ago when Trask, as a 28 year old Herald Traveler photographer, recorded the last nine minutes in the life of the luxury liner the "Andrea Doria." His photograph of the lifeboats being torn from the ship as she plummeted bow first into the Atlantic earned him the Pultizer Prize for the best news photograph in 1957.

The world has never let him forget it and the story that surrounds the shooting of the picture — and the picture itself — is as fascinating today as it was them.

Over forty people were killed when the Swedish line "Stockholm" collided midship with the prize of the Italian line, the "Andrea Doria," on the night of July 25, 1956, 45 miles off the coast of Nantucket. It was around midnight when Trask received a call from the Herald Traveler City Editor and was asked to report to the scene of a "terrible accident." Trask, until he understood the nature and enormity of the disaster, believed it was a car crash.

He then travelled from his apartment on Summer Street in Cohasset, to Revere where the Traveler had rented a twin-engine plane awaiting his journey to Nantucket. He was told, however, that the pilot would not fly beyond the Cape Islands and was therefore without passage for the 45 mile trip out to sea where the Andrea Doria was listing.

(Trask, although working the day shift, had been called to shoot the scene as the newspaper's other photographers were covering the rescue operations in New York.)

Special Status Talks In Exec Session

Selectmen met last week in executive session with Eric Pearson, owner of Highway Motor Sales, to discuss the special municipal employee status given to many town employees. Selectmen will again broach the issue at a future open board meeting.

Pearson alleged last March that two members and one former member of the Planning Board were in violation of the conflict of interest law. The Attorney General then ruled that all were free of criminal violation of the law.

It was noted that Planning Board Chairman Glen Pratt and Vice-Chairman John Bradley were exempt from a portion of the law which prohibited municipal employes to have financial interest in contracts made by an agency of the same town by way of special municipal employee status.

Selectmen in 1962 voted to apply the status to many of the town boards. Town Counsel J. Blake Thaxter recently opined that "it would be inappropriate to now change the designations." The reasons he gave explained that the state Town Counsel Association had then agreed that certain positions should be classified as special town employees, that most towns have used similar designations, and that if the designation weren't made many capable people wouldn't have been able to serve the town.

Pearson met with the Selectmen, he said, because he personally doesn't feel that municipal employees should be exempt from the conflict of interest law in any way. Pearson questioned whether a special municipal status should exist for employees who would otherwise be prosecuted for violation of the conflict of interest law.

He feels that no town should have special municipal employees designations. "Is exemption for the good of the people? Is it in the best interest of the town? What is this fear of prosecution?" he queried of the status which he feels gives unnecessary additional protection from the law.

"Of the Selectmen I have no question whatsoever, that they are categorically and specifically, honest and would serve whether they had that status or not," Pearson said. Selectmen do not have special municipal employee status.

Pearsons would like the Selectmen to consider eliminating the status altogether, he said. His purpose for attending the meeting was informational, he said.

He also questioned Thaxter's opinion on retaining the status on several counts. He asked that consideration of the number of towns having the status and those not be taken, and to decide whether uniformity is a good reason for applying the status in Cohasset. He questioned Thaxter's usage of the word "inappropriate" in ruling that the status should stay and his rationale in stating that if the designation weren't made many capable people wouldn't have been able to serve the town.

"They (Selectmen) are obviously still considering this situation," Pearson said. Selectman Arthur Clark said last week that the issue would appear as an agenda item in the future.

Jazz Ensemble Reward

The Cohasset High School Jazz Ensemble was awarded a finalist placque for its performance at the 10th Annual Berklee College of Music High School Jazz Festival held in Boston last month.

Cohasset was joined by Westford Academy (MA.), St. Joseph's (N.Y.) and Westbrook (ME.) as finalist schools in class III. Eighteen schools competed in this class representing eight states in the northeast.

Senior trombonist Peter Cook and Sophomore Tubist Phil Trask were awarded citations for playing excellence. The ensemble performed "flawlessly," according to director Tony Hyde, a varied program geared to the musical stylings of the group.

They opened with the jazz standard, "Close Your Eyes" with solos by Chris Williams (sax), Sally Sisson (flute), and Andy Trask (trombone). Next came the beautiful ballad "A Time for Love" by Johnny Mandel. This number received special praise from the 3 man judging panel as being "sensual," "haunting," and "sensitive." It featured the trombone and flute section, with flute solo by Lisa Kurtz. To conclude the group rendered Hank Levy's lively, "The Time is Now" featuring Cook and Trask and drummer Steve Espinosa.

The Berklee event marked the final competitive performance of the year for the ensemble. In five enents Cohasset took a first, two seconds an two thirds.

Teacher Evaluation

Langmaid moved that the School Committee devise an instrument for retaining the most qualified teachers in the event of staff reduction. The motion was passed, 4-2.

Mrs. Walsh suggested that they needed a way to evaluate the Superintendent, and Mr. Langmaid moved that the School Committee devise a way to do so.

England suggested they change the instrument they were going to devise from teaching to administration. He recommended again that they learn from industries' experience in evaluating employees. Most of the committee, however, felt that the problems faced by public service are different from those faced by private industry.

Dr. Maloney said, "I don't mind being evaluated as long as I know what the instrument is and that it's acceptable." The motion passed, 4-2.

Mrs. Walsh moved that the School Committee shall institute a self-evaluation, not to be done in open session but by using a written instrument. The motion passed, 4-1, with one abstention.

In other business, the Committee discussed the need for a standardized form of curriculum evaluation by departments. Dr. Maloney said that the existing K-12 curriculum development states objectives and materials and that we need to decide how we cross check and update it. He suggested the yearly review of standardized test results that shows weak areas.

Langmaid felt there was too little communication between the staff and the Committee. Mrs. Kornet asked if they could in some slack time of the School Committee year (general chuckle) educate themselves in each department.

Dr. Maloney suggested a monthly report from the department heads about the areas in which they were doing well and where they needed to improve. He added that in August they should have the first return on how well the system is doing, 1-11.

England said that it was important to receive the reports early enough so they could read them and be ready to question and discuss them. He recommended that a goal of the School Committee by a systematic review of each discipline and each subject field by the department heads in the high school and the principals in the lower schools.

England moved that a student be made a non-voting member of the Committee. He had talked to members of two systems that do that, Quincy and Framingham, and found that they had considerable insight into what was going on.

Dr. Maloney said that in Cohasset's experience, they tended to interrupt the discussion. England objected. He said that every three months kids come to the meetings, half are too scared to talk, and they need more contact with the Committee. Committee member Irene Brown suggested there's enough people to talk now, and that the meeting is open to anyone, including students, but England felt the students needed a specific incentive.

Mrs. Kornet suggested that some meetings would be a waste of a student's time and that a periodic invitation would be better. Mr. England said that for a person to be effective, he or she would need to be there all the time. In Framingham the student is elected at town election.

Langmaid pointed out that they would not be allowed into negotiations, contract discussions, and executive sessions, and Mrs. Kornet said it was too much responsibility to put on one student. England said it was important to get someone else than the president of the Student Council or the senior class.

Dr. Maloney suggested that the lack of a vote would create a second class citizen, a frustrating situation for the student. He added that the State Board of Education, by statute, however, has a student member with all rights and powers. England said that in Quincy and Framingham the students were not bothered by that restriction; they consider election an honor. He said that there is a general lack of understanding among the students of the School Committee, and that there really isn't much the students can't know.

The motion was brought to a vote by Langmaid, but it lost 5 to 1.

The committee also passed two motions of Business Manager John Raftery. "A coordination of programs to use the Math Department computer to do work needed by the school superintendent for budget, purchases, scheduling and to coordinate this with the town accountant" carried 5-1.

"Set up standard procedure for the handling and accounting of all student activity funds by students and all class and faculty advisors. A good opportunity to teach students proper methods of the business world," carried unanimously.

EASEMENT NEEDED

Before construction can officially begin for the rebuilding of the Cohasset Harbor breakwater lying in Scituate waters, an easement from the Jesuit owners of the Bellarmine property is needed. According to Selectmen Arthur Clark arrangements for the town to have ownership of a portion of that land, so that construction could take place there, have been in the process all year but were never completed.

The Federal Disaster Assistance Administration has agreed to accept the easement in the place of town ownership of the land.

REFLECTORS AID

Superintendent of the Wire Department Stephen Wigmore has placed reflectors on the sides of the North Main Street at Ripley Road toward the center of town. Last week several residents requested that reflectors and flashing lights be placed at the intersections of Ripley and Jerusalem Roads because they were concerned about pedestrian safety with fast traffic there.

RITTER'S RULES

Due to numerous complaints from boat owners and instructions from the Board of Selectmen, Harbormaster Harry Ritter has informed boatowners that all bylaws pertaining to Cohasset Harbor will be strictly enforced.

There's A New Look To Mariner Management

The Mariner Newspapers this week announced the resignation of Michael Stearns as co-publisher and general manager.

Stearns, who founded the Marshfield Mariner with David Cutler in 1972, plans to leave July 1. He has sold his 50 per cent share of the company to Cutler.

The company's other publications include the Norwell Mariner which was launched in 1973 and the Cohasset and Scituate Mariners which began publishing last October. The company's only other publication, the Fisherman's Voice, was sold last year.

Cutler, 35, has been around newspapers since 1950 when his parents, John and Roberta Cutler, started the Duxbury Clipper. A graduate of Colby College in Waterville, Maine, he joined the Patriot Ledger in 1965, and following a three-year tour with the Marine Corps, returned to the Ledger as a general assignment reporter and later as chief of the paper's State House Bureau.

As president and publisher of the Mariner Newspapers, Cutler plans to continue the tradition of offering the best local coverage possible. "Our credo," he said, "has always been to concentrate on what happens at the community level and that will not change."

"The exceptional reception the Mariners received in Marshfield and Norwell has been duplicated in Scituate and Cohasset and for that we are delighted," he added. Cutler traces the success of the Mariners to the papers' policy of publishing strictly community news, and to what he called the papers' exceptional staff. A large measure of the Mariners' success, he continued, has been based on the hard work of Michael Stearns.

MICHAEL STEARNS

OTHER APPOINTMENTS

With the departure of Stearns, Cutler has named Lois Martin of Marshfield as general manager of all Mariner Newspapers. She will also continue as managing editor of the Marshfield Mariner.

Martin, a graduate of the University of Maine and a former school teacher in Virginia, joined the Mariner in August 1972. She was appointed assistant editor in 1977 and became managing editor a year later.

In addition to her widespread regular duties, she writes the often humourous, sometimes poignant and always popular "Patches" column that appears in the Mariners.

She and her husband Richard have three sons: Brian, Andrew and Terrance.

Nina Belsan of Scituate has been named Mariner advertising manager, succeeding Joanne Morris who will also leave at the end of June.

NINA BELSAN

Belsan, a graduate of Molloy College for Women in Long Island, N.Y., joined the Scituate Mariner as a staff reporter last fall. Her by-line is familiar on the South Shore and her columns and features have been published in numerous newspapers and magazines. Her writing will still appear in the Mariners from time to time.

Belsan began her newspaper career as an advertising sales representative. She has worked as an account executive for advertising agencies and has been an advertising consultant for two other papers.

She and her husband, Gerald, have four children: James, Teresa, Peter and John.

Tsongas, Studds To Lead Watershed Canoe Trip

The North and South Rivers Watershed Association is scheduling a canoe trip for the general public in conjunction with the Massachusetts River Celebration on Saturday, June 23.

Several other groups, including the Marshfield YWCA Norwell Science Center and local canoe clubs, will be participating in the Massachusetts River Celebration Day, which is being sponsored by the U.S. Environmental Protection agency and U.S. Senator Paul Tsongas, to call attention to the need to preserve, protect and enhance the Bay State's waterways.

U.S. Representative, Gerry Studds, will be on hand to see the canoeists off at the Norwell Town Landing on Bridge Street at 9:30 a.m.; they will travel up river 7 miles to Indian Head in Hanover. The group will stop mid-way for a picnic lunch, and several Watershed members will be available to answer questions on geological, native wildlife and ecological aspects of the North and South Rivers. Cold drinks and canoe maps will also be available.

A limited number of extra canoes will be available for those people needing them. For more information, and to register for the trip, please call the Marshfield YWCA 834-8371.

Metcos, Hosts Enjoy Day For Family

By Karin Bartow

'A Day of Fun For The Entire Family' met an enthusiastic response from close to 200 Metco and Cohasset Host families and friends who turned out at Cohasset High School on Sunday afternoon. Planned jointly by Metco and Cohasset Host family parent groups, the end-of-year event for all ages included a picnic, games, sports, and a sultry summer day to accompany them all.

Coolers and paper bags emptied their various contents as picnickers lunched and visited with each other. Pourers of all sizes ladled cool punch from deep pots. Charcoal grills sizzled hot dogs and hamburgers. A chorus of friendly chatter, squeals, and shouts hummed across the grassy field through racing legs and ice-creamed, sticky fingers.

Entire families were there . . . having fun: playing baseball, kickball, tossing Frisbees, raising kites. Simon Says (all kinds of things), bubble (big, round, pretty) gum blowing, water balloon toss, and sack races were played. Groupings of blankets and chairs checkered the ground as friends relaxed and renewed relationships.

Sunday's turn-out reflected the good year Metco and Host families have shared. Metco stands for the Metropolitan Council for Educational Opportunity Inc. established in 1966 to provide integrated public school education for urban children in suburban schools. Cohasset's 10 year old Metco program has 48 students enrolled this year, with five graduated. There is a Host family for every student, and many back-up families to fill in for them when needed. The Host family's role includes providing a 'home away from home' for the Metco student, and to be available in the event of any emergency or special need. Cohasset families fulfill their role also by phoning Boston families about school events; inviting a Metco student to their home for an overnight or afternoon; contacting Mrs. Burns, the Metco coordinator; or by attending a Metco-sponsored event.

While it is hoped that there will be some contact between families, the extent to which each socializes, is up to the individuals. Mrs. Cordie Foell, chairman of the Host Family Committee, says, "The important thing is that the kids are in a spot where someone is looking after them. Participation in social events, while it gives Metco families some feeling of warmth here in Cohasset, isn't essential to the program."

The successful 'Day of Fun' communicates that Cohasset welcomes the Metco families. Mrs. Foell senses, "The people who came wanted to be there and the feeling among them was pretty genuine."

A round of thanks is extended to the many individuals from Boston and Cohasset who helped plan and organize Sunday's fete.

There will be a need for new Host and Back-up families in the fall and if you are interested, please call: Mrs. Cordie Foell, 383-1650, Mrs. Noreen Leonard, 383-6563, Mrs. Liz Kuhn, 383-0580 or Mrs. Thelma Burns, Metco Coordinator at Cohasset High School, 383-6105.

Ellen Roy Regular With Radcliffe Crew

Her middle name — Swain — may have nothing to do with it, but Cohasset's Ellen Roy has performed consistently well as a member of the Radcliffe varsity lightweight crew. The Harvard sophomore rowed from the number four seat this spring.

"It's not often that someone moves up from the second freshman boat to the first varsity in only one year," noted coach Peter Huntsman. "Ellen's improvement has really been remarkable, and she's a big reason for our optimism about the next couple of years."

The Radcliffe lights had a fine spring, notching two wins in three regattas. Perhaps their most impressive outing of the season was a narrow loss to a heavyweight crew from the University of New Hampshire in an exhibition contest. Radcliffe's only setbacks were dealt by local rival Boston University, which beat Radcliffe first head-to-head, then again in the Eastern Sprints, in which Radcliffe finished second.

An alumna of Buckingham Browne and Nichols, Roy is a Slavic Studies major at Harvard and hopes to pursue a career as a diplomat. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Roy of 438 Jerusalem Road.

DAR Award

At the monthly meeting of the Cohasset DAR held recently at the home of the Chapter Regent Mrs. Drexel Gibson, Good Citizen awards were presented to David Gunville, senior at Cohasset High School, and Mark Hammond, senior at Whitman-Hanson

Both young men were chosen for this honor by their teachers and fellow classmates.

David is the son of Mr. & Mrs. Richard Gunville of Cohasset, and will attend Stonehill College in the fall; Mark is the son of Mr. & Mrs. Ray Hammond of Hanson and will attend Massachusetts Maritime Academy.

Students Transform High School To Camelot

The Cohasset High School ninth grade medieval banquet was a panoply of period music, banners, tumblers, jesters, jousting knights and their ladies, archers and ecclesiastics.

Presided over by the king and queen of England, portrayed by Melissa Barcomb and Chris McNabb, a tournament, entertainment and a sumptuous banquet celebrated the wedding of the English princess to the prince of Spain. The king and queen of Spain were played by Sarah Froio and Michale Ellis. The students wrote the original scripts of the various events, which included a church trial and the disruptive appearance of Robin Hood and his bowmen, who jumped from the roof of the high school onto the courtyard.

The medieval celebration lasted all day and this year included a royal horse show. The horses were provide by Davenport Farm Riding Stables in Cohasset. Each year the pomp and circumstances of the affair increases, and last week it encompassed Middle English Chaucerian poetry, St. Francis and Joan of Arc; Merlin and King Arthur; Beowulf and Unferth.

In a delightful setting, with great verve and originality, the CHS Freshman class absorbed the medieval period. The students extend and enhance, with the help of their teachers, their knowledge through skits, music, colorful costumes and pageantry. A Middle Ages banquet crowns the day of revelry.

As the culmination of the Humanities, English and Art courses, history is served well and sumptuously during an eventful day in the life of the Medieval populace.

Final Clearance Flea Market Sale

Disappointed twice by rain on scheduled dates, the Cohasset Historical Society will hold a final clearance Flea Market sale Saturday, June 23, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on the grounds of the Lothrop House at 14 Summer Street.

The objective of the sale is to clear the Lothrop House of the accumulated donations of items and material so that interior restoration of the historic house can proceed. At present virtually all the space in the house is filled with bric-a-brac, furniture, books, toys, household articles, jewelry and cookware. Items will be marked down as an added inducement for final disposal of all articles.

Dealers are again being invited to participate and refreshments will be available.

National Parks And Recreation Month

By John Worley

The month of June, in a proclamation signed by President Carter, has been designated as National Parks and Recreation Month.

Recreation and the pursuit of leisure-time activities is certainly not restricted to any given time period within the year, but rather is an ongoing, 12 months per year proposition for millions of Americans. However, special emphasis is placed on recreation during the month of June to identify and place a high profile on our basic human need-recreation.

While needs and preferences for recreational activities vary from individual to individual, we all have a basic, innate need, both physically and psychologically, to partake in recreational activities of some form or another. In order to fulfill this need, Americans spend billions of dollars and considerable time seeking out leisure time activities and entertainment.

There are, however, some individuals who feel they neither have the time, money or need to recreate. While this attitude may not be prevailing in nature, it is held by a suprisingly large number of individuals. Recreation need not impose financial burden, nor does it necessarily require large allotments of time. Individuals who do not participate because of the time/money factors are depriving themselves physically, psychologically, emotionally, and culturally.

There are a multitude of recreational activities that cost little or no money. There are varying forms of leisure activities that may be tailored or adapted to one's individual and family needs and budgets.

Municipal recreation departments offer a wide spectrum in variety of structured and non-structured recreation programs, activities, and events at minimal or no cost. Also, there are thousands of federal, state, county and municipal recreational areas for specialized and passive use throughout our country.

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts alone offers approximately 2400 sites that include "intensive" recreational facilities. The Department of Environmental Management, the commonwealth's largest land holding agency, administrates 231,084 acres of recreational land and facilities. There are 566 areas within our state classified as "exceptional" natural and cultural landscape features.

The commonwealth, by virtue of geophysical and graphic placement, offers a wide range and broad scope of recreational opportunities and advantages. The Department of Environmental Management has identified the three most popular recreational activities in our state as bicycling, nature walking and swimming. It is interesting to note, and perhaps significant that all three of these activities are "lifelong" activities that require little financial encumbrance. Lifelong activities are those types of activities that do not necessarily diminish or cease because of advancing age of the participant. It is important that individuals develop "lifelong" recreational activities along with, and as a supplement to, other recreational pursuits that may have to be severely adapted or entirely abandoned as we age. After all, we spend much of our working lives preparing and planning for our retirement, likewise, an integral part of that planning should involve itself with the creative use of our extended, post retirement, leisure time.

In summary, the need to recreate is both universal and essential throughout our entire lives. Individuals of all ages are encouraged to take advantage of our multiple resources and opportunities. To this end, the Cohasset Recreation Department will offer free, individual and family consultations to any residents who wish to further explore or specifically design recreational and leisure-time activities best suited to their needs, interests, and time. Recreational habits, preferences and choices begin, as do most of our social traits, at a young age, and due consideration should begin at a young age.

Recreation knows very few, if any, boundaries in regard to content and age. It is, however, imperative that we plan our participation, determine the preferences that most appeal to us, and set aside the time needed to assure quality and continuity to one of our most basic and essential needs — recreation.

Though there have been stories over the years that Trask had arrived late for his flight out to the "Andrea Doria" and arrived at the scene in the knick of time out of sheer luck, Trask maintains that he was one of the first photographers on Nantucket. "Lady Fortuna," or her cousin "Serendipity" may have had something to do with it in the end, but Harry Trask put in a full day's work in getting that picture.

"I sat in Nantucket from 4:30 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. trying to bum rides with different aircrafts," Trask said. Because no provisions had been made to fly him any farther, he and John Dowd, a reporter on the Traveler's midnight shift, sat in the airport and watched helplessly as reporters from the Record American, the Boston Globe, the New York News and the New Bedford Standard Times flew out and back in planes their papers had chartered.

They all came back horrified at the awful scene they had witnessed — at the "Stockholm's" ripped bow and at the crippled abandoned "Andrea Doria." "I felt stupid," Trask recalled. "I just couldn't get out there."

Meanwhile Dowd kept calling the newspaper in an attempt to get an aircraft and finally made a connection with a pilot from Martha's Vineyard. The "Beachcraft Bonanza", a single-engine plane with low wings and a V-shaped tail, finally made that fateful flight.

Trask, who suffered from terrible bouts of air sickness whenever he flew, was especially leery of this plane. A few weeks before, he explained, he had met a person who had suffered a broken back when the same model airplane had crashed. "If we had trouble we were in the drink," he grimly reflected on the trip.

When the Bonanza's pilot arrived in Nantucket, he was eager to leave right away. Something told Trask to stave off the flight for a half an hour. "It was though it was written," Trask said, that he should wait that time and photograph the victims returning to Nantucket by rescue helicopters.

They finally took off around 9:30 a.m.

"I made a tactical error from the start," Trask said. "I sat up front with the pilot and at that time I weighed around 200 pounds," he said and explained that between fighting nausea and maneuvering his large speed-graphic press camera things were mighty uncomfortable.

Had he sat in the back seat he would have had more room to shoot out of the window. Yet somehow he managed to fend off the air sickness from sheer excitement, and perhaps from a premonition that what he was about to see would go down in history. But, he confessed, motioning to his chin, "It was about up to here."

When they arrived at the scene, there was a lot of traffic still lingering around the listing "Andrea Doria" and Trask decided to get the business of shooting the "Stockholm" out of the way. He shot three or four pictures of the Swedish ship and then directed the pilot over to the "Andrea Doria."

Because the wings of the plane were so low slung, Trask was forced to direct the pilot to flip the plane sideways every time he was about to take a picture so that the wing wouldn't be included in the shot.

"We were 75 feet over the water and I told him to fly in tight circles around the ship. I noticed the smokestack seemed closer to the water and within nine or 10 minutes it was all over. I took a total of about 17 pictures. All that was left was one lifeboat turned upside down and some bubbles."

Today's motorized camera's might have been able to capture the whole event on many rolls of film. Trask recorded the sinking ship with the cumbersome speed-graphic which required manual insertion of film every time a picture was shot.)

"I knew I had some good pictures," was all Trask said of his thoughts after the "Andrea Doria" went down. He flew back to Logan, made radio connection with the paper, and took a cab back to the office. The photo department was like New Year's Eve, he said, as hewasgreeted by an eager staff and the publisher.

He refrained from saying how the photos would come out until he emerged from the darkroom, where he took greater than usual precautions in developing the film.

"They're terrific!" he announced. He had captured on celluloid, in black and white, a sequence of photographs the Herald Traveler entitled "The Death of a Sea Queen." Within hours the Associated Press service had the photos and they were seen around the world that night. Those photographs and especially the key picture of the plunging ship, won Trask the Pulitzer Prize the next May.

The winning of the Pulitzer, Trask said, should be put into correct perspective. There is a considerable amount of luck involved in being in the right place at the right time.

"I was there," he said.

Practically speaking, however, Trask realized that he had a good career ahead of him. "I kept thinking," he recalled, "What an opportunity. Maybe it might happen again."

In 1957 he sought employment in New York, but came home without a job. "Thank God," he said. He is glad he stayed with the Traveler in Massachusetts, and at his lovely home on Bancroft Street where he proceeded to raise a family of seven with his wife Joan.

What else did he do? Kept on taking pictures for the paper until 1972, that's what. And what type of a photographer did he evolve into? "I was a good technician," Trask answered. "I was a guy on the staff."

That is, until he changed careers several years ago, when he became a teacher. He is now in his fifth year of teaching photography at the Jeremiah Burke High School in Dorchester.

"I was a late bloomer," Trask said. "I didn't start college until I was 35." He received a B.A. in History from the University of Massachusetts in Boston and later received a Master's Degree in Education from Bridgewater State College.

Many of the students Trask teaches have learning disabilities to some extent, he said. It is a rewarding job, he said, because photography helps them because they're interested. He also praised the young staff at the school and their knowledge of "what's going on." "The school's on the right side of Boston," Trask added, so the commute he takes up Route 3A every day doesn't consume too much gas or patience.

As for the press — well, the Herald American still receives Trask's allegiance. He thinks it's "going downhill" and becoming a feature newspaper, but it's still his paper. His advice to young people aspiring to be big newspaper photographers or journalists, is to start anywhere on any little publication.

"Nowadays you have to do something spectacular to get a job," Trask noted. He himself eased his way onto the Traveer after working eight years, first as a mail clerk and then in the darkroom, and waiting around for someone to retire or die.

As for photography, Trask wants "as little as possible" to do with it. He makes exceptions for family and friends but he doesn't want to take the time it requires. There is too much competition of the cutthroat variety in the photography field today, he feels.

The fading glossy of the doomed "Andrea Doria" and its accompanying Pulitzer Prize still grace the walls of the Trask's living room. The Graflex Diamond Award pendant awarded him for the same picture hung from his son's watch chain at the High School Prom a few weeks ago. The Boston Press Photographers Association and the Associated Press Managing Editor awards among others Trask received in 1957 are all reminders that once time and circumstance were on his side.

And as for the "Andrea Doria," she still lies beneath the ocean. Perhaps she is searching for the lost island of Atlantis.

"Way down beneath the ocean, where she may be,she may be. Way down beneath the ocean, where I long to be, she may be."

Three Police Cruisers In Five Town Chase

Three police cruisers participated in a five town chase of a blue Porsche late Tuesday after the vehicle was spotted speeding on Jerusalem Road.

The chase originated when Officer David Pomerico attempted to stop the vehicle, occupied by two males, for speeding. It was behind another vehicle which would not stop and the driver lost control and bounced off a couple of poles while driving an estimated 80 miles an hour, said Pomerico.

Traveling the back roads the car went through parts of Hull and Hingham in West Corner, down Cedar Street to King Street to Route 3A; back onto King Street to Beechwood Street, where it ran up over part of the ball field. The chase continued into Scituate and Norwell where the driver got away.

Officers Brian Cogill and Richard Abbadessa attempted to cut the car off on Route 3A, said Pomerico. It was an early model bue Porsche with primer spots, he said. The license number was being checked with registry officials at press time.

"For the grace of God, non one was hurt, no children were run down," commented Officer Pomerico.

Cohasset Move-up Plan

The Cohasset Move-up Plan is designed to introduce students to teachers and classes for the following school year. Its intent is to relieve youngsters of anxieties in June rather than September as students become aware of their new assignments, new teachers, and/or new school building.

The plan is particularly appropriate for kindergarten students since June 15 becomes somewhat like the first day of their school year. It has special significance as well for current third and sixth graders as they are introduced to new school settings for the next academic year. Secondary students grades 7-11 will be taking final examinations and because of their familiarity with building and staff will not be included in orientation programs.

Rotary Presents $5500 In Awards

The Cohasset Rotary Club scholarship awards presented on class night included $5500 in scholarships to nine recipients of the graduating class of the high school.

Being a club of only 24 members, this is an outstanding achievement.

Recipients of the scholarships were: David P. Gunville $500, Mark Young $1000, Brian Conlan $500, Joselyn A. Kennedy $500, Gerda M. Cahill $750, Barbara A. Curelli $500, William E. Roy $500, Matthew J. Salerno $500 and Andrew N. Trask $750.

'Children's Art Week'

"Children's Art Week" sponsored by the South Shore Art Center promises to be a creative fun-filled activity for children between the ages of 7-12 every morning from 10:30 to 12 noon June 25 through June 29.

Enrollments are now being taken at the Center Office. Classes will take place in Cohasset.

Teacher Pamela Hoss will guide the children in exploring a variety of media including painting and sketching outdoors when weather permits. Ms. Hoss received her BFA from SMU and has taught art in the Rockland High School. She has exhibited at the Providence Art Club, Brockton Art Center and at Roger Williams College.

Planning Board Approves Application

With a favorable report from the Planning Board and no citizen objection the Board of Appeals approved application of Frederick Higgins for a special permit to add a two story addition 12 by 24 feet and new porch at 251 King St.

The property did not comply with the front yard setback under by-laws.

The Board also has denied the application of Edward Nyren for a variance from the 30-foot setback to 20 feet at 51 Jerusalem Road. Nyren proposed the variance in order to make use of a retaining wall to build up the front yard and permit installation of a septic system.

A number of citizens present opposed the application because of traffic problems in the are

Beechwood Church Has Been Very Busy

The last couple of weeks have been busy for the Beechwood Congregational Church.

On June 3, two special events took place.

First, new cranberry choir robes with white collars were worn and dedicated.

Second was a surprise 50th Wedding Reception for Mr. & Mrs. Whitford Merritt following church services. The Merritts have been long time members of the Beechwood Church with Merritt's mother organist there at one time.

Whit Merritt, once a trustee, now is trustee emeritus, and May Merritt was past Sunday School Teacher and Moderator. Both have held responsible positions in the church and have added to the Christian spirit of the church.

Many people including their daughter Lois Barnes and family from Conn. attended the reception.

After the reception line, refreshments which included coffee, tea, punch, sandwiches, cookies, squares and, of course, the traditional wedding cake was enjoyed by all.

Many gifts including a money tree were presented the Merritts.

On Friday June 8, our 3rd annual Antique Show and Sale was held at Town Hall. One's first impression upon entering the Hall is a fleeting step into the past. The beautiful dishes, sparkling cut glass, silver, utensils, clocks, materials, jewelry, dolls and furniture are an era when craftsmen took real pride in their work.

The 24 dealers represented in the show were more than willing to tell you about any particular item in question.

Over 400 attended the show which lasted for two days.

The success of the show takes the combined effort of many people. Thanks to go the Selectmen for granting use of the Town Hall, Police Chief Feola for overseeing the building, Cohasset churches and Mount Hope for lending tables, Second Congregational Church for use of its hall and kitchen, Wire Inspector for putting up additional lights, Town Hall custodian for his time and cooperation, the dealers and the many workers, friends and members of the Beechwood Church who helped make this year's Antique Show our best financial success.

The Victorian Crazy Quilt was won by Ernie Hawkesworth. The antique basket and plant was won by Eileen Pape and dinner for two at the Red Lion Inn was won by Linda Graves.

Enrollments For Summer Art

Enrollments for Summer Art Classes are now being taken at the South Shore Art Center at 103 Ripley Road. A six-week term plus special short workshops allow both the serious student and the recreational artist to receive professional instruction in a variety of disciplines. The term begins the week of July 9th with most classes ending August 17th.

Credit courses through Mass. College of Art meet in three hour sessions with home assignments and critiques for those electing to take the credit. Transcripts are held at MassArt and may be requested by the student. These courses may also be taken without credit for a lower fee. Courses available are Sculpture with Polly Egelson meeting on Mondays from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. for eight weeks.

Art Anatomy-Drawing will meet with John Lanza twice a week on Monday and Wednesday from 7:15 to 10:15 p.m. for four weeks.

David Tandy will teach Introductory Painting on Tuesdays and Thursday from 7:15 to 10:15 p.m. for eight sessions in four weeks.

An Outdoor Drawing and Painting Workshop with Rosalind Farbush will meet daily July 9-13 from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

Two special workshops will take place, the first a minicourse in Raku Miniatures with Syma Komarin and the second Landscape Painting with Margaret Dillon. Raku will meet for four sessions on Tuesdays and Thursdays July 10-19. Landscape painting will meet twice a week on Tuesdays and Thursdays from Aug. 7-23 for a total of six sessions.

Drawing and painting classes will meet once a week for six weeks. Basic drawing and painting with Virginia Moore meets on Mondays from 7:30 to 10 p.m.

Portraiture with Clement Micarelli will meet Tuesdays.

Watercolor will meet Wednesdays with Virginia Avery from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

Oriental Brush Painting with Douglas Orr meets Thursday evenings.

Creative drawing and painting with Louise Kalish will meet Fridays from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

Photography is offered on beginning, intermediate and advanced levels with three instructors. New instructor Paul Fortin will teach Beginning Photography on Mondays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. for six sessions. Intermediate - Advanced Photography is taught by Linda Wasko. One Day Photography Workshop with Time/Life Photographer Peter Anderson is a rare opportunity for advanced and professional photographers. The Saturday, July 28 Day will meet from 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. for an intensive session at Anderson's Hull studio. Individual Darkroom is again offered for photographers in 2-hour sessions who want to work on their own; students sign-up for time in the Center Office.

Children's Art Week will meet daily June 25-29 with teacher Pamela Hoss open to ages 7-12 at the Conservatory starting July 9 with Creative Clay taught by Dorie Weintraug and Painting and Drawing taught by George Hancin.

"Silly Soup" Plays July 1

The South Shore Art Center announces that the Theatre Olio production of "Silly Soup" will be presented July 1 at 2 p.m. at the Parish House of the Unitarian Church in Cohasset Center, in conjunction with the 24 Annual South Shore Art Festival.

"Silly Soup," for kids little and big, is a collection of six zany short plays by Carol Korty.

"Silly Soup" is about noodles or noodleheads — happy, zany simpletons who do outlandishly crazy things with the utmost seriousness. These noodlehead plays are drawn from traditional tales about Mad Merry Men of Gothan, which originated in medieval England, and about the Wise Men of Chelm of Polish Yiddish culture. The plays were originally developed through improvisation and experimentation.

Garden Club President Feted

Mrs. Eli Manchester, president of the Cohasset Garden Club, was presented with a bouquet of flowers by the children of the Joseph Osgood School during the Arbor Day celebration. The Garden Club has completed a two-year landscaping project on the grounds of the school. The children gathered around a brightly colored maypole, holding streamers and singing songs they prepared for the ocassion. The flag was raised as they sang "Your're A Grand Old Flag." Songs were played on xylophones. The second graders sand "Friendly Neighbors" in honor of the Garden Club. Third graders sang the poem, "Woodmen, Spare That Tree" as the girls danced about the maypole, decked out in flowers in their hair and about their waists. The children sang "Winter is Over, Comes the Month of May," and "Woodley."

The 24th Annual South Shore Arts Festival will be held this year from June 30 to July 8 at the South Shore Art Center. The juried show includes the categories of oils, acrylics, drawings, prints, watercolors, pastels, sculpture, photography and original crafts. The festival will be held at the center instead of the Common, as in previous years, in part because of the expense of renting tents.

Appearing in the presentation "You're A Good Man, Charlie Brown" at Hingham High School on June 9 as Snoopy will be Linton Young of Linden Drive.

Art Preview

The Champagne Preview for the 24th Annual South Shore Art Festival will be held Saturday, June 30 at the South Shore Art Center.

It will be a preview of the award winning works of art as well as of two one act plays to be presented by the Cohasset Drama Club under the direction of Ron Emmons, Kenje Ogata, a folksinger from Cambridge will also be performing.

Gerald G. Fall Sr.

A funeral mass was celebrated Saturday in St. Mary of the Assumption Church in Hull for Gerald G. Fall Sr., 82, of Cohasset, who died last Thursday in South Shore Hospital after a short illness.

Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Mr. Fall was born in Boston and attended Boston schools. He lived in Lexington until moving to Cohasset 17 years ago.

Mr. Fall was a retired accountant for the Continental Bakery Inc. of Boston.

An Army veteran of World War II, Mr. Fall belonged to the American Legion in Boston.

Husband of the late Mrs. Theresa Fall, Mr. Fall leaves two sons, Gerald Jr. of Texas and Robert of California; three daughters, Mrs. Evelyn Sanborn of California, Mrs. Barbara McPherson of Medway and Mrs. Constance Catrambone of Cohasset; 20 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Register For Summer Recreation Programs

COHASSET RECREATION DEPARTMENT SUMMER PLAYGROUND AND YOUTH TENNIS REGISTRATIONS

Registrations for 6-12 year-old full-day Playground Program, the four and five-year old half day Playground Program, and Summer Youth Tennis (age 9-16), will be held at the Recreation Office, Town Hall at the following days and times.

A six-page, detailed information and schedule sheet, depicting all summer programs, weekly movies, band concerts, and special events is now available at the Recreation Department office.

TUESDAY, JUNE 19 TO FRIDAY, JUNE 22

PLAYGROUND PROGRAM REGISTRATIONS: 9 a.m.-12 noon ONLY! Four and five-year old half day program. (Four years old as of April 1, 1979, not yet six years old as of June 30, 1979) Regular full day program ages six years to 12 years, Town Hall Lobby.

TUESDAY, JUNE 19 TO FRIDAY, JUNE 22

YOUTH TENNIS LESSONS REGISTRATIONS: 2 p.m.-4 p.m. ONLY! Ages 9-16 years, Town Hall Lobby.

MONDAY, JUNE 25

PLAYGROUND PROGRAMS BEGIN: 9 a.m.-Osgood School, both programs. Four and five-year old program ends at 12 noon, regular program ends at 3 p.m.

MONDAY, JUNE 25

YOUTH TENNIS PROGRAM BEGINS: Monday/Wednesday classes (Check your assigned class time).

AND TUESDAY, JUNE 26

TUESDAY/THURSDAY CLASSES

BASIC PLAYGROUND OUTLINE
6-12 YEAR OLD PLAYGROUND PROGRAM

Monday, Wednesday, and Fridays — Swim Time at Cohasset Swim Center, 11 a.m.-12 noon. Tuesdays — special event/field trip days (as indicated). Thursdays — Music Circus Days. No playground/tennis programs on Independence Day holiday.

FOUR AND FIVE YEAR OLD PLAYGROUND PROGRAM

This year the Recreation Department will offer a half-day (9 a.m.-12 noon) four and five year old playground program. The program and format will be much the same as the full-day (9 a.m.-3 p.m., 6-12 year old) program, but will be essentially independent of the older program except in cases of some special events.

In order for this program to be a success, we will need support from parents and would request each mother with a child in the half day program, volunteer a minimum of one (1) morning per week to help out with activities. Also, we would like to see junior and senior high school students, who enjoy working with young children and would like a supervised experience doing so, volunteer a few hours per week to help out. Volunteers may call the Recreation Office for details.

Not unlike the 6-12 year old program, the four and five year olds will be offered a variety of low-organized games, group activities, arts and crafts, team sports and many special activities, geared to their age level. The program will be structured and offer as many different activities as possible.

'Pirates' Are Coming

The Pirates of Penzance, comic opera by Gilbert and Sullivan, will be presented Thursday June 14 at 7:30 at the Cohasset Town Hall by the Choir of the Second Congregational Church. Ellen Fryling is directing and Joan Kenny is the choreographer.

Forty members of the church are involved in scenery painting and construction under Murray Campbell. The lighting is by Clark Young, costumes by Betty Myers, makeup by Beth Goff, properties by Michael Beamajian, curtain, Robbie Broeffle, and original touches by Rev. John Benbow.

A home-made strawberry dessert will be served the audience after the performance in the Church next door with Taffy Nothnagle and Marilyn Adams, hostesses.

Tickets will be available at the door for a minimum donation of $1.50.

Introduction

Ahhh, summer at last! Lemonade and hammocks under a shady tree are back in style. No more woolies and snow shovels, just weekend sails at dusk and lazy days on the beach.

By the sea, how happy we'll be..three carefree months of sand beneath our toes and suntans in our clothes; fish to catch and eat fresh from their natural habitat.

And there's no better place to enjoy the summer than in the towns that hug the shoreline South of Boston. The coastal towns that attract yearly vacationers from all over the country, are naturals for summer fun and entertainment. Nature provides the sand and sea and the South Shore provides the recreation. Everything from fishing party boats to open-air concerts can be found in the summer playground that nestles by the sea.

From Memorial Day to Labor Day, the area is bustling with things to do and places to see. Drop in on a strawberry festival and sample the fruit we only dream of in January. Visit an Antiques and Horribles show or one of the many festivals that are plentiful during the summer months. Or take an historical tour in the place where America began by visiting the many historical houses and buidings in towns incorporated in the early 17th century.

The fishing is great whether it's from the end of a dock or from a party boat. Take a sailing lesson or enjoy a shore dinner from a table overlooking the ocean.

It's all here just waiting to be sampled and enjoyed. Summer on the South Shore...ahhhh, at last!

The Summer Focus is your guide to what's happening in the coastal towns during the summer months. We've made every effort to give an accurate account of where to shop, dine, fish, boat, swim, camp, and play . . . where to enjoy summer art and culture, crafts, nature, historical sites and more.

To guide you through the summer events listed in Summer Focus, we've engaged the services of a summer bird who will be your host for this special issue. We hope this bird's eye views and our's helps to make your summer a completely enjoyable experience.

The Fishing Scene

by David Cutler

There are enough cliches in fishing to fill a Swampscott Dory but there are two worth considering.

Ten per cent of the fishermen catch 90 per cent of the fish. Write that down and tuck it inside your tackle box next to the plastic worms or the No. 2 sinkers.

Cliche number two, the corollary asks you to believe that fishing, unlike bowling, is a pristine, passive affair made for those who pretend the lawnmower is broken so they can snooze in the hammock. Cliche number two is bunk.

While the rest of us ask "What's biting?" the 10 per centers study temperatures, times and tides. When the action slows, they move or change technique. They don't keep "non keepers" and they don't saddle up to those who are catching fish. Ten per centers tend to be loners, knowing that fishing is not a committee undertaking.

Some people think of polo as the elitist sport in this country. Nonsense! The real snobs of the world wear funny hats and carry $400 bamboo fly rods. They're surf men who work the beaches at night and sneer at the "Pilgrims" who struck out at the same place that afternoon. They're the men and women who chase the giant bluefin tuna and complain about the one fish-per-boat-per-day rule set down by the boys in Washington.

You haven't met a snob until you greet the blank stare of the gent with a couple of bull stripers slung over his shoulder and ask "Where?"

"Out there," he says thumbing to the North Atlantic.

He means, "Find out for yourself rookie."

And he's right too. Even some condescending advice from a ten per center won't help much if you don't pay attention to the rules. In summer, Massachusetts offers among the best fishing in the world, and if you are new or not yet counted among the elite, here is a sample of what's available.

FRESH WATER

Trout? You missed them. It being June, most of the rainbows and browns stocked by the Division of Fisheries and Wildlife have gone deep. The best advice is to wait until the fall when trout fishing reaches its peak (that's a hint from a ten per center).

If you insist on trout now, try some of the ponds in Myles Standish State Park, Plymouth, or on the Cape which just happens to have the best trout fishing in Massachusetts. The hatch will be out in mid June and that bodes well for fly fishermen. Otherwise, you must get yourself a boat and troll deep. Early morning catches from the shore will yield little.

Outside of Plymouth and its suburbs (Carver & Plympton), there is not good trout fishing on the South Shore other than a few brookies in the South River (Marshfield) or in Scituate's Bound Brook. The Jones River in Kingston, holds sea-run brown trout but again, wait until the fall.

For "sweetwater" anglers this is the time for bass, and the bass fishing is best in Plymouth and on the Cape. Don't overlook Jacob's Pond in Norwell, the upper North River or some of the ponds in Wamptauck State Park. Largemouths are your prey and will take to plastic worms worked slowly or "jerked" from the bottom. Choose stumpy areas.

Pickerel are most everywhere. So are sun fish; and the upper North River is loaded with white perch. Smallmouth bass can be found in some Cape ponds, but you'll do better in Quabbin Reservoir. Horn pout (tastey) and bluegills (ugh!) are also plentiful in local waters.

Largemouths provide most of the action, however. There are a lot of small, privately-owned ponds on the South Shore that contain bass weighing up to seven pounds but I can't mention them for fear of alienating subscribers. Instead, find a pond owner and make yourself friendly.

And for those with vision, we remind you that the New England record for largemouth bass — 15½ pounds — was taken from a pond in Carver. Forget which one, but there are many choice places to try down there if you don't mind a trip to the hinterlands.

Don't try anything in freshwater without obtaining a fishing license from your local town clerk.

SALT WATER

The pickings are better in the salt and will stay that way throughout the summer.

Be quick and you can catch yourself some codfish from most anywhere: in Plymouth and Duxbury Bays, off the Gurnet, Green Harbor, the North River, the cliffs and the Glades. Anywhere along the coast. Cod are a cold water fish and are moving deep now, but they're still available. Clams and seaworms will work, providing you stay on the bottom. Jig when you go deep.

Pollock, another cold water fish, are an unsung species that deserve their status — bland taste and bland fight. But they're available most everywhere as well and will accept seaworms, a clam or a slowly trolled lure at night. Go heavy on the seasoning when you get them into the baking pan.

Mackerel used to be plentiful until they were mauled by bluefish and gobbled up by foreign fishing fleets. Optimists say they have made a comeback over the past two summers, so perhaps this season will see a return. Mackerel show up when the water warms and put up a worthy fight on light tackle. They will accept a seaworm, but a mackerel jig works better. Keep it about mid depth. Mackerel meat, though dark, has a pleasant flavor if the cook can cook.

More important, however, is the fact that mackerel make wonderful bait for striped bass.

Forget the bluefin tuna or the swordfish. The king of the game fish around here is the striper. It is the mystique fish of New England, and if your territory includes the Cape and the Islands, nowhere is there better striper fishing in the world. But you must know what you're doing. If you don't, hire someone who does.

In June, small stripers — the schoolies — arrive up and down the coast. Try small plugs — Rebels or buck tails — in Plymouth or Duxbury Bays and if they don't work, try drifting with seaworms. You can also troll with plastic tubes or hoochies. Always fish the incoming or outgoing tides.

Stripers will roam wherever there are baitfish, so that means the entire coast is your hunting ground. The North River will offer as much as anyplace on the South Shore, though you would do well not to overlook Hull Gut, the South River and Boston Harbor.

Striper fishing around the Boston Harbor Islands is usually best at night. In Cohasset, check on those boulders pushing through the surf and keep checking them out. Eventually you'll succeed.

Should you fail locally, try the Cape: Barnstable Harbor, the Race Provincetown, off the Pamet River and in Buzzards Bay. If that doesn't work, try the rips between Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket and if that fails take up golf.

Whatever you do, hurry. Striper fishing is best in June and won't peak again until the fall.

Other species. Well, we have tautog which is supposed to be a Rhode Island fish but doesn't seem to know that. Small, nuisance tautog are all along the rocky coast. Bigger ones are available in Duxbury Bay. If you fish the Clark's Island Channel on the outgoing tide. Try drifting seaworms.

Flounder are omnipresent and easy to catch. Use a speck of a seaworm on a small hook and get down on the bottom. If there's nothing there, move on. Best bet, aside from Boston Harbor, is the North River on the incoming tide. If you absolutely can't afford the price of a seaworm, shine a cranberry for bit. Flounder will go for cranberries, the scientists say so.

What else? Squeteage or weakfish are in Buzzards Bay and more likely farther south. You may bump into one locally but don't tell the wife you're going for weakfish off Cohasset Harbor. She'll suspect something. Bluefin tuna will be here in July for those who can afford the chase, and for the super rich, there are swordfish off Nantucket.

For the rest of us, when the striper fishing slows and we tire of picking up flounder, there is the almighty bluefish.

Pound for pound, the bluefish is the most vicious fish in the world. When those marauding schools move up the coast, nothing gets in the way. Pesticides have been blamed for reducing the striper population in recent years and the charge is true, but bluefish are to blame as well. As magnificient as they are, striped bass do not hang around when the massive schools of blues move in as they have over the past seven or eight years.

Blues are everywhere too and will take most anything. You can troll for them at any level; you catch them on top with a popping plug. They'll gobble seaworms, mackerel or any other bait fish you offer. A couple of years ago, one boy caught a blue on a hotdog.

If you do any kind of serious fishing this summer, you will eventually run into a school of bluefish. And if it's blues you crave when the doldrums set in around late July, get a boat to Race Point and troll. You'll haul in a boatload. If you have never caught a bluefish before, be careful. They are armed with sharp teeth that can snip off a finger.

A lot of ten per centers damn the blue for chasing away the bass and other species. The indictment is true but why bother about it. Bluefish are here and want to stay. They put up a fierce fight when hooked, and aside from the striper, are the best game fish we have.

Good fishing.

Safety on the Water

By Bucky Yardume

Safety on the water is paramount.

Anyone venturing on any body of water broader than a bath tub hopefully has boned up on one of many Coast Guard, Powerboat Squadron and other safety courses.

So they should know and remember the 'rules of the road'...the use of seagoing 'safety belts,' namely lifejackets...never overcrowding boat capacity...observing safe speeds... staying attuned to weather forecasts and foul weather signals...never 'hotdogging.'

One rule of thumb for safe boat capacity is maximum weight of 7.5 times the beam times the length times the depth, including motor.

Some other tips...

Block your car wheels on launching ramps. Saw a 4 x 4 length of lumber lengthwise on the diagonal for a block and carry two for wheel chocks.

Also while trailing, anticipate stops and bumps and allow ample room for easy stopping.

Even the smallest rowboat should be equipped with a flashlight for night use (and make sure it's working).

Sailboats also should have running lights at night which should be unobstructed when the boat is heeled.

Stop engines when water skiers are boarding the boat or entering water.

Stand and drain all trapped cooling water from outboards before putting it down.

A simple metal reflector aloft makes it easier for radar equipped ships to spot you, if you're way out.

Speaking of way out, discretion is the better part of valor. Putting out to sea in a cockleshell just isn't smart.

Also, the state safety motto for the highway — 'A little courtesy won't kill you' — holds on the waterways, too.

Bike Trails

A favorite biking area is the Myles Standish State Forest, Plymouth, where there are 16 miles of paved bikeways on three separate trails. One option is the Eastern route, which comes to a fork after 3/4 of a mile. The right hand trail, by far the most popular, circles two ponds, the first of which has a snack bar.

The left hand fork will take you all the way out to the eastern entrance of Myles Standish. Bikers may also take the Western route, which goes out past Fearing Pond and has a few nice stopping areas and places to go swimming.

Maps of the trails are available at Myles Standish Headquarters, and organized tours of the bikeaways in Myles Standish and other locations may be arranged by contacting the Bike Center in Duxbury or Bikeaways in Marshfield.

Wompatuck State Forest in Hingham has eight miles of bike trails. The best place to begin is at the Visitor's Center, about 100 yards from the entrance to the forest. The paths are all paved, and are approximately eight feet wide.

Clambake

A clambake on the beach, served with equal amounts of sand, sea and good company is still the most delectable seafood dinner.

Many beaches in the area require permits for cooking on the beach. Information may be obtained through local Chambers of Commerce and town halls.

First, dig a shallow pit one foot deep, four feet square bedded with stones about eight inches in diameter with smaller stones to fill in the crevices. Over this go hardwood logs of maple or oak and in between paper, kindling and more pebbles.

Then add more logs laid crosswise, more paper, and stones. Lay layer upon layer of this mixture until it reaches about three feet above ground. The fire is lighted some four hours before the bake goes on. Cooking time is one hour and 15 minutes.

At the end of four hours, the unburned logs are raked away to avoid oversmoking. The small rocks now white with heat have dropped to ground level. Waiting is a stack of seaweed freshly gathered, to be forked to the rock in a 12 inch deep blanket. It's the weed that produces the humid heat experts insist no other method can generate.

Now for the mouth-watering part. The first layer is white or sweet potatoes, unpeeled. Over this, go clams in wooden frames or fish net squares. Next, sweet corn, one and one-fourth ears by nose count. Leave on thin jacket of husk and remove the silk. Wet the corn well.

Then come the lobsters tied in burlap sacks, one and one-fourth the average count to each guest. Top the pile with the appetite-whetting course, frankfurts or sausage, wrapped in foil.

This mountain of food is covered with a wet canvas and the edge sealed with sand or earth. Wait for an hour and 15 minutes while the hot rocks and the salty steam from the marsh work and the clams do their work. The seaweed scorches on the hot rocks and steam heat pours upward to the clams. They open their shells and the juice trickles down over the rocks. The increased steam pushes up, cooking the potatoes, corn and lobster. After each course, recover the remaining food.

For the best kind of New England "dig-in," it can't be beat!

Town Facts

Marshfield
Governor Edward Winslow, given a large grant for farming in 1628, was Marshfield's first settler. The town was incorporated in 1640. One of the first public schools was built in 1645. Peregrine White, who was born aboard the Mayflower, lived here after his marriage and later Daniel Webster lived and maintained an office here. After its marshes were drained in the 19th century, Marshfield became a farming center, with cranberries and strawberries its most important crops. Now it is a residential and summer resort area with several historic buildingsd and sites.

Scituate
Scituate was settled in 1628, independently of Plymouth, by merchant adventurers from Kent. The town was incorporated in 1636. Early industries were fishing, milling, brickmaking and ship building. The Columbia, the first American vessel to sail around the world, was built here. Scituate's picturesque harbor is an attraction for many year-round visitors.

Norwell
Norwell was originally a part of Scituate. It was settled in 1634 and a sawmill was built in 1656. It became a separate town in 1849. The abundance of oak led to the manufacture of trunks and boxes in the 19th century. Today, you will find some of the finest examples of colonial architecture in Norwell.

Cohasset
A breathtaking drive combining huge lovely homes with rugged coastline and a historic harbor portrays the town of Cohasset. Browse through a village of quaint shops, fine restaurants and historical museums. Enjoy weekend carillon concerts, art shows and hiking trails with everything highlighted on a walking trail map. From June to September, big-name entertainment for all is under the stars at the South Shore Music Circus.

Hanover
Settled in 1649, Hanover was part of Scituate. It was incorporated in 1727, named for King George I of the ruling house of Hanover. Luddamm's Ford on the North River, was the site of the early grist mills and late of the iron forge where the major of the frigate Constitution (Old Ironsides) was cast. Many small sailing vessels were built here in the late 18th and early 19th centuries.

Hingham
Hingham was deeded by the Algonquin Indians to the English settlers in 1633. It was named in 1635 for a town in England from which a number of the settlers had com. Corn, saw and grist mills were built here as early as 1643 and in 1703 an iron works was established. Shipbuilding and fishing became important early in the 19th century; at one time more than 75 fishing vessels sailed out of Hingham. It is now a lovely residential village with winding, tree-shaded streets, and several historic buildings.

Hull
The first building in this area was a trading post erected by traders from Plymouth. Because of its fine sheltered harbor and beach, it became a major fishing center even before its incorporation in 1647. In 1630, it was taxed one-eleventh of the total Boston tax because of the large amount of fish brought in. Today, its harbor and beach make it a popular resort.

Kingston
Kingston was first visited in 1603 by Martin Pring, who saw an Indian village and gardens sown with tobacco and maize. Pilgrim explorers visited it and land grants were made in the area in 1627. It became a separate town in 1725, and the first bog iron smelter was established here a year later. The first American naval vessel, the Independence. was built here and commissioned in 1776. A Kingston inventor, Jesse Reed, revolutionized the tack and nail industry and also developed a prototype of the modern method for steering ships.

Pembroke

Settled in 1650 as an Indian outpost by a trader who bought it from the Indians for a quart of wine, Pembroke was originally of Duxbury and Marshfield. Milling and shipbuilding were important industries and an iron mill was built in 1702. It became a town in 1712. Today Pembroke is a residential town, with some manufacturing.

Plymouth

Explore America's home town where it all began. Visitors can set their own pace as they leisurely stroll from site to site and relax in the 17th century atmosphere that is the heart of this historical town.

Start your day, as early as 9 a.m., at the State Pier. Climb aboard the Mayflower II, a full-scale reproduction of the type of vessel that brought the 102 settlers from England on a 66 day voyage. Guides in period costumes answer questions and demonstrate 17th century skills. Open daily April through November.

Nearby, visit a replica of the "first house," view Plymouth Rock and stroll through "Brewster Gardens."

Climb the 37 steps to the top of Cole's Hill, site of the town's first tavern. Enjoy the panoramic view of Plymouth Harbor and beyond.

Plymouth Wax Museum (on Cole's Hill) has more than 150 characters in 27 lifelike scenes depicting the Pilgrim story in light, sound and animation. Open daily from March through November.

North of the Town Wharf area, Ocean Spray's Cranberry World illustrates the history of America's native berry from Colonial times to the present. There are indoor and outdoor exhibits, free admission and free product samples. Open April through November.

For the piece de resistance, visit the Plimouth Plantation, three miles south of Plymouth Rock, on Route 3A.

In the Pilgrim village, you leave today behind and enter the world of 1627. In dress, speech, manner and attitude, the villagers you meet portray actual residents of the original settlement. Always busy with seasonal activities — shearing sheep, tending gardens, preserving foods — they gladly make time to welcome visitors. Whether they're hard at work or entertaining themselves with games, dances and songs, you're welcome to watch — and to join in.

Nearby, you can encounter another 17th century culture. In the Wampanoag Summer Settlement (open May 15 - October 15), Native Americans recreate the lifestyle of their ancestors at the time the Pilgrims reached the New World. Depending on the weather and season, members of the community may be planting crops, catching fish, preserving food or relaxing after a game of dice.

Summer Sunday

What began as a prelude to the Bicentennial has bloomed into a perennial prelude to summer in Norwell.

But Sunday Round the Common, which will mark its fifth year July 1, also has come to attract neighbors from Hanover, Scituate, Hingham, Cohasset, Marshfield and environs.

The lure is a day of old-fashioned fair-atmosphere and fun — an aura carefully nurtured by the sponsoring Chamber of Commerce so cognizant of the motif, it restricts sale of alcoholic beverages to only the reservation-only supper.

It's a family day which means lots of things for the kids, and the setting is so attuned.

An ecumenical service at 11 a.m. opens 'The Sunday' at historic First Parish Church.

No such festivity would be complete without a parade. And there is one starting at noon from United hurch of Christ on Rte. 123 (Main St.) with the line of march East down Rte. 123 to the Center Common.

The parade is perhaps best described as homey rather than sophisticated in keeping with the Bicentennial motif which spawned the affair.

There are bands...floats...horse-backers gaily decorated like their mounts...bikes also decked out to a fair-thee-well...fire trucks with sirens awail...antique cars, polished and nostalgic with horns honking squeakily ...Scouts...4Hers...and, of course, a politico or two since, after all, who can resist a parade?

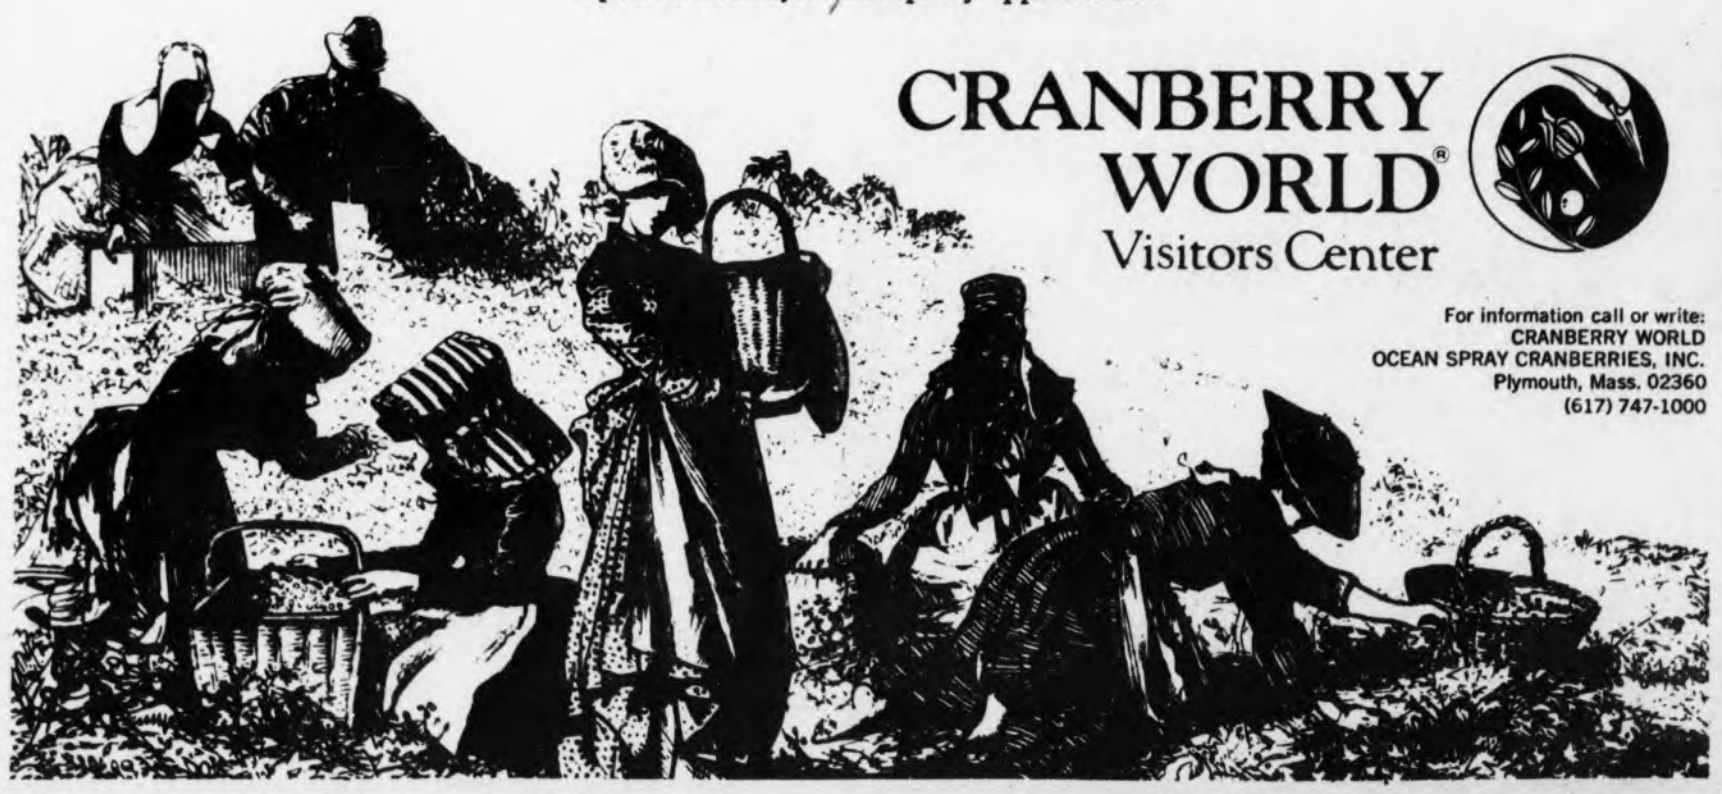
The Center and surrounding areas then become the scene for activities all day long, not the least of which is the opportunity to meet old friends, both from in-town and out, and make new ones.

There are band concerts on the Common green . . . booths all over the place offering everything from a side variety of festive food and drink to painted tattoos, balloons, plants, arts and crafts, mementos and much more.

Frivolity includes the many games... a dunking booth...dart games...pony and haywagon rides...and under Recreation Department auspices, two solid hours of games oriented for children.

Part of the fun is the raffle with over 100 prizes including the piece de resistance this year — a Moped and a canoe.

The supper — as stated, by reservation only — this year features a clambake/lobster feed under a gay tent in the shadow of First Parish's ancient spire.



And in the early evening, there is a street square dance before the curtain finally falls on a day right out of yesteryear.

It is a Sunday to remember.

Historic Houses

Summer on the South Shore includes at least one historical tour of the many fine buildings and houses in the area. Simple 17th century dwellings dating back to the Pilgrims, handsome mansions of the 18th century and the dignified homes of the 1800's are open to the public during the summer time on a regular basis.

by Nina Belsan

There's something magical, almost mystical about things of the past. A house, an old barn, an attic filled with treasures from another time, are fascinating attractions that draw our attention and curiousity.

Walking through the rooms of a 17th century house, one can almost feel how its inhabitants lived and went about their daily chores. The brick fireplace looms large and substantial in the rustic kitchen where the colonial housewife worked for many long hours. Utensils she used to bake bread, preserve garden vegetables, wash clothes and spin flax into linen, seem energized from her constant use.

Candle molds appear ready for another batch of hot tallow to be in readiness for the dark, winter months ahead. In the neatly austere bedroom, handsome quilts, meticulously embroidered, lay spread across a rough-hewn bed. An old Bible, it pages yellow from a golden age, lies silent beside the bed.

Outside, a patch of ground where rosemary and thyme, tarragon and basil once grew, is reverently marked.

Nowhere can history better narrate the story of people than in the houses where they lived, worked and prayed.

We are fortunate to be able to investigate the magical, mystical things of the past by visiting the many historical houses available on the South Shore. The 17th and 18th century people who settled in towns such as Plymouth, Duxbury, Marshfield, Scituate, Cohasset and Hingham left their characteristic mark in the homes that are now part of our historical heritage.

The Jabez Howland House in Plymouth (1667), is the only house where members of the Pilgrim group are known to have lived. It contains a fine collection of 17th and 18th century furnishings. The Major John Bradford House in Kingston provides an unusual opportunity to glimpse first hand the day-by-day life of the early colonists as early crafts are demonstrated in the house that was built in 1674.

The Jacobs Farm (mid 18th century) in Norwell, is a fine example of farm property in the 1700's. The Richard Sparrow house built in 1640, is said to be the oldest house in Plymouth; the John Alden House in Plymouth was built in 1653 by the third son of Priscilla and John Adlen.

The Mann Farmhouse in Scituate has a 17th century foundation which was added to in the 18th century. It housed five generations of the Mann family and contains artifacts dating to the 1600's. The King Caesar House in Duxbury, 1809, is a classic example of Federal period architecture featuring rare scenic wallpapers imported from France.

John Alden House — 1653
105 Alden Street, Duxbury, Mass. Built by the third son of John and Priscilla Alden. The Alden family owned the property until the early 20th century when it was deeded to the Alden Kindred of America. Open June through Labor Day. 934-2788

King Caesar House — 1809

Major John Bradford House — 1674
Landing Road, Kingston, Mass. An unusual opportunity to glimpse at first hand the day-to-day life of the early colonists. Early crafts are demonstrated and the visitor is able to see how 17th and 18th century people stored their food, cooked their meals, wove their clothes and brought up their children. Open June 15 through Labor Day. 585-4652

Winslow House — 1699
Careswell Street, Marshfield, Mass. Good example of early New England architecture furnished with fine period pieces. Daniel Webster's law office is here as well as an old Marshfield coach. Open July 1 through Labor Day. 834-7329

Richard Sparrow House — 1640
42 Summer Street, Plymouth, Mass. Said to be the oldest house in Plymouth (1640). The Plymouth Pottery Guild operates on the premises and its members act as hostesses and display ceramics made there by hand and wheel. 746-4624. May through September

Jabez Howland House — 1667
Sandwich Street, Plymouth, Mass. Added on to in the 18th century, this is the only house where the members of the pilgrim group are known to have lived. The Howland house shows a fine collection of 17th and 18th century furnishings and is staffed by host esses in costume. May through September. 746-7737

Harlow Old Fort House — 1667
119 Sandwich Street, Plymouth, Mass. Built with framing timbers from the original fort. A working 17th century household; demonstrations of weaving, candle-dipping, and spinning. Audience participation. May through September, 746-0012

Old Oaken Bucket Homestead — 1675

Fairs &

Massachusetts is the place where the country fair got its reputation and in the summer time, the part of Massachusetts along the coastline boasts many fairs and festivals exhibiting some of the finest crafts, artistic skills, and home cooking in the state.

Cranberry, strawberry, and blueberry festivals are aplenty and at each, tables are decorated with delectable cooking delights and downright enjoyability.

But don't eat and run; stay awhile for the antiques and horribles, art shows, fish frys, clambakes, square dances, 4H exhibits, horse racing, band concerts, auctions, contests and competitions and if that's not enough, catch the book fairs, flea markets, and craft demonstrations.

The following is a list of fairs we know you'll enjoy.

June 16 and 17, Sat. and Sun.

Railfan's Days and Railroad Collector's Flea Market. South Carver, Edaville Railroad, Rte. 58. Doubleheader trains, freight trains, mixed trains and other railfan events. New England's largest railroad collector's and modelers' flea market.

HOLY GHOST FESTIVAL IN PLYMOUTH: Plymouth County, Massachusetts is much more than the Pilgrim story. In mid July, for instance, the town's Portuguese community celebrates the Holy Ghost festival with processions, parades, dancing, fireworks and some of the best dining for miles around.

A centuries-old tradition in Portugal the celebration was introduced to the plymouth area in 1910 and the annual three-day event now draws crowds of 10,000 or more. Religious ceremonies focus on a silver crown, symbolic of the devotion of Queen Isabel to the Holy Ghost. According to legend, she lent her crown to churches for fund raising and to afflicted sections of her kingdom that needed a good omen.

Festivities begin Friday evening with a 7 p.m. Mass at St. Mary's Chruch, followed by a candlelight procession to the Holy Ghost Field, Cherry Street, North Plymouth. A mamoth fireworks display highlights the Saturday schedule, and Sunday's program begins with a colorful religious procession from Siever's Field to St. Mary's for a 10:30 a.m. Mass.

In addition to a warm friendly atmosphere, festival visitors have a unique opportunity to sample traditional Portuguese delicacies...soupas, malacadas, vaish, linguica, chorice and tramoce.

SUMMER TIPS

The barbecue season is here.

Glowing charcoal briquets give burgers, dogs, steaks and chicken that great flavor.

But keep the glowing coals in the hibachi or grille where they belong — in the open air.

In a closed space, they can kill from carbon monoxide fumes.

Medical journals have many reports of victims who brought the grille indoors — into a camper, tent, house, motel room; some because it started to rain, others to provide heat on a cool evening.

Other barbecue tips include not grilling in an area where children are playing to aviod a youngster running into the grille, tipping it over and begin burned.

Lighting fires leads to tragedies through carelessness. Gasoline should be avioided as an igniting means. Electric charcoal lighters should be checked. If stored in damp places, elements can short out.

Do not add lighter fluid to a grille once the fire is going.

Long handled tools and heavy gloves prevent burn risk and a heavy apron helps protect not only from grease but sparks.

Roll up sleeves and keep loose clothing away from the fire.

A sprinkle bottle of water helps curb flames flaring from dripping fat that can ruin an expensive piece of meat and cause burns.

Controlled heat gets best results. One briquette layer should be sufficient, and a covered grille or sindbreak to protect against drafts is preferable.

When finished cooking, put out live coals by dousing with water.

SUMMER HEAT

American Medical Association advises that you can't really beat the heat — not outdoors anyway.

A.M.A. has some tips on ways to combat it.

— Stay out of the sun as much as possible, especially during midday when sun rays are hottest.

— Wear light, loose clothing.

— Drink more liquids than usual but take extra salt only on physician's advice, particularly if you have liver, kidney or heart conditions.

— Take a shower or dip once or twice a day.

— Get plenty of rest and sleep.

— Eat your regular diet and don't go overboard on cold cuts and salads unless you like them and eat them regularly.

— Do heavy yard work in the early morning or at dusk.

— Don't overdo exercise, whether work or play.

Town Meeting Resumes Tuesday Night

By Judith Epstein

Cohasset's Annual Town Meeting will resume Tuesday June 26 at the High School Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. A quorum of 200 is needed to consider the remainder of the warrant which contains articles concerning zoning bylaw changes, aerial mapping, and acceptance of police and fire contracts.

"We desperately need a quorum," Moderator David Place said this week. He urges that voters make a special effort to turn out for the meeting, and said that business should be easily dispatched within a few hours.

"The zoning bylaw changes except for two articles, involve technical changes and are not substantive," Place said. "The contracts have been hammered out by the Personnel Committee," he added and predicted that residents will not vote against them.

Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark reminded all voters to bring the warrants used last April to this Town Meeting. This is an extension of annual Town Meeting, Clark said, it is not a Special Town Meeting and therefore does not require a new warrant.

Articles 45 through 74 concerning zoning bylaw changes and inserted by the Planning Board and Building Inspector James Litchfield will take up the bulk of the people's consideration. Planning Board Chairman Patricia Facey said that Article 72 concerning buffer zones along business boundaries will be withdrawn. Facey said she expects that Litchfield will also withdraw some articles but he was unavailable for comment this week.

The two substantive articles Moderator Place alluded to are Articles 65 and 71 and concern zoning area regulation changes in the Downtown Business and Highway Business Districts, respectively. These, especially Article 71 which has met with attack from merchants along Route 3A, are

A drop off station at Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy has been arranged and any press releases, photos, letters, or information may be left there and will be picked up by Mariner staff.

Box 71 in Cohasset is still our post office box for items to be mailed, however, and for the time being telephone messages can be left for the staff by calling 837-3500 or 837-5625. A Scituate exchange will be available to call into the main office as soon as the telephone compnay untangles its wires. Look in the Cohasset Mariner for further notification.

Girls Soccer Gets Approval

The School Committee voted 6 to 1 last week to establish a girls' soccer team at the Junior-Senior High School the fall.

Several high school girls interested in forming a team attended the meeting on behalf of the 46 students who have indicated they would participate.

Spokesman Erin O'Brien said interest had been generated from girls' participation on previously all-boys teams.

It was noted, however, that when students became juniors and seniors, young women couldn't keep up with boys on coed teams. "Girls have a right to form their own team if they can't compete with boys under Chapter 622," said Mary O'Brien, mother

Crusher Casey's Route
. . .From Skulls To Sculls

By Bucky Yardume

For over 10 years he went around the country cracking skulls.
Now he cracks the whip coaching youthful oarsmen in sculls.

The 'He' is Steve Casey of Cedar Lane, one a.k.a. Steve 'Crusher' Casey and to the heavy weight wrestling world what Muhammad Ali is to the heavyweight boxing scene-- the champ.

The Crusher is 69 now, although he doesn't look it. The ferocious ring scowl is replaced by a twinkle.

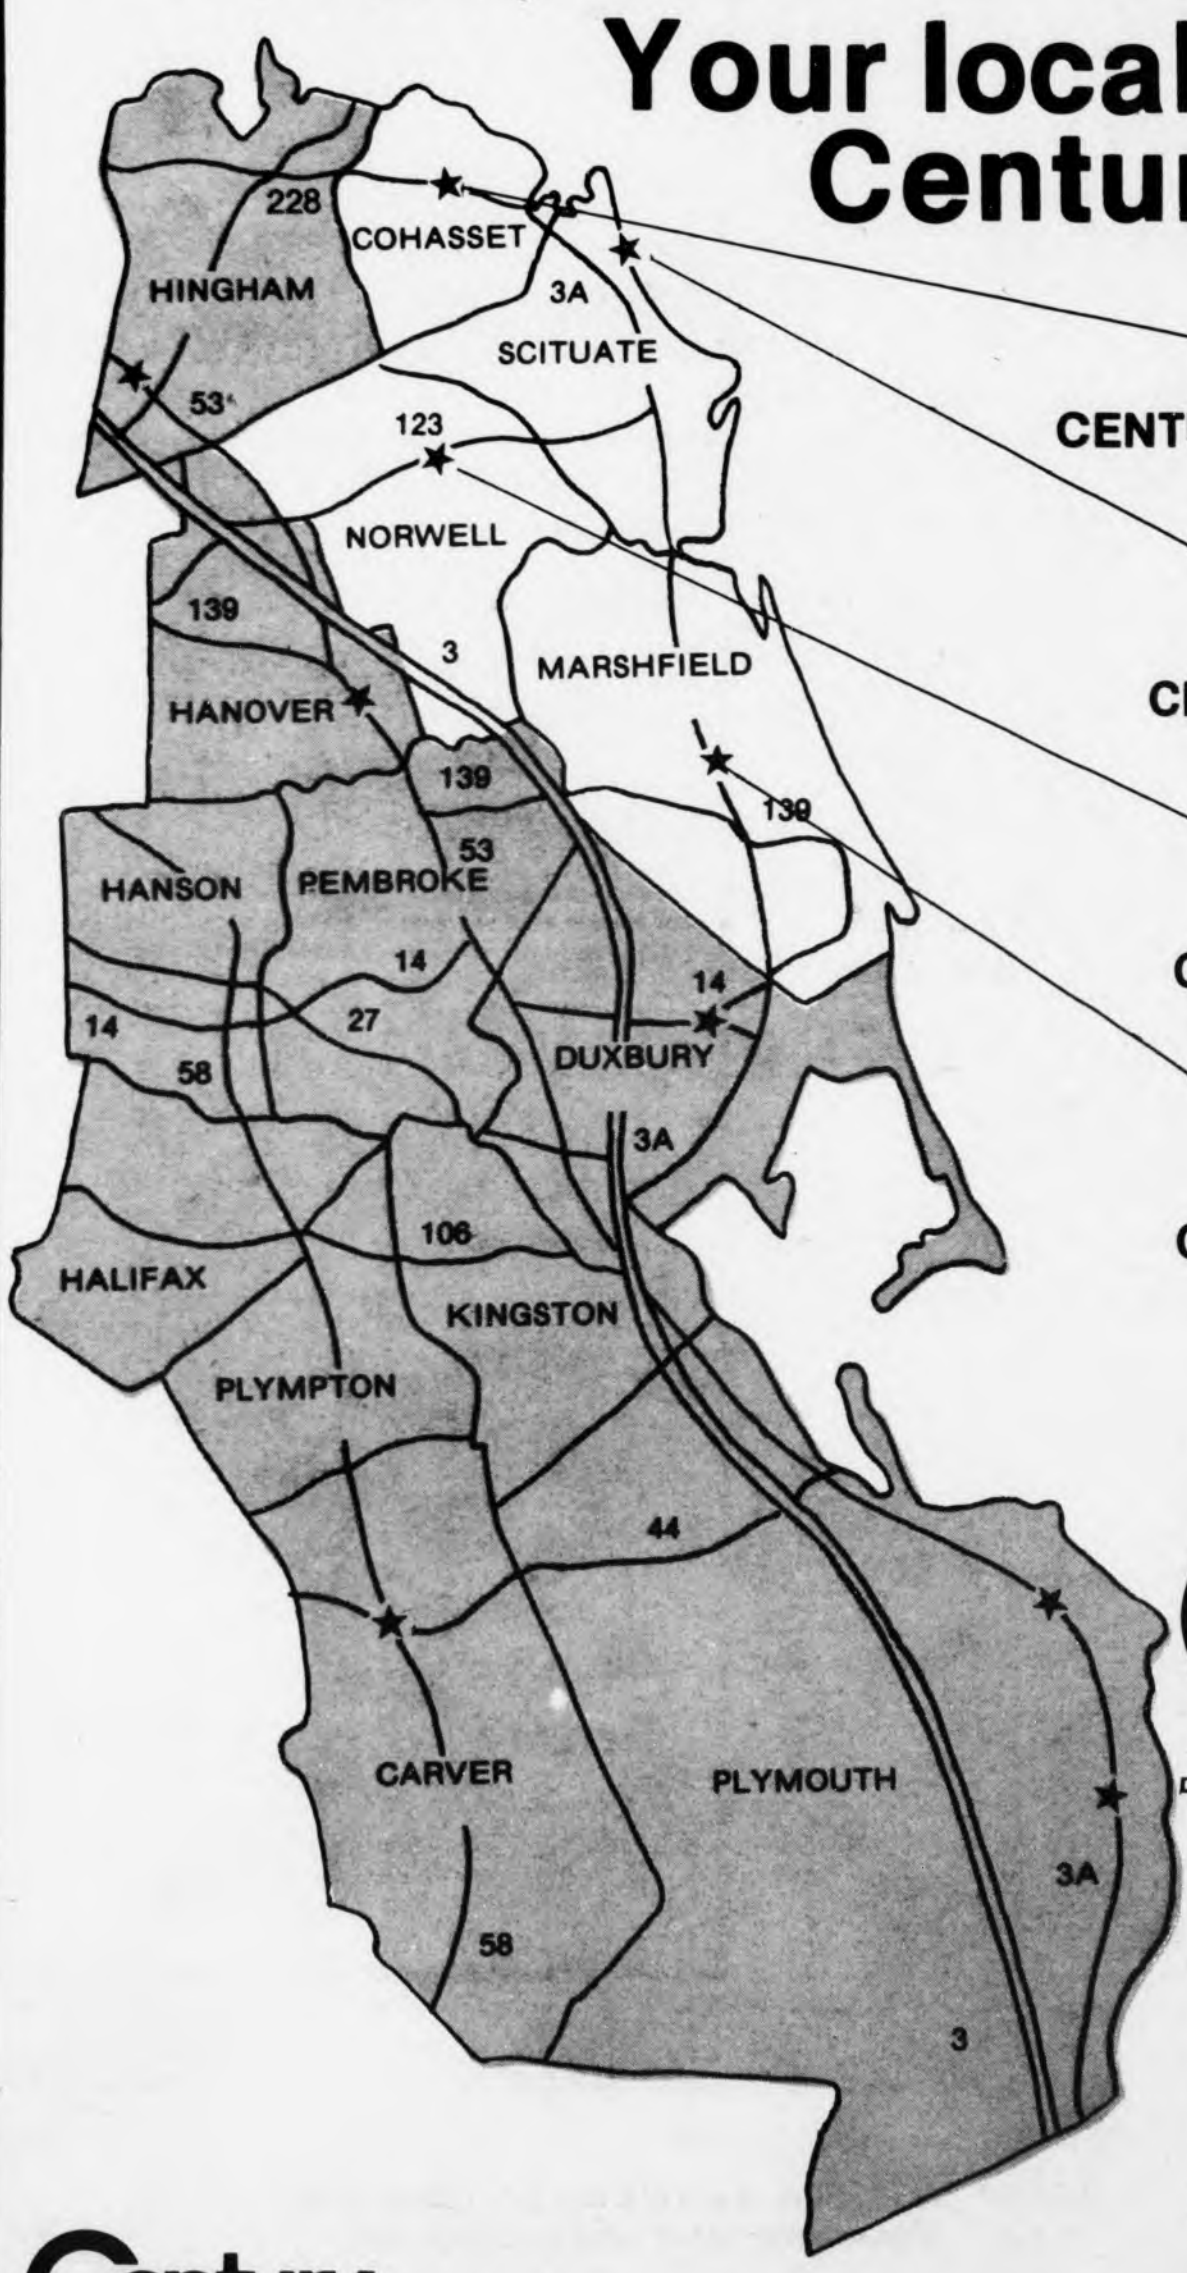
He was an import so to speak straight from Killarney and Kerry County where asoneof eight Casey brothers he matched wrestling grips with his kinsmen. Then Steve brought his talents to America and parlayed them into the title.

Wrestling in those days in Boston and elsewhere was synonymous with Promotor Papa Paul Bowser, who practically kept the sport alive singlehandedly.

Bowser's mat shows were weekly draws at the old Boston Arena. But Papa Paul would move his extravaganzas into the Garden, too. Bowser was a showman of the Barnum school who practiced the most outlandish publicity stunts.

Bowser imported many a grappler and latched onto Casey who was a natural in Boston as a lad straight from Kerry.

In no time Steve became "Crusher" with his patented grip he now says was only "a from the behind grip."



And for 10 years he was, as wrestling announcer Whitey Konfer would bawl

Town Meeting

expected to be the most controversial issues of the meeting.

Article 71 would require future business lots to be a minimum of 40,000 square feet in area, an increase from the current requirement of 10,000 square feet, and in addition increase frontage to 200 feet, also an increase of four times the present regulation.

Facey said that the proposed change of front setback to 100 feet from 50 feet will remain at the present 50 feet requirement. Width will increase from 100 to 200 feet, sideyard from 20 to 30 feet, rear depth from 20 to 50 feet and coverage from 50 to 30 per cent.

Facey noted that two amendments will be made to the article on the floor, allowing for the front setback to remain at 50 feet and for a grandfather provision which will protect all existing lots as laid out on a plan.

The Downtown Business proposed changes in Article 65 will remain as they are except for a similar grandfather provision protecting existing lots as planned and filed at Town Hall. Proposed changes in area regulations would increase area from 0 to 5000 square feet, frontage from 20 to 50 feet, width from 20 to 50 feet with the rest of the requirements remaining the same.

"We aren't changing use," Facey said and pointed out that people will still find a market for selling their lots. She did acknowledge that should the proposed changes be voted that non-conforming lots may be less desirable because any additional building on them would require a Special Permit from the Zoning Board of Appeals.

Facey said that the Planning Board decided on their proposals because of concerned traffic flow, congestion and drainage on Route 3A. "The zoning map will not change, within those zones the standards will change," she said if the articles are voted on favorably.

Selectman Clark said that he expects to speak against these zoning changes at the meeting. The zoning bylaws are altogether too restrictive. Our forefathers lived and died for certain liberties. Now here they (the Planning Board) are taking them away from us," he said.

An amendment on Article 74 which asks the townspeople to raise $103,200 for aerial mapping of the town, will lower than cost to $56,100 if voted and will provide a base map showing contours, street, property lines, drainage patterns, flood plain and watershed protection areas and physical structures. Serious consideration of this article was also urged by Facey.

The Fire and Police collective bargaining agreements, Articles 42 and 43, which were deferred during the April meeting until all other articles were acted upon, will also be open to scrutiny Tuesday night.

According to Attorney Charles Humphreys, negotiator for the town, both contracts have been settled and approved by the Personnel Committee but not signed. Police Association President Brian Noonan outlined the one year police contract stipulations including a five per cent increase across the board with a slight increment to maximum pay step police officers, a $500 stipend for the prosecutor and an extra three dollars per shift for the senior patrolman on duty when no sergeant is in charge of the department.

The Permanent Fire Fighters Association's President James Sheerin agreed that the contract had been settled but declined to release any information about the agreement. Humphreys said that the contract was shy one firefighter's signature and therefore was unable to release figures as yet. The firefighters contract is for one year.

Finishing up Town Meeting would be a nice way to start the summer. Though there are only a few weighty articles, they are important ones and should yield good debate, and should be dispatched with expediency. A quorum of 200 voters is urged. Please show up.

Editorial

Rational Rationing

Selectmen should take issue with Massachusetts Energy Director Joseph Fitzpatrick and urge him to reconsider his stand against odd-even gas rationing.

This should be done now before Fitzpatrick's plan to limit the amount of gas per sale gets a chance to take effect and create even longer gas lines than we now face.

Fitzpatrick favors limited volume sales, which would allows motorists only a certain amount of gas per sale. This system would not alleviate gas lines because motorists would be forced to get gas virtually every day to keep their tanks full if they were allowed say only five gallons per sale. The odd-even system takes most of the worry out of whether there will be enough gas for sale by forcing motorists to conserve so they won't run out until it's their turn to buy.

The system works like this: on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, cars with license plates ending with an odd or even number can buy gas. On Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, the other half of autos can buy gas. The system helps insure that all motorists will be able to buy some gas and most importantly not have to wait upwards of an hour to buy it. It also should cut down on the number of driver topping off their tanks for fear they won't be able to buy gas when they need it.

This system worked well five years ago in alleviating long waits and has worked earlier this year in california to cut down gas lines.

Selectmen should urge Fitzpatrick to change his mond now and not wait until a real crisis develops only to let Fitzpatrick's idea make it worse.

Long gas lines are a real threat to public health and safety especially in summer. It's one thing to sit in a car for an hour when the temperature is 20 degrees outside. You can always turn on the engine to run the heater for a few minutes and dress warmly. It's another thing when it's 90 outside and you don't have air conditioning. There's only so much clothing you can remove. Plus in summer heat adds to people's already frayed nerves and fights breaking out in gas lines would not be uncommon. In addition, gas lines stretching onto traveled lanes add to the potential for accidents and can block the way of emergency vehicles.

How about it, Selectmen, let's get to state officials before they institute a policy that would make worse an already precarious situation and urge them to use the odd-even rationing system and use it now.

Around Town Hall

CAUSEWAY OPENED

Selectmen declared on June 4 that the causeway on Atlantic Avenue is safe for vehicles and pedestrian traffic and, therefore, all barricades and signs will be taken down. The road is officially open for all traffic. Dante Salome, the state engineer at the site during construction, approved the work. Today, Thursday, at 11 a.m., final inspection will be by both federal and state engineers.

SCITUATE TO VISIT

After Scituate holds its meeting on Cohasset harbor maintenance, control and taxes, a meeting will be arranged between Scituate and Cohasset Selectmen for discussion of mutual harbor concerns.

JESUITS OKAY

Daniel Shine of the Jesuit community of Boston College gave written permission to Selectmen last week for engineers to enter their property near the Bellarmine Estate so engineers may draw up data in preparation for bidding on construction of a seawall there.

The easement is still in the drafting stage and awaits the mutual acceptance of attorneys for the town and the Jesuits.

OILING APPROVED

The Water Resources Commission of the state Division of Water Pollution Control has approved oiling of the Wheelwright Park riding ring based on the following conditions: drainage characteristics will not change; ponded precipitation at the northeast corner of the horse ring will not contain free floating oil; and whenever residues of oil do appear at this location measures will be taken to contain and remove them.

LICENSE SUSPENDED

Scott Liquors at 27 South Main St. has been found in violation of the liquor law against serving minors and will have its license suspended July 9-12. After a June 5 hearing, the state Alcoholics Beverage Control Commission, at which the store clerk said he hadn't checked identification of a 17-year-old girl who he served, the commission voted to suspend the license. Commission investigators witnessed a young female enter the exit of the store with a package. Investigators approached her and inquired as to the contents of the package and her age. Her package contained beer and she stated she was 17 and hadn't been checked for identification by the store clerk.

DAMAGE REPORTS

Damage reports will be given to the School Committee quarterly in an effort to determine the nature and cost of damaged school property.

COMPENSATION APPROVED

The School Committee unanimously approved the extra compensation positions for the 1979-1980 school year including: Dorothy Bates, Student Activities Treasurer; Anthony Hyde, Jr./Sr. High School Band; Patricia Wunschel, Yearbook; Ronald Emmons, Senior Class Play and Dramatics; and Senior Class Advisors, Kearin Dunn, Anne Marie League and Dennis Walsh.

'Received' Correspondence

Letters

To the Editor:

On May 25, 1979, you telephoned this office to request a written statement which would define the point in time at which correspondence addressed to a Board of Selectmen is deemed to be "received" as that term is used in G.L. Chapter 4, Section 7, Clause 26. Inasmuch as this office has a well-established policy on this issue, I am pleased to provide you with the following explanation.

G.L. Chapter 66, Section 6 requires all departments, boards, commissions or offices of the Commonwealth or any of its political subdivisions to designate a person to serve as custodian of its public records. Ordinarily this custodian or another person designated by the board will be responsible for opening and logging correspondence addressed to the board and, thus, whether any or all of the members of a board have seen the correspondence has bearing on the determination of when such correspondence is "received."

Correspondence addressed to a Board of Selectmen becomes subject to the mandatory disclosure provisions of G.L. Chapter 66, Section 10 when it is opened and received by a person who customarily handles the correspondence of the board. If mail is addressed to a specifically named individual and is not acted upon (opened, logged, stamped, etc.) by the person who accepts the board's mail, that mail is not a public record until opened and received by the particular named person or his/her designated custodian.

Be advised, however, that "received" correspondence to the board is still subject to the exemptions enumerated in the public records definition found in G.L. Chapter 4, Section 7, Clause 26.

CUSTODIAL LAND

The School Committee voted to accept a custodial reorganization plan proposed by School Supt. John Maloney geared toward more security and cleaning time. He proposed one custodian work the day shift and one work the twilight shift on Saturdays. These changes will involve the involuntary transfer of three or four employes, he said.

APPOINTMENTS MADE

The committee has approved the following appointments for the 1979-80 academic year: Maureen Alcotte as a CHS English teacher, and Nancy Gilmore as a sixth grade teacher at the Deer Hill School. The committee also hired Mary Benbow, Jeanne Fink and Raymond Levine to work at the Summer Handwriting Workshop.

MASC CONVENTION

Committee Member Martha Gjesteby was elected voting delegate from Cohasset to a meeting of the Mass. Association of School Committees in Hyannis Secretary Patricia Walsh will be an alternate.

STIPEND DENIED

Retiring CHS Teacher Frank Wunschel, who had taught in Cohasset more than 20 years, was denied a $1000 stipend by a 3-3 vote of the committee.

PAPE TO STORE

School bus parking will be changed from school grounds to property of Charles Pape of Chief Justice Cushing Highway at $3840 a year.

METCO AIDES

Newly appointed METCO aides are: L. Miller, N. Windsor, K. Hernber, C. Stein, J. Godfrey, C. Mitchner, C. Brady, and J. Trask.

Girls Soccer

Athletic Director Clark Chatterton supported the girls' idea and suggested the use of portable goal posts for the field in back of the high school. By moving the posts for practice, he said, both ends of the field could be used for boys and girls teams.

The lack of proper playing area was noted by Frank England who voted against the motion because he felt that space wasn't usable..

Committee Chairman Jack Langmaid said the field behind the school as well as the playground at the Deer Hill School may be used for either boys or girls, space permitting.

Milliken Field, it was pointed out, is still in the process of being enlarged, graded and seeded, and so it is not available.

The cost of coaching and transporting the team will be between $1500 and $2000. Whether team members will be eligible for varsity letters at the end of a year is still undecided.

21st Season For Youth Symphony

The 21st season of Boston Symphony Youth Concerts under the direction of Harry Ellis Dickson will begin in November. The BSO performs classical and contemporary music especially selected to appeal to young people. Visual accompaniment in the form of mime, dance and slides, soloists and instrumental demonstrations are featured as well.

Tickets are now being sold for the series of three concerts (Nov. 17, Jan. 19, and April 5). Bus transportation is provided. Please call Mrs. James Mullen, 383-1993 or Mrs. David Sweeney, 383-1184, during the month of June.

Sunday Carillon Programs Now In 55th Season

The 55th season of summer carillon recitals in Cohasset will be given this year with programs played every Sunday afternoon from 4-5 o'clock beginning June 24 and continuing through Sept. 30.

The carillon, located in the tower of St. Stephen's Church high on the rock ledge in the center of town, is known as the Jessie M. Barron Memorial. It was given in her memory by her daughter, Mrs. Jane Wallis Waldron Bancroft, who for many years was a resident of Cohasset.

Recitals are made possible by gifts from Mrs. Bancroft's daughters, Mrs. William C. Coc and Mrs. A. Werk Cook, both of Cohasset. Printed programs which include the names of the musicians taking part in the series, notes about the performing artist and a description of the instrument, are distributed free of charge at the time of the recital.

Carilloneurs for the 55th season are:

June 24 Earl Chamberlain, Cohasset
July 1 Earl Chamberlain, Cohasset
July 8 Richard M. Watson, Cincinnati, Ohio
July 15 George Matthew, Jr. Stamford, Conn.
July 22 Sally Slade Warner, Andover
July 29 Edward B. Gammons, Andover
Aug. 5 Earl Chamberlain, Cohasset
Aug. 12 Leen 't Hart, Amersfoort, Netherlands
Aug. 19 Milford Myhre, Lake Wales, Fla.
Aug. 26 Ronald Barnes, Washington D.C.
Sept. Earl Chamberlain, Cohasset
Sept. 9 Edward B. Gammons, Andover
Sept. 16 R. Hudson Ladd, Ann Arbor, Michigan
Sept. 23 Robert Donnell, Niagara Falls, Ontario
Sept. 30 Earl Chamberlain, Cohasset

Crusher Casey's Route From Skulls To Sculls

in that Hollywood stereotyped throaty rasp, "Champeen of the Woild."

Casey took them all on --- Ed Don George...Marvin Westonberg... Ed'Strangler' Lewis and another bucko from Ireland--- Danno Mahoney, the Irish Whip, and assorted Masked Marvels.

He also locked grips with the fabled Jimmy Londos informally because the Golden Greek by then was no longer active.

Casey recalls working out with the Polish Immortals of wrestling-- the Zybsko brothers-- who by that time also no longer were wrestling actively.

While Steve as he tells it in the soft brogue that lingers on from his native Erin, started by wrestling his brothers, he moved on to prepare to represent Ireland in the Olympics. But the Kerry Terror never made the Olympics because he had wrestled in a couple of professional bouts and so lost his eligibility for the simon pure Olympic Games.

Maybe otherwise he'd never have come to Boston and the Bowser ring wars.

But he did and won it all despite putting in five years in the army.

He retired in 1946 after he was shot in an altercation in one of the three pubs in which he'd invested. He had Crusher Casey's on Mass. Avenue in the shadow of the Arena where he was the top banana for so many years. His other establishments were in Cambridge and Somerville.

"I never really got all my strength back after that," Casey says recalling the 15 months he spent in the hospital recovering from the gunshot wound.

Could be, but anyone thinking about taking him on has to be out of his gourd.

If Steve wrestled early in life, he and his brothers also had another love--rowing.

The bug lives on.

Casey rows regularly today.

Not only that, but he has utilized sculling as a means to a very worthy end.

The Cohasset squire has some 20 young men-- the number varies from time to time--under his aegis and coaches them in the strenuous art of rowing.

The pupils come not only from the local area but all the way from Boston to learn, practice and work out under Crusher.

Casey has been coaching them for quite a spell now and takes as much if not more pride in the fact that 20 of his young men have graduated from college as he did his victories on the mat.

He feels a sense of accomplishment, too, with some of his pupils who turned to sculling and turned off from dope and crime.

"They've done well," says Casey of his students and reveals that one eight-oared crew he coached has just returned from a triumph in a Philadelphia regatta over a vaunted Coast Guard boat.

They've done all right in other competitions, too.

One well might wonder where a sculler works out in Cohasset since sculls being the fickle craft they are, the ocean is no place for their tipsy characteristics.

Casey's crews work out at Strait Pond which was a bit of a problem recently.

"They drained the water to install a new flood gate," Casey explains. "So we were beached for awhile/until they let the water back in, because the water was just too low for rowing."

His crews work out usually at 6:30 a.m. and 6:30 p.m.

There's another Cohasset touch to the sculling.

Casey's craft which he keeps stored in a boathouse in Hingham shipyard are made by Bill Howe, also formerly of Cohasset.

And they're not your everyday scull.

The Howe models are made of fibreglas which he also uses to build other types of craft and also racing cars.

Obviously in addition to the advantage of maintenance with the comparitively trouble free material, the scull are lighter, hence swifter.

It figures that Casey's two sons would be scullers. They've rowed competitively not only in this country but in Ireland and in both Australia and New Zealand, just as their father tested his rowing prowess against the English and Russians in international competitions.

All his life, Casey has loved the outdoors so it figures he'd be a hunter.

He keeps a passel of Hunting dogs--Beagles, Redbacks, Labs. His safaris have taken him from New Hampshire and Maine all the way to Texas.

But he also prowls the local woods in season with his baying pack.

Wrestling was good to Casey, and he's not about to knock it.

But he also makes no bones about deriving more satisfaction from working with young people in rowing.

"If it helps even a little to provide them with an interest and an activity that will keep them off the streets and out of trouble, then I have to think it's worthwhile," Casey says.

Since it has already more than once, there's no doubt about it.

So for the former "Champeen" it would seem that coaching sculls has it all over cracking skulls.

Papa Paul never would have agreed.

He'd have growled, "Who's gonna pay to watch somebody row a boat?"

Straits Pond In Rough Straits

Strait's Pond is in bad straits.

The mile-long pond which could be an admirable recreational facility is choked with weeds.

Not only that, but former heavyweight wrestling champion Steve (Crusher) Casey who is a Cedar Lane resident and now coaches young scullers in what is just one of his many interests, claims the flood gate is the principal culprit and in need of replacement.

"The water doesn't flow in and out properly," complains Casey. "During the early spring, there are thousands of herring running into the pond. Because of the situation, they can't get out."

There also is a smell from the weed infestation. Unless something is done to correct the situation, it's only going to get worse."

The problem has been that the pond lies in both Cohasset and Hull, and the two communities so far have been unable to agree on who does what to correct the situation.

If they could, then perhaps they could apply jointly to the state for funding assistance to correct the deteriorating weed condition.

Norwell only last week was advised that it had received approval by the state for a $10,000 grant representing 75% of the cost of harvesting weeds in Jacobs Pond.

The town must produce the other 25% which was voted by Town Meeting on condition the state money became available.

Under any similar arrangement, it would mean Cohasset and Hull each would only have to come up with 12.5% of the cost if state approval can be obtained.

And a fine water facility would be kept from going down the drain.

Galo, O'Brien Repeat Title In Member-Guest Golf

Ted Galo and Bob O'Brien successfully defended their title in the Cohasset Golf Club member-guest Nicklaus Flight tournament last weekend.

Dan Singleton and Frank Agostino were leaders from the opening round on Friday until Sunday's final nine holes in the low handicap flight. But the Galo-O'Brien tandem took a one up lead on Galo's 13th hole birdie and hung on to win plus 10 to nine.

In the other flights, winners were Joe Achille and George Plante at plus 17 in the Arnold Palmer flight; Tim and Terry Cassidy at plus 21 in the Ben Hogan flight; Jeff Power and Alex Federoff at plus 14 in the Gary Player flight; Alan Ruggles and Bernie Mulcahy at plus 13 in the Sam Snead flight; Art Hughes and Walter Hurley at plus 24 in the Lee Trevino flight; Jack Hartwell and Bill Hogan at plus 13 in the Tom Watson flight and Don Shea and Ed Fay at plus 9 in the Bobby Jones flight.

Top Foursome In CG Play

Lou Amonte, Frank Agostino, Graig Scotland and Dirk Forrest took low net in the Cohasset Golf foursome best ball competition last week with a 55.

Second came Jim Froio, Jack Bartle, Art Washburn and Frank Higgins at 56.

Ralph Froio, Tom Cvarnopa, Ted Galo and Bob O'Brien took low gross along with Bill Fitzgerald, Frank Ribbetts, Mickey Zappola and George Hutchinson at 67.

Rik Tinory Comes Up With Another Hit Record

Is he at it again? The answer is yes. Rik Tinory of Cohasset, the man who recently revived Scollay Square's fame with the "Remember Ol' Scollay Square," hit record (over 100,000 copies sold) is at it again. This time it's a heart-warming love song with a bouncy beat, entitled "Martha's Vineyard."

Tinory has been flying back and forth to Toronto, Canada, to Eastern Sound Studio, the same sound shop that records Ann Murray, Elton John, Gordan Lightfoot and many others. Tinory announced that he has been working on, "Martha's Vineyard" in secret for more than eight months. The result is a beautiful rendition of a song surely to be a classic. Advance orders for the recording have come from as far as England and Australia.

Martha's Vineyard, a well-known New England paradise, is home for celebrities Jimmy Cagney, Ruth Gordon, John Hershey, Carly Simon, James Taylor and most recently Jackie Kennedy Onassis with her purchase of a valuable track of land on Gay Head beach.

The recording available through Old Boston Records of Cohasset, is to be released this week.

At The Library

By Richard Hayes

New summer hours are now in effect at the Cohasset Library. The library will be open Monday from 9 to 9, and Tuesday through Saturday from 9-6; it's closed Sunday.

The library requests donations of current magazines. Due to rising costs, the library must reduce purchases. With donations, the library hopes to continue a complete file of useful magazines. Those the library cannot use will be recycled on the "free magazine" table.

Did you know that:

—in a six-week period the library added 140 new nonfiction and 120 new fiction books for adults?

—all new books are kept in the New Book Room for about one year, then are shelved in the "stacks"?

—all new books are listed in a notebook kept on the window sill by the new fiction shelves?

—the card catalog shows which books are in the New Book Room? (All others are in the "stacks.")

—a title card is filed in the card catalog as soon as a book is ordered?

Books recently received include:

Mysteries: E.X. Ferrars, In at the Kill; Bill Knox, Live Bait; Ed McBain, Calypso; Peter Way, Dirty Tricks; Collin Wilcox, Power Plays; Sara Woods, This Fatal Writ.

Fiction: Eli Cantor, Love Letters; Seymour Epstein, Love Affair; J.G. Farrell, The Singapore Grip; Gerald Green, Cactus Pie; Rona Jaffe, Class Reunion; John Ehrlichman, The Whole Truth; William McCloskey, Highliners; Edwin Newman, Sunday Punch.

Nonfiction: Lyall Watson, Lifetide: the Biology of the Unconscious (001.9); Betty Fairchild, Now That You Know (301.41); Robert Edgerton, Mental Retardation (362.3); Jerry Minnich, The Rodale Guide to Composting (631.8); Toby Cole, Venice: a Portable Reader (808.8); Sam Levinson, You Don't Have To Be In To Know What's What (827); Adrienne Rich, On Lies, Secrets and Silence (824); Joan Cohen & Jerome Cohen, China Today and Her Ancient Treasures (X915.1); Leon Stover, Stonehenge (936.2); Bradley Smith, Operation Sunrise (940.54); Fodors People's Republic of China (915.1); Donald Bartlett, Empire: The Life, Legend and Madness of Howard Hughes (B-Hughes).

We had an interesting chat recently with Fran Burnham, who breeds Cavalier King Charles Spaniels at her Atlantic Avenue home. Fran and her husband David, who was president of this rare breed's club for four years, will participate in the confirmation competition at Derby Academy next Saturday, June 23. Two other Cohasset families own Fran's dogs, one was the winner of the best tri'color in Southern U.S. and the best second generation American bred dog. During the Southern dog show, Fran was interviewed on CBS-TV six o'clock news.

Center Picked Right Time For Open House

By Karin Bartow

The Cohasset Swim Center launched its 6th summer season last weekend with an open house on Saturday and Sunday.

Ninety-five degree temperatures brought out droves of swimmers who splashed and frolicked in the Center's freshly filled and pa.. pools. Several hundreds c. children and adults cooled down and honed their strokes, flops, and dives. Pool staff, trustees, officers, and friends attended a wine and cheese reception at poolside on Sunday evening.

Eugene K. Price, president, is proud and expansive when discussing the Swim Center. In his opinion, it is a first-rate facility with highly qualified personnel and excellent programs. Also a trustee, Price is in this third year as president. Not a swimmer ("I grew up in Brooklyn," he explains), Price's involvement stems from his interest in and enjoyment of young people, and an inherent sense of community committment.

The Swim Center is a stellar example of his kind of community commitment.

Price will tell you that if it weren't for John Meyers, past and first president, there wouldn't be a Swim Center. Mr. Meyers, however, is modest about accepting that accolade. Now farming and raising animals in rural Maine, Meyers said in a recent phone conversation, "I can't take all the credit. It was the result of a lot of people." He, then, was the catalyst.

It all began with the Cohasset Swim Team which in 1966, entered the South Shore Swim League with 100 swimmers. They were enthusiastically supported by parents and managed their practicing in private pools and the ocean. The team moved from the bottom of the league to second place in 1970, and won the championship in 1971. The number of swimmers had doubled and they were in need of their own facility.

With Meyers coaching, the pool project was under way. Recalling that effort, Meyers said, "Sometimes there is a lot of division in a small town over an idea like this, but everyone was really together on this one." They received 500 donations — many small and some large — and were able to purchase the four acre tract of land off Sohier Street and construct the pools and pool building.

The Swim Center is held in private trust, but Meyers points out, "It is a Town pool, open to all residents of Cohasset!" Membership is also open to people employed in the town, and for those who cannot afford the fee, scholarships are available from the Center through the Social Service League.

The trust is endowed, however operating costs are raised each year through membership fees. Although costs have more than doubled in the past five years, a family membership has remained at $50. Anonymous gifts and donations are received from time to time and help make capital improvements possible. This year the basement of the pool building has been transformed into a large meeting/function room that will serve not only the Center, but any other town organizations or groups that request it. It is fully heated, air-conditioned, and waterproof! It is attractively paneled, with a kitchen area at one end, and will be furnished with chairs and table, pool and ping-pong tables, and a movie screen. This equipment will get welcome use on rainy days or during sudden electrical storms.

Six full-time and one part-time lifeguard will be on duty at the pool this summer. All have had first aid and CPR training and are fully accredited with the Water Safety Instructor Designation (WSI) which, says Price, "demands grueling and tough requirements be met." Accreditation includes annual testing and 30-40 hours of teaching each year. The teaching requirement led, in part, to the wide range of programs offered by the staff.

Albert Buckley, Jr. is Pool Director and has been on the staff since the pool opened. He was a swim team member and graduated this year from Boston College with a degree in elementary and special needs education. His educational background led to the Center's program of Adapted Aquatics, which is instruction for special needs children, or those who have difficulty learning to swim. Some of these children have gone onto regular Red Cross swim classes and Buckley likens this to "mainstreaming" (which is the inclusion of special needs or handicapped children in the regular, public school classroom).

Other staff are William Reynolds, Assistant Director in charge of maintenance; Pam Becker, Assistant Director of Programs; E.T. Price, who will help coach the Swim Team; Erin O'Brien; Lisa Kjier; and Abby White, part-time, and head coach of the Swim Team. All of the staff have extensive training through Red Cross lessons and teaching, and years on the Swim Team. They all live in Cohasset.

Other programs include Water Babies (informal sessions for one to five year olds and their Moms); adult lessons; and Senior Citizen swimming. The pool is used by the Red Cross, the Cohasset Swim Team, and the Cohasset Recreation Department weekday mornings. The schedule provides separate swim times for children and adults and other diversities such as early morning lap time; Saturday morning games and splashtime; and informal pick-up games on Tues. and Thurs. evenings.

Officers include: Eugene Price, president; Robert J. Knox, executive vice president; Mrs. Albert Buckley and Patrick McCarthy, vice president of budget and operations; Mrs. Nancy Anderson, secretary; Mrs. Irene Brown, treasurer; Hamilton Tewksbury, maintenance chairman; Mrs. Helen Pratt and Mrs. Diana Karcher, special programs chairmen and Mrs. Marjorie Knox, membership chairman.

Action Still Needed On Fire & Police Contracts

Town Meeting Folds Up Without A Quorum

Cohasset Annual Town Meeting was dissolved Tuesday night after an hour's wait failed to reach a quorum of 200 voters.

The 164 voters attending the meeting at the high school auditorium had gathered to finish business which had been either deferred until all other articles had been acted upon or postponed until Town Meeting resumed. Moderator David Place thanked the assembly for their patience.

The most pressing articles to have been heard were the Police and Fire Departments collective bargaining agreements, which Place explained, were supposed to be acted on by the town within 30 days of their ratification.

Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark said that agreement between the town and the respective associations will decide when the contracts will again come before the town, either in the fall at a Special Town Meeting or next year at the next annual Town Meeting. Salary increments will be retroactive to July 1 but no interest will accrue on the amounts, Place noted.

The firefighters contract yielded a total increase of $27,578 which represented a five per cent increase for rgular salaried personnel, a uniform dress allowance increase, and additional educational credits, eligibility for longevity benefits and salary increases for Emergency Medical Technicians.

The police contract called for a five per cent increase for patrolmen at the minimum, first and second pay steps and a 6.13 per cent increase for those at the maximum pay level. A new prosecutor position will bring an additional $500 annually. The total additional cost of the contract is $20,920 and also includes an increment for the patrolman in charge of a shift for $3 a shift and a raise in uniform allowance from $210 to $250.

Articles 45 through 74 concerning zoning bylaw changes were also up for consideration at the meeting. Of par-

PROPHETIC SIGN CAN MEAN MORE THAN ONE THING IN GAS LINE.

Long Gas Lines Linger Longer

By Judith Epstein

Two months ago when the Mariner investigated the gas situation at local stations in the Village on Route 3A, the trouble was with steepening prices and a slight cut back in allocations. Now, concern has switched to the availability of gas at all for both motorists and operators.

With the exception of two of the six stations the Mariner spoke with, owners and managers have been cut back to 70 or at the most 80 per cent of what they were receiving last year. That coupled with the Governor's order to fill only those motorists whose gas gauges registered under half a tank has created a horror show at stations.

Long lines result, spilling out in to the heavy traffic of Route 3A or the busy activities of South Main Street. So far, tempers haven't flared too badly, perhaps because the temperature has stayed on the cooler side of the 80's and 90's, but probably because most gas attendants are not stringently following the Governor's order. So motorists who find a station open within the first few hours that gas is sold can still tank up without too much trouble.

Most stations are finding that they can only pump for two or three hours, usually in the morning, before reach-

School Board Establishes New Goals

The School Committee Monday night approved the establishment of four new goals for the 1979-80 school year.

The first goal, which passed unanimously without discussion, will establish a cost-awareness program for all employees in the Cohasset Public Schools.

The next goal, a School Committee request for the School Facilities Committee to propose two all-purpose playing fields, passed five to one. There was some discussion about the readiness of Milliken Field for additional field area, but Superintendent John Maloney explained that the field is still in a two-phase process of renovation.

Committee member Frank England suggested the construction of a recreational area between the Joseph Osgood and Deer Hill Schools, but Chairman John Langmaid discounted the idea for now because of what would be a huge expense to the town.

A goal for the Superintendent, Principals and Special Needs Director Stephen Hart to work on a coordinated curriculum in the elementary schools with special emphasis on reading and listening skills, was also voted unanimously by the Committee.

Committee member Patricia Walsh had pointed out three specific area in which she wanted to see coordination including: the new SBA texts, uniformity in the areas of handwriting and reading and reviewing the present kindergarten as preparation.

Selectmen voted last week to continue Patrolman Randolph Feola, Jr.'s suspension, with pay, until their next meeting July 5.

Feola's suspension was to have ended last Wednesday June 20 when a pre-trial conference was scheduled at Hingham District Court. It was postponed until July 3 as Feola was required to testify in a rape case in Dedham Superior Court.

The conference to discuss the charges brought against Feola by Hull Police concerned driving under the influence, speeding, failing to keep to the right, failing to carry a driver's license and carrying a dangerous weapon. Feola pleaded innocent to the charges at Hingham District Court on May 8. His suspension was decided by Selectmen during an emergency Selectmen's meeting May 10.

Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark suggested at last week's meeting that Feola be put back to work on limited service. After some discussion, involving Feola's father, Police Chief Randolph Feola, it in the middle. Thaxter said was decided to continue his suspension with pay until an opinion from Town Counsel was given and until the outcome of the conference was known.

Town Counsel J. Blake Thaxter, said the next day that he hadn't heard a word about the postponement, but that it appears the town was caught that Feola was charged with "something of sufficient magnitude not to have him running around as a policeman. The board is stuck with their position." A trail date may not be forthcoming until late July or early August.

Police Chief Feola said, "Randy has been losing at least $200 a week of opportunities to work overtime and details. He's been punished $200 a week." Chief Feola commented that the case had been "overelaborated" and doubted that his son could receive a fair trial in this county.

Patrolman Feola's only comment this week was that his trial would be "a full open public trial and very interesting."

Notes From Upper Slobovia

It was a frustrated and discouraged man who met the Mariner last Friday at the disposal area. Joe Laugelle, dump caretaker, had once again faced a week of violators, sometimes numbering as many as 10, who had deliberately, negligently, and illegally dumped trash outside of both the front and back gates to the disposal area.

Laugelle said that people go so far as to tear the names off old envelopes so that they can't be traced back via their trash. And that's not all. Apparently people travel from other towns to dump their trash at Cohasset's closed gates. Laugelle wondered why those same people couldn't enter the disposal area of their respective towns and dump properly, if they can go to such trouble to violate and to disguise their trash so as not to be detected for violation.

After a saunter with Laugelle down to the gates, two cases in point were in evidence -- at the back gate branches and garden trimmings had been left both loose and carelessly thrown in to plastic bags; at the front gate was a grocery bag full of house trash. The latter trash was identifiable by several envelopes with addresses still attached. However, Laugelle was unable to reach the individual by telephone as the number was unlisted. Then he was faced with removing the trash to the pit himself, or if he wished to have the violator pick up the trash he would have to go to the person's home to leave the message.

In either case, it's a pain in the neck for Laugelle who puts up with this sort of thing from seven to ten times a week. He's only trying to keep the place clean for both the residents and sanitary's sake. A little cooperation won't kill anybody. Please try to do your share -- and don't dump illegally, it carries a $50 fine, which carries more clout.

The dump is open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. every day except Mondays, Wednesdays and holidays. Stickers which serve as passes for the disposal area and for Sandy Beach are available at the Cohasset Police Department froim 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. ANY DAY. Vehicle registrations are required as proof of residence.

Early Deadline

Due to the holiday July 4, the Mariner will appear Tuesday, instead of the regular Wednesday afternoon. As a result, the deadline for all news and advertising copy will be Saturday at 2 p.m.

Around Town Hall

Many concerned riders and parents attended the Selectmen's meeting last week to discuss the oiling project slated for the riding ring at Wheelright Park. Before going ahead with the oiling, however, which was approved by the state department of Water Pollution Control, a test area containing rotten stone will be used on a portion of the ring to see if dust will be kept down. The riders will decide if the new covering works adequately without oiling within a few weeks.

SERVICES GRANTED

Selectmen granted permission to Rev. John Benbow of the Second Congregational Church to hold ecumenical services at the lighthouse circles area of Government Island each Sunday in August at 7:30 a.m.

POOL PARKING

Mrs. Ellen Woolf of North Main Street complained to Selectmen last week about increasing congestion from the parking in the green area by the Cohasset Swim Center. Mrs. Woolf claimed that ice cream trucks which park there for several hours creates a dangerous situation for children.

Swim Center President agreed that the trucks stayed too long and created too much litter. He said he had tried to curb parking and activities there that lent to a "Carnival atmosphere." Police Chief Randolph Feola said he has sent men to check on the situation periodically and has found no disturbances. Selectmen took the matter under advisement.

WADLEIGH COMPLAINTS

Robert Salvador of Atlantic Avenue complained to Selectmen once again about after-midnight parking at the Wadleigh Park extension road which runs by his home. Salvador felt that policemen have been lax in ticketing offenders and said that he saw a cruiser pass by the area when youth had been parking and drinking at the prohibited spot.

Salvador said that he has asked people parking to keep their noise down and had been met with no or improper responses. He said he witnessed patrolman Frederick Grassie arrest a person who refused to leave the park area after he had been asked.

Chief Feola said that his men have been told to tag each car they find parking illegally. "The parking problem is nothing new. It's very hard, they don't pay attention. It's a tough proposition. I don't know the solution," he said. He added that he will get more men on policing the area as money permits.

Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark will check with town counsel to see if the road can be legally narrowed to discourage parking.

Long Gas Lines

ing the gallonage they set for the day. That leaves Cohasset dry except for the Getty station on Route 3A owned by John Swann, which manages to stay open until 5 p.m., according to gas attendant Whitney Halloran, "if we have the gas."

Halloran feels that checking the gauge is "too much of a pain" and only does so sporadically. He finds, too, that one-third of motorists are still "topping off," that is, purchasing small amounts of gasoline to keep their tanks full.

Other station owners disagree. They attest that purchases are usually well over five dollars, and that from most it is clear to see that they were just about on empty. At George Roukaounakis' Olympic Texaco station an overworked gas pumper said he was checking gauges when he could. Roukounakis, however, claimed he was "trying to enforce" the Governor's order, although he noted that he had found many gauges broken.

"Most people are on empty. There were a few fights this morning and we didn't let them buy," he said Of the plan, he said, "It might work but I doubt it. The odd/even plan would probably work better."

Joe Marks looked like he had it, when the Mariner approached him at his service station. "I'm running into next month's quota," he said. "I'm getting 71 per cent of last year's allocation. My repairs keep me going. I don't rely on gas for a living."

As for checking the gauges, Marks was adamant. "It's a law, you've got to." He finds no one reluctant to comply. People are becoming grateful to obtain gas when they can, whatever the price or stipulation, it seems.

Leo Fiori, manager of the Exxon station on Route 3A, actually finds his allocation a little higher this June than it was last because of an increase in business and a corresponding increase in allotment from the federal government. Fiori isn't finding topping off and he isn't looking at gas gauges either. "Maybe the governor ought to come out and look in. I don't need a punch in the head."

An aside to the whole mess, is the surprising patience that motorists are exhibiting as they wait in line. "People are very patient and very nice when they are looking for gas," Fiori said. "I'd like them to have the he added.

Robert McElaney of Village Service Station predicts that customer cooperation will become increasingly difficult to come by. "It's a tough situation. You're going to have customers who won't let you look, they won't move, they'll tell you to get lost."

The Mariner questioned several drivers waiting in gas lines how they felt about the situation. Most answered, "I don't mind," or "It's the first time I've had to wait," or "It's not that bad, but then again it's the first of the week." The reporter then pulled her car around to fill up and was questioned in return by the still waiting motorists.

Frannie Mitchell, owner of Mitchell's Repair Shop, has used all of June's allocation, and had to close down his pumps for the remainder of the week. Mitchell decided to stick out the week without gas sales because of the time it would take to apply for an emergency allotment.

"It stinks all around. My customers are going elsewhere, naturally. It's slowed up my repairs. If people can't drive, they won't get their cars repaired. Right now it's reasonably good. I don't know about the prognosis."

Mormon Warning

Letters

To the Editor:

When the leaders of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints speak out on a political issue you can be assured they have something to say. Of grave concern to Mormons and to all Americans is the subject of religious freedom in this our nation's 203rd year particularly.

Attacks on time honored religious symbols in our public life and growing efforts to establish irreligion as the official position of the United States leave little doubt in the minds of Mormon leaders that our nation's official position could easily become one of secularism and atheism, if we are not careful.

Latter-Day Saints are committed by experience as well as precept to the wisdom of respectful neutrality in the matter of religion. But surely this principle does not call for our nation to ignore its religious heritage! The basic documents of our land, from the Mayflower Compact through the Declaration of Independence and the writings of our Founding Fathers to the inaugural addresses of presidents early and modern, are replete with reverent expressions of reliance on Almighty God and gratitude for his blessings.

Those who oppose all reference to God in our public life have set themselves the task of rooting out historical facts and ceremonial tributes and symbols held dear to our people. These acts can only be interpreted, say the Church leaders, as an official act of hostility toward religion!

It is my hope that on this our nation's birthday we the people will awaken to the current threats to our religious heritage and take steps to safeguard and preserve the principles upon which our country was founded.

Sincerely yours,
Polly Doggett

McKinnon Unveils Boat Funds

Senator Allan R. McKinnon has announced Senate approval of $205,000 in state funds for the South Shore commuter boat.

The funds were included in the annual state budget at the request of Sen. McKinnon and will provide support for commuter boat services throughout the 1980 fiscal year.

"The fuel shortage, the alarming rise in gas prices and the serious traffic problems associated with reconstruction along Rte. 3 have all combined to make Expressway travel a very frustrating, costly and time-consuming proposition for South Shore commuters," said McKinnon.

Fire, Police Lauded

The following letter was addressed to the Board of Selectmen:

Dear Mr. Clark:

As a resident of the Town of Cohasset for the past eight years, I have had little if any occasion to address myself to any of the Town issues or services. I am writing, however, to express my heartfelt thanks and the strongest praise to the men of the Cohasset Police and Fire Department and, in particular, to the Emergency Medical Technicians.

On Monday evening, actually the early morning hours of Tuesday, June 12, 1979, my daughter became seriously ill, having difficulty breathing. Within minutes after a telephone call to the Police, Police, Fire Department and Emergency Medical Technicians arrived. They acted with dispatch providing emergency treatment and rushed my daughter to the South Shore Hospital where, after treatment for some hours, her condition was eleviated and she was allowed to return home.

I am attempting to express, by this letter, the gratitude that a parent feels to those who have acted with professionalism and dispatch in a life threatening situation.

Very truly yours,

School Board

England reminded the Committee that goals should be emphasized as something special to work toward, and not a reiteration of job descriptions. While Supt. John Maloney advised the Committee not to become too broad and ambitious in their goals, Hart said that is was not unreasonable to ask for uniformity in elementary reading programs. Walsh's three points were condensed to cover reading and listening skills.

The Committee voted unanimously to examine the possibility of expanding the Advanced Placement program for high school seniors.

Committee member Martha Gjestby suggested a goal to upgrade the Jr/Sr. high school level curriculum for the average student. She felt that students not in Advanced Placement or honors courses were not motivated enough in the regular college classes.

Supt. Maloney said that the problem lies with the students' own motivation, behavior and imagination and that it was not the part of the school, outside of homework assignments, to carry these qualities to the youngsters. The Committee agreed that there was no way to attack Gjesteby's goal and that it needed more specificity.

Other topics under consideration as possible goals but not voted on included: that corridor duty by the staff be improved in the high school; that maintenance improve high school floors, the Deer Hill basement, the high school ladies rooms and the Joseph Osgood janitors' areas; and that the Guidance Department give information about Cohasset High School to college placement offices.

Help Sought For CHS Driveway

Superintendent John Maloney asked Selectmen last week to help alleviate a hazardous condition at the end of a driveway that adjoins the high school property with Pond Street.

Several accidents have occured at the spot, Maloney said. Apparently vehicles approaching from the opposite direction experience a blind spot at the crest of the hill which makes it difficult for oncoming drivers to see each other.

Maloney suggested lowering the crest of the hill so that the direct line of sight would include a greater distance for vehicles approaching from the opposite direction. He also suggested widening the street for a 100 yards or so on either side of the driveway by using land on the high school side of Pond Street. A narrow island and caution light could be installed, he added, in the center of the widened area to help keep automobiles in their proper lanes.

At its sixtieth annual commencement exercises held on May 19, Babson College awarded over 300 undergraduate students the Bachelor of Science degree, while nearly 400 graduate students received the Master of Business Administration degree.

Mr. G. William Miller, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, addressed the class of 1979. He spoke of the consequences of continuing at the present rate of inflation, but explained federal government plans to roll back inflation, one of America's prime concerns. Also of great concern, Miller stated, is this country's energy problem. Chairman Miller charged the Babson graduates with the responsibility to assure that "we shall look to America as the first nation in economic achievement, in social justice, and in contribution to peace and stability throughout the world."

John McGinnis of 15 Windy Hill Road, received a Master of Business Administration degree in graduate ceremonies recently held at Babson Collge in Wellesley.

Robert Doherty, son of the John Dohertys of Cedar Acres Lane was awarded an associate degree at Massasoit Community College. Joan Short received her degree from Massasoit during commencement excercises which were followed by a reception in the fine arts building. Laurie DeRosa of Locust Road, Barbara Fielding of Jerusalem Road, and Aliced Pierce of Windy Hill Road received bachelor of arts degrees from Bridgewater State College.

Mr. and Mrs. David Smith of Kansas City, Kansas, are visiting their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Tolman of Black Horse Lane.

The Donny and Marie Osmond show which opened at the Music Circus last Monday was a feather in the cap of Ron Rawson, the producer-manager. He had heard that the Osmond family could not do a tent show, as the Music Circus is called in the trade, so he called them in their home in Prove, Utah. He convinced Wayne Osmond to schedule Cohasset into their itinerary.

More congratulations are in order for college graduates. John B. Macauley, son of Dwight and Virginia Macauley received a bachelor of science degree from Bates College in Lewiston, Maine. John was a biology major, a member of the Outing Club, the Campus Association, college recreation and service organizations. He was a graduate of Phillips Academy in Andover.

Sarah Leggat, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Leggat of Atlantic Avenue, was among more than 1,000 students receiving bachelor's degrees at the 209th commencement exercises at Dartmouth College in Hanover, N.H. Chris Jordan was among 74 men who received Doctor of Medicine degrees from the University of Massachusetts Medical School in Worcester, Ma.

A daughter was born on June 11 at the South Shore Hospital to Damiano and Guilana Truglia of Hull Street. Grandparents are the Pasquale Pruglias of Lambert Lane and the Dominic Saldis.

Susan Conway hosted a party at her South Main Street home for about 150 high school juniors. When her father, Jack Conway, well-known Cohasset realtor, walked out by the pool the next day to begin clean-up operations, he found that some of the young people had returned to clean up after the party. Jack wants to go on record as saying the Cohasset young adults are some of the finest has has known. He for one is appreciative of their thoughtfulness, and exemplary behavior.

Margaret Chapin and Boo Leach were among those seen at the champagne reception preceding the Glastonbury Abbey night at the Boston Pops. Three buses took members of the congregation and their friends to a most pleasant evening at Pops, featuring the music of Irving Berlin under the playful baton of guest conductor and arranger Norman Leyden.

There's More to the Perfection of a Diamond Than "Flawless"

A flawless diamond is not necessarily the best diamond one can buy. At DeScenza we'll show you the method of scaling the perfection or "clarity" of a diamond — the natural grains and inclusions in a stone, under 10 power magnification.

A flawless diamond very rarely has fine color and beautifully proportioned cut, simply because it is extremely rare to find a perfect diamond in all aspects. Because of this a one carat, "perfect" gem diamond, that a museum or collector would buy, costs $25,000.

At DeScenza's we will teach you what one should look for in a diamond. To properly see the quality of a diamond none of our stones are mounted before you select your stone. A stone with some small inclusion seen under 10 power magnification is common, because nature is rarely perfect. The color and cut is what gives a diamond its outward beauty that you see.

Lobstermen Award Three Scholarships

The South Shore Lobstermen's Association and The Mass. Lobstermen's Association has awarded scholarships to three local High School Graduates.

The recipients of the scholarships are:

Charles Lutz, son of John and Irene Fenton and Charles R. Lutz, 30 Peggoty Beach Road, Scituate.

Nancy J. Worth, daughter of Allen and Barbara Worth of 156 Woodlawn Circle, Marshfield.

These scholarships were given by the South Shore Lobstermen's Association.

The Mass. Association awarded a scholarship to Ellen Figueiredo, daughter of Robert W. and Margaret D. Figueiredo of 173 Pond St., Cohasset.

Lutz plans to enter Worcester Polytech to study physics.

Miss Worth plans to prepare for a career in nursing at Fitchburg State College.

Miss Figueirdo plans to attend the University of Vermont to prepare for a career in the field of Radiology Technology.

DeVito —McLean

Kimberly Ann DeVito, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony M. DeVito, Jr., of Darien, Conn. was married to Scott McLean, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. Bruce McLean of Cohasset.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents. The ceremony was performed by Monsignor Hefferman at St. Cecelia's Catholic Church, Stamford. Alfred DeCarlo was soloist and Mrs. Thomas Long organist. A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents.

Laurie Jean Conetta, cousin of the bride, was maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Mrs. Thomas J. O'Regan, sister of the bride; Jill Quirk of Darien, Barbara Wisehart of Framingham, Janet Prentice of Durham, N.H.; Barbara Hamilton of No. Kingston, R.I. and Diane Hague of Lincoln, R.I.

Sammis McLean of New York City, brother of the groom, was best man. Ushers were: Anthony M. DeVito III, and Jack DeVito, brothers of the bride; Timothy Garrison, cousin of the groom, of Cohasset; Thomas Zarella of Thibodeux, La., Ens. Kevin Carey of Coronado, Calif. and Linn Murdock of North Attleboro. Noah Briggs of Waukasha, Wisc., nephew of the groom was ring bearer.

The bride was graduated from Darien High School and the University of Rhode Island with a B.S. degree from the College of Resource Development.

The groom was graduated from Cohasset High School in 1971 and received his B.S. degree with distinction from the University of Rhode Island's College of Resource Development in 1978. He is presently enrolled as a Masters Degree Candidate in the department of Food Science Technology, Nutrition and Dietetics.

MRS. SCOTT MCLEAN

The bride is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony M. DeVito Sr. of Darien and Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., and Mrs. Ida Vasone of Stamford and the late Mr. John Vasone.

The groom is the grandson of Mrs. Elmer Linn Fuller of Cohasset, and the late Mr. Fuller and also of the late Mrs. Ralph Ephraim Scripture of Cohasset and the late Mr. Alexander Scott McLean.

After a trip to Ft. Lauderdale Fla., the couple will reside in Narragansett, R.I.

60 Plus To Meet

Board members of the Cohasset 60 Plus Club will meet at 60 Elm Street, in the recreation hall, Thursday July 12 at 11 a.m.

On Thursday Aug. 16th, the club's annual picnic will be held at the Wakeman's at 12 noon.

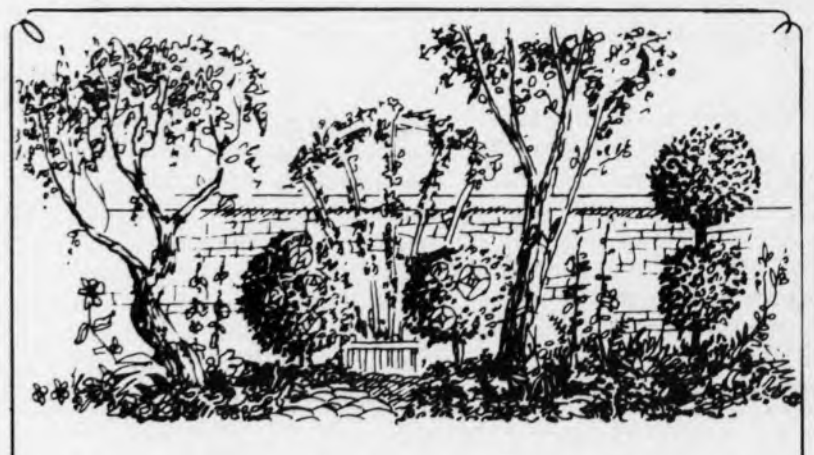
8 of the best savings incentives ever.

Incentive # 7

Magnavox VHS
Video Cassette Recorder.

Attaches to any TV set. So now you can catch your favorite shows without being a slave to programming times.

It's yours with an $11,000 Four-Year Savings Certificate. (Gifts in lieu of one year's interest.) Find out more about this, and the other seven fantastic savings incentives at South Shore Bank. Stop in soon.



Federal regulations require a substantial penalty in the event of premature withdrawal. If you redeem your certificate before maturity, you will be entitled to the difference between the amount you deposited and the cost of the gift you received (including sales tax and delivery charges), plus interest on that amount at the then current interest rate payable for regular savings deposits, less three months' interest at such rate.
The cost of the merchandise you choose will be considered income for Income Tax purposes in the year you invest in your certificate. South Shore Bank will send an interest statement to you indicating this amount.

Please allow 4 to 6 weeks for delivery. We reserve the right to withdraw any item in this selection if no longer available, and to replace it with one of equal or greater value.

Gasless weekends may see us all under house arrest this summer. Gardens that thrive while we're usually off on vacation, will receive TLC as we're forced to stay home and watch the grass grow.

NEW POTATOES, GREEN BEANS IN CREAM

In a kettle blanch 1½ pds. green beans in boiling salted water to cover for 6 to 7 min. Drain in a colander, trim ends and cut into 1" pieces. In saucepan, cook 2 pds. new potatoes, scrubbed, in boiling salted water to cover to 20 to 25 min., or until tender and drain. In large skillet melt 1/2 stick, or 1/4 c. butter over moderately high heat and add 3 T sliced scallions and the beans, tossing to coat them. Pour in 1 1/2 c. heavy cream and simmer the mixture until the cream is reduced and thickened. Cut potatoes into 1/2" slices and add to bean mixture. Toss potatoes gently and cook for 3 to 5 min., or until they're heated through. Season vegetables with salt and pepper to taste.

Idling away one's vacation in a hot car while waiting a turn at the gas pump make us think twice before venturing out. Instead of running to the store quite so often, we'll have to plan ahead and here's where a freezer comes in handy. Did you know that any food that comes in a can, can be frozen? Even mashed bananas can go into the freezer. So can seafoods Dad has snagged from a nearby pier and leftovers, casseroles, baby foods and cheese. Cheddar cheese may crumble, but pimento cheese freezes well. Frozen milk will keep up to four months without losing nutritive value. Frozen food that has thawed can be refrozen if it was thawed in the refrigerator, or if it was cooked an immediately refrozen.

Just to break the monotony of swinging in the backyard hammock, have the neighbors walk over for a get-together. Who knows, they too may be tired of being confined to quarters. Sooner or later, there'll be a return invitation and you'll have a nice thing going. Here is a recipe from Candy Kruger designed to feed four adults. However, you can double it and freeze it for a quick meal with wine and hot rolls. To double, increase green beans to three pounds and double all other ingredients. Make your meat balls two inches in diameter rather than one. This favorite summer meal has been dubbed:

MOM KRUGER'S VEGETABLE CASSEROLE

1 lb. fresh string beans cut in 1" pieces
2 med. onions peeled, sliced
3 large tomatoes peeled, sliced
3 green peppers

Add anything else from garden like mushrooms, okra, zucchini.

1/2 c. fresh parsley, or 3 T prepared
1/4 c. olive oil
2 tsp. salt
2 tsp. Accent
1/4 tsp. oregano
2 1/2 tsp. sugar

Place in greased casserole, or crockpot. Bake in 250 degree oven for 3 hours or in slow cooker til beans are almost tender. Make 1" meatballs as follows:

1 1/2 lb. ground beef
2 tsp. salt
Dash pepper
1/2 tsp. oregano, or marjoram

Make into walnut size meatballs. Add to vegetables and cook until browned. This recipe may also be prepared in a pressure cooker, giving you a choice of three methods of cooking: crockpot, oven or pressure cooker.

ticular interest were Articles 65 and 71 which concerned zoning area regulation changes in the Downtown Business and Highway Business districts. These, especially Article 71 which has met with attack from merchants along Route 3A, were expected to be the most controversial issues of the meeting.

It was asked if the two articles not passing with a two-thirds majority in April needed a stronger vote in case the town budget wasn't in compliance with the state's four per cent tax cap.

Town Accountant William Signorelli said the town is $108,728 under the four per cent limit for the year, and that even if all the other costs requested of the town but which weren't considered had been counted in the total, the four per cent limit would still not be exceeded.

Mariner Drop Spot

He also received an honorary professorship from Simon Rodriguez University in Caracus Venezuela.

'Fourth' Band Concert Tops Rec Program

The 30 piece South Shore Concert Band will give a performance, weather permitting, Tuesday, July 4th, at 7:30 p.m. on the town common. The concert is free and will last about two hours. The public is cordially invited to the Recreation Department's first, in a series of six, summer band concerts. You should bring either a blanket or folding chairs to sit on. Younger children should be accompanied by parents or older brothers and sisters.

THIS WEEKS MOVIE

The first, in a series of eight feature length films, will be held in the Town Hall Auditorium, at 7:30 p.m. sharp, Thursday, July 5. Movies are free and open to any Cohasset resident. Again, younger children must be accompanied by older, responsible siblings or an adult. This week's film will end at 9:20 p.m. and all children must be picked up promptly at that time.

The movie is called "The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman."

MUSIC CIRCUS TICKETS

Payment for the first performance, "Treasure Island" to be held Thursday, July 12, must be made at the Recreation Department office, on Wednesday, June 27, before 12 noon. The cost for this performance is $2.50 per child, and checks must be made out to the "Town of Cohasset."

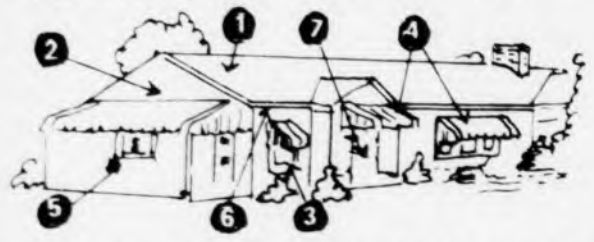
Payment for the second Music Circus Children's performance to be held Thursday, July 19, must be made next Thursday, July 5, at the Recreation Department office. The cost is $2.05 per child and the show is "Swiss Family Robinson," All payments must be made via check to the Town of Cohasset.

GYMNASTICS REGISTRATION

The Recreation Department will accept registrations over the phone for beginner, intermediate, and advanced gymnastic classes for girls and boys who will be entering Grade 4 this fall through senior high school.

The program will be held Wednesday afternoons at the junior high school (upstairs) gym at the following times: beginners, 12 noon -1 p.m.; intermediates, 1-2 p.m.; advanced, 2-3 p.m. The program will be six weeks long and meet an hour each week from Wednesday, July 11, through Wednesday, August 15.

The fee for the program is $6 per person with a 50 per cent discount for more than one child from the same family. Registration will end Monday, July 9. However, classes will fill quickly and be limited in size, so please register right away if interested.



Holyoke Officers

Officers elected for the 1979-80 season of the Mount Holyoke Club of the South Shore are: Mrs. Donald Allen and Elizabeth Ward, co-presidents; Mrs. John F. Nawn, vice president; Mrs. E. Allan Frederickson, membership; Mrs. Russell Garland, secretary; Mrs. Carlyle Jacob, treasurer; Mrs. Robert Kurtz and her assistant, Mrs. William Bristol, alumnae admissions.

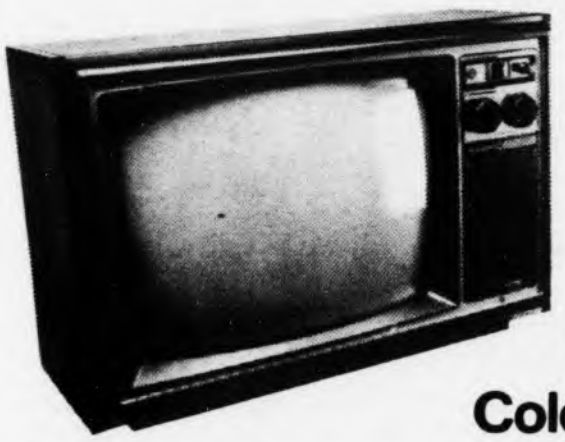
Scouting Awards



The Four Harbors District Recognition Dinner of the Boy Scouts was held in Cohasset and Merle Brown of Beechwood Street was elected to serve as District chairman for the coming year. Steven Hall introduced special guests Red Cota, chief scout executive, and Bill Bassett, council commissioner. District executive Don Bemus presented plagues to the Events chairmen Bill Hayes, Paul Leger, Bruce Marshman, Ralph Fiore, David James and Steven Hall. Former district chairman Ty Martin presented certificates of appreciation to: Anna Marie Lopez, Bob Snow, Chrisanne Gregoire, Russ Sears, Merle Brown and Bob Jordan. Veterans status awards were given to Ginny Joseph for 10 years service and to Bernie Pokat for 45 years of scouting support. The highlight of this year's dinner was the District Award of Merit, presented by Ty Martin, Helen Adler and Paul Leger for outstanding work on behalf of scouting in the Four Harbors district.

Harbor Meeting

Scituate and Cohasset Selectmen will meet either July 10 in Scituate or July 11 in Cohasset to discuss mutual concerns relating to Cohasset Harbor.

Scituate Selectmen will decide the date depending on their agenda for their regular meeting July 10.

8 of the best savings incentives ever.
Incentive # 1

Magnavox 19" Color Portable TV.

The automatic fine tuning will give you accurate, bright, and clear color on both VHF and UHF. It comes in a beautiful walnut finish that makes this TV an attractive piece of furniture in any room. It's yours with a $5,000 Four-Year Savings Certificate. (Gifts in lieu of one year's interest.) Find out more about this, and the other seven fantastic savings incentives at South Shore Bank. Stop in soon.

Federal regulations require a substantial penalty in the event of premature withdrawal. If you redeem your certificate before maturity, you will be entitled to the difference between the amount you deposited and the cost of the gift you received (including sales tax and delivery charges), plus interest on that amount at the then current interest rate payable for regular savings deposits, less three months' interest at such rate. The cost of the merchandise you choose will be considered income for Income Tax purposes in the year you invest in your certificate. South Shore Bank will send an interest statement to you indicating this amount.

Please allow 4 to 6 weeks for delivery. We reserve the right to withdraw any item in this selection if no longer available, and to replace it with one of equal or greater value.

A History Of Sandy Beach

By Karin Bartow

Sandy Beach is a popular spot to visit throughout the year for a sniff of salt air and a look at Minot's Light and the ocean, but when summer arrives, it becomes a haven for sunworshippers, swimmers, and beach lovers.

Once inaccessible and valuable only for its kelp and salt, the beach interested early Cohasset settlers when a ship washed ashore. After the construction of roads and bridges, the addition of Minot's Light, and the advent of bathing as a fashionable pasttime, the shore property became popular for summer residences.

Even during the difficult days of World War I, townspeople watching the gradual development of the shoreline took action to preserve Sandy Beach for future generations.

Burtram J. Pratt writes in A Narrative History of the Town of Cohasset (Vol. II), "To pre-

Cohasset (Vol. II), "To pre-serve a portion of the waterfront for public use, a group of citizens purchased Sandy Beach in 1917 and formed a civic corporation to hold it perpetually for the residents of Cohasset."

Sixty-two years later, according to F. Allen Weisenfluh, President of Sandy Beach Association, "this (intent) is working well because the objective was to have a clean, natural bathing beach and changing facility for the people who live in the town and, in my opinion, people are happy with it the way it is."

Newcomers to Cohasset may wonder why they are asked to support a ('town') beach. A beach for the town, yes, but not owned by the town and not run on tax dollars. When the original trust was written and land given for the beach, there was no endowment established. In fact, the terms of the trust specifically prohibit charging fees to town residents for use of the beach. Since that time the eight trustees whose responsibility it is to preserve and maintain the beach for residents, have relied on fund raising and membership fees from 110 Hingham residents.

Income pays for salaries of beach personnel, maintenance and insurance. The parking lot is owned and maintained by the Town. The Association pays for rubbish removal, which is deposited in barrels donated by the Rotary Club. The last accumulated surplus concrete bathhouse was built. It replaced the old wooden one that was a fire hazard and source of vandalism.

The Association about breaks even, but this doesn't allow for any build-up of surplus for improvements or more personnel. Weisenfluh is striving for better participation in fund raising. Last year out of the total population (apx. 7,600), only 300 residents contributed and he doesn't feel this is representative enough of the total beach users. "The key," says Paul Corbett, the treasurer, "is to get every family in town to make a small donation. It needn't be large, if everyone could give."

The trustees are a diversified and conscientious group, mindful of the value of the beach they protect and preserve. After 15 years of experience as a trustee, Weisenfluh became president four years ago when Hollis Gleason retired. Gleason become a trustee in 1934, and was president for 25 years. The other trustees are: Marguerite Libby, secretary; Paul C. Corbett, treasurer; H. William Adams III, maintenance; R. Perry Collins, personnel, Samuel Wakeman, Sr., Jeff Steel, and Richard F. Mantz.

When a trustee is voted in (by the group itself) to succeed a retiring one, he or she receives a share of the corporation, which expires when they resign. Of the 100 original shares, approximately 25-30 remain. No provision was made for the transfer of these shares to other family members, so when the holders pass on the shares expire.

The beach opened officially —life guards on duty from 9 to 5 —Thursday, June 21. The Association conducted a massive clean-up beforehand. This year's staff includes four lifeguards, with one, Ed McGillicuddy, acting as beach manager. Returning for his fourth year, Ed teaches school in Braintree and was formerly an MDC lifeguard.

Bill Adams says, "It's difficult for these kids to discipline themselves and to keep law and order on the beach. Ed has done a great job and brought the needed experience to pull everyone together." The other lifeguards are Mark St. John, Dan Blakeman, and Joe Donnelly, all from Cohasset. John Ayer, a senior at Cohasset High, will work on maintenance full-time and will keep the beach house open from 5 to 7 p.m., after the lifeguards go off duty.

Little League All Star Selections

David Bernstein, head coach of the All Star Little League Team has announced the selection of players to this year's squad: Toby Chamberlain, Robert Corkery, Steven O'Connor, Peter McGee, Chris Kuhn, James Staunton, Philip Bernstein, Chris Hublitz, Michael Roan, Troy Chatterton, Kevin Quilty, Tim Campbell, William McKenna, David McDonald and Brian Ramsey. Assistant coaches are: Uva Hublitz and Jeff Ladd. The program will continue through the summer with four teams competing in the Pond League and a full schedule of games in the Babe Ruth League. John Kornet is treasurer of the Cohasset Youth Athletic Association, and Bruce Dalrymple is president of the group. John Pereira is the secretary. The South Shore Music Circus sponsors an annual benefit with part of the proceeds going to the CYAA. Merchants, patrons and residents of the town also contribute to the operating budget.

Madeline Bailey, who works in the South Shore Box office completed her third year at Emerson College, and has been assigned to write a new script for Norman Lear Enterprises. The pilot for a new TV series concerns a Soviet Olympic athlete who defects to the United States. Madeline will fly to Hollywood to begin her writing assignment. Her friends at the Music Circus sent her off with a surprise party and a monogrammed attache case.

John Cahill, a freshman at Trinity College in Hartford, Conn., has been awarded a junior varsity letter for the 1979 spring season. Cahill was a member of the 4-3 junior varsity lacrosse team. John is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Cahill of South Main Street and a graduate of Cohasset High School.

Marr Mooring Issue Goes To Harbormaster

Commercial fisherman Matthew Marr and his attorney Michael Savage met with Selectmen last week to discuss the mooring of Marr's 38 foot fishing boat in Cohasset Harbor. Selectmen deferred the matter to Harbormaster Harry Ritter.

Selectmen prefaced the discussion by reading a copy of a letter dated June 20 sent to Marr from Ritter. Ritter notified Marr that his boat, the "Sally Marie" was in violation of the harbor regulations, as he had placed that boat on his old 30' mooring. According to the mooring regulations, a boat owner is not to increase the size of a boat using the same tackle without written permission from the Harbormaster.

"In the best interest of navigation and the safe mooring of boats, I have no alternative but to order your boat removed from the confines of Cohasset Harbor within 72 hours or it will be removed in accordance with Chapter 102, Section 24 of the Commonwealth of Massachusett," Ritter stated in the letter.

Marr is the third person on the 38' section of the mooring waiting list and made application last February. The first two names applied for moorings in 1977, but Attorney Savage argued that they don't have 38' boats as yet. He reasoned that Marr's livelihood (he is a full time firefighter) would be enhanced by fishing commercially and the fact that he already owns a 38' boat should put him at the top of the list.

Harbormaster Harry Ritter said later that there is no room for another 38' fishing vessel in the harbor and that Marr's boat was in danger of colliding with neighboring boats.

Marr claimed that the houseboat which Ritter had previously stated came within 18 inches of the fishing boat wasn't near his boat at all. Savage further said that the harbor regulations were putting Marr out of business and that it wasn't economically viable not to allow him to keep his boat there. When Selectmen noted that a commercial fisherman is supposed to earn not less than 85 per cent of his annual livelihood, Savage replied with a terse four-letter expletive.

According to Ritter Monday, Marr has not yet received the certified letter of violation, but that as soon as he does he has 72 hours to have his boat removed, Ritter said, or he will seek a court order to have it removed.

Selectmen Approve Beer Permit

A wine and malt license for Papa Gino's restaurant was approved by Selectmen last week. The restaurant is under construction at Cushing Plaza and is expected to be open for business by early July.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle, who voted against granting the license, felt that the serving of alcoholic beverages at the restaurant would contribute to the loitering and congregating of youths in the area. Beec od Street residents voiced their objection to the license at a hearing held several weeks ago, because they felt it would be an additional invitation for young people to gather and drink there.

Selectman Henry Ainslie and Chairman Arthur Clark had disagreed that the license would necessarily create additional problems outside the restaurant, and their votes reflected their opinion.

"There's no reason to vote against it if the company's responsible," Clark said. Attorney for Papa Gino's Howard Wayne had submitted six favorable recommendations to Selectmen from other towns where the restaurants sold wine and beer.

Wayne assured the Selectmen that their serving policy is strictly supervised. Alcoholic beverages are served only at the restaurant, he said, and would therefore not add to the problem of gathering youths outside.

HERE'S ANOTHER REASON WHY JACK CONWAY & COMPANY, REALTORS® ARE GOOD PEOPLE TO DO BUSINESS WITH:

One of our Associates is probably your neighbor.

We were able to get the Conway Sales Associates in our Cohasset office to sit still long enough to take this group shot.

Chances are, you will recognize some or all of them . . . because they're neighbors. They know you. They know the town and the area. And that gives them an edge over a lot of other Realtors.

Jack Conway & Company has 23 other offices like Cohasset and over 200 Sales Associates who can work with you — to find the right buyer for your home, or the right home for you if you're a buyer.

Last year, Conway Sales Associates sold over 2,250 homes, or about one every three hours.

No other Realtor in New England can match that record. And that's why Conway Country is Number One with a lot of happy homeowners, including some of your neighbors.

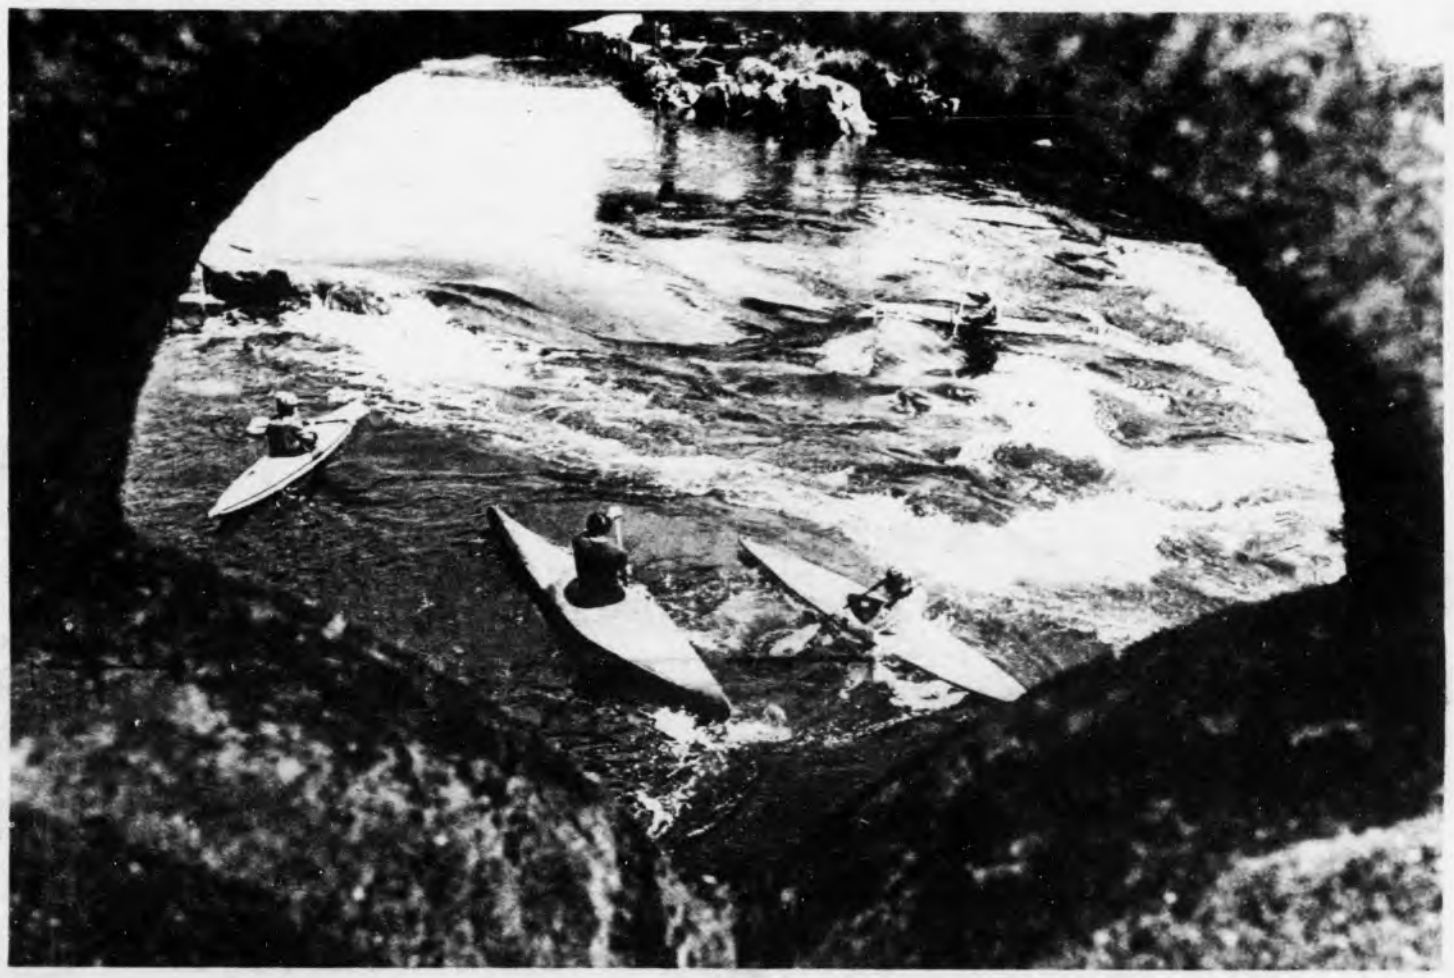
Matthew Marr Loses Mooring Court Batt

A Norfolk Superior Court judge ruled Monday that Matthew Marr, a full-time firefighter and commercial fisherman, was to remove his 38' boat, the "Sally Marie," from Cohasset Harbor.

Marr was denied a restraining order which would have prevented Harbormaster Harry Ritter from removing the boat. A counter claim to restrain Marr from mooring his boat in the harbor was requested by Assistant Town Counsel Richard Henderson and was granted by the court.

There will be a hearing on July 12 at Norfolk Superior Court in Dedham for a preliminary injunction, which will further restrain Marr from mooring in the harbor. A trial on all merits of the case would follow, Henderson explained. "In the meantime he must remove his boat immediately," he said.

Marr brought various charges against both Ritter and the Board of Selectmen after receiving a certified letter from Ritter ordering the boat out of the harbor within three days. Marr was cited in violation of harbor regulations for mooring the new 38' boat in place of his old 30' vessel, and for disregarding the mooring waiting list.



A summons was served Selectmen last week stating that Marr was seeking to have Cohasset Harbor bylaws declared unconstitutional for attempting to regulate fishing industry and in violation of the fourteenth amendment on three counts.

He also sought that Massachusetts General Law Chapter 102 Section 24, which governs removal of a vessel lying in the harbor, be declared unconstitutional "for the reason that the section is impermissibly vague in that it fails to provide procedural safeguards to protect the property rights of the plaintiff."

Cohasset Harbor regulations declare that a commercial fisherman must earn at least 85 percent of his livlihood from fishing. Marr's brief stated that the 85 percent income regulation is "arbitrary and capricious and has no relation to the economic variables of the fishing industry." Marr's gross income last year as a lobsterman was quoted as $20,000, an amount "substantially in excess" of his salary as a firefighter.

Marr also contended that the two applicants who are ahead of him on the mooring list for 38' moorings were not in possession of 38' boat at th[e] Marr held a winter m[ee]ting wit[h] Selectmen on the matter. A[t] that time Marr told Selectmen, the brief [re]ads, that "it was his opinion that [the] present mooring was sufficient for

Meet Ellery Clark...Red Sox Super Fan

By Judith Epstein

Ellery Clark, a lifelong summertime native of Cohasset, is the only author in the world to have written three books on the Red Sox.

Clark has applied research methods — garnered from his years as a captain in the Navy, professor of naval history at the Naval Academy and as a track and cross country coach — in the compilation of correspondences with Red Sox players. This method has yielded Clark his primary sources, namely the detailed letters he receives back answering his detailed questions.

"Relying on my correspondence material with hundreds of Red Sox in these first 79 years of their club history, I have tried to analyze and present Red Sox history both from the technical aspects of the game, as well as from the importance of the intangibles in their diamond careers," Clark said of the coordinating theme of the now completed trilogy.

His latest book Red Sox Fever! is hot off the press and follows Boston Red Sox: 75th Anniversary History and Red Sox Forever. The third book is longer and more genial, Clark said, and full of anecdotes. Many other points distinguish the third book from the others and they include a Red Sox history quiz of over 235 questions, a chapter on Red Sox scouts (to which all Boston scouts contributed), a chapter on Red Sox memorabilia and one on Clark's experiences on radio and television as a result of his writing.

Of particular note is the inclusion of Clark's personal collection of Red Sox photographs, letters, scorebooks and statistics, which he has been busily gathering since Clark caught the fever for good in 1924, when he was 14 years old.

Clark's writing is a combination of both the serious and humorous. He maintained, "It attempts an appreciation of Red Sox baseball as just one facet of millions of vocations and avocations in life, and so it has to be a reflection of life and as such has its lights and shadows, joys and disappointments, seriousness and humor."

Clark's favorite player was the great right fielder Harry Hopper of the 1909-1920 team. "He was the only Red Sox to play on four World Champion clubs. He is an outstanding man as well as an outstanding baseball player," Clark said.

Building Begins On Scituate-Cohasset Breakwater

The Scituate breakwater – that is, the breakwater in Scituate waters in Cohasset Harbor – is under construction for repair of damages incurred during the Blizzard of 1978.

The Bassing Beach breakwater is being rebuilt by Lawrence Lynch Corp. of Falmouth, the construction engineers hired by the town of Scituate. Comp, Dresser & McKee are the architects for the project. The cost of the project is $214,500 and is entirely financed by Federal Disaster Administration Assistance funds.

The 575 foot long breakwater should be completed by September, after rather roundabout construction procedures have taken place. Foreman William Dawes said that the additional stone neededtobuild up the breakwater another couple of feet will have to come from Bates Quarry in Quincy via the sea.

Barges will be loaded at Duane Dock, and starting in two weeks, 5000 tons of quarry stone will be traveling by sea in 300 ton shipments twice a week. The stone will then be lifted off by crane and set into place.

Access to the breakwater would have been easier through Cohasset Harbor, but because of summer craft, passing would be too difficult that way. Furthermore, Dawes said the sea was the only viable means of access anyway, because Scituate has no direct land access to the breakwater.

"Normal construction practices will be used on the job," Dawes said. It involved constructing tow stones, stones on the bottom of the jetty, all the way to the tip or nose of the breakwater. The upper portions requiring the quarry stone will be added, working back in the opposite direction.

When asked if the new breakwater will be better able to withstand violent northeast storms, Dawes replied, "If you get a strong storm nothing will hold together." He added, however, that the original breakwater was constructed by hand around the turn of the century, and that it had done pretty well until February 1978.

For those who wanted to know how jetties are built like this one in Cohasset Harbor...They're built from boulders delivered by barge and it t'aint easy.

Mooring Battle

enlarged vessel, and they did not disagree." "In reliance upon" that conversation, the brief continued, Marr purchased a 38' vessel.

The next week, on June 13, Marr was denied a mooring before the Cohasset Harbor Study Commission because he didn't earn 85 percent of his livelihood as a fisherman and that he had enlarged his vessel in violation of harbor regulations. On June 18, Marr moored his 38' boat at his assigned mooring, the brief stated. Subsequently Marr received the certified letter from Ritter on June 25 ordering him out of the harbor within 72 hours.

Marr contended that the harbor bylaws "were designed to economically strangle the fishing community and are not based upon authenticated information or statistics collected by a reputable body." He further charged that the purpose of the bylaws was to "discriminate against commercial fishermen" as well as "intention to close off the commercial area to new fishermen and regulate the size of the fishing vessels thereby making fishing economically unfeasible."

Mooring and harbor regulations amendments were accepted by Selectmen last 1978 which, in part, limited the size of the fishing fleet to the harbor's capabilities for efficient operations. Harbormaster Ritter said that there is no room for another 38' boat in the harbor at all, and that Marr's 30' mooring can't accommodate the larger vessel.

Ritter has been unable to moor a 32' Pacemaker, owned by Harry Silvia, on its mooring of 12 years because of flows in the harbor at low tide, which could cause congestion and collision of boats in the area of Marr's mooring, he said. Silvia's boat is now on a 34' lobsterboat mooring in a section of the harbor bordering the commercial area.

Cohasset's contribution to Red Sox baseball has been indirect, Clark said, but of eminent importance. Bill Enos, an Elm Street resident, for one, is a successful Red Sox scout, and just off Jerusalem Road lives Ken Coleman, Red Sox radio broadcaster, one of the greatest in the game, Clark attested.

Clark, himself, played baseball as a pitcher at Browne and Nichols of Cambridge and Roxbury Latin School. He has a baseball scholarship offfer from Dartmouth, but he went to Harvard and became a heel-to-toe race walker. He, incidentally, did play on a Cohasset softball team back in the 30's when "Hot" Sullivan was the captain and pitcher.

Red Sox Fever! is available at any Walden Books or Lauriat's store, Old Corner Book Store and at the souvenir shop directly opposite Fenway Park. Locally it can be bought at Cards and Shards on South Main Street and Hingham Square Book Shop.

Ellery Clark

Here are a few quiz questions from Red Sox Fever! — they should try the most confident trivia nut:

—In 1968, which Red Sox outfielder fielded a perfect 1.000?

—Name the last three team members to the selected MVP.

—Which Boston pitcher hit a home run in the first game of the 1967 World Series?

—Through season 1978, has Carlton Fisk or Bob Montgomery worn the Boston uniform for more seasons?

—Which active Red Sox pitcher though 1978 has the most wins for the club — Dennis Eckersley, Dick Drago, Bob Stanley, or Mike Torrez? How many?

Law Of The Land

Patrolman Randolph Feola Jr. has been suspended with pay until at least July 5, the next Selectmen's meeting. He is enjoying a paid suspension which was to have ended June 20; but the pre-trial conference scheduled for that date was cancelled when Feola was required to appear in court on a rape case.

(Feola was instrumental in solving related rape incidents in several South Shore towns. The accused was found guilty on all counts last week at Dedham Superior Court.)

Now another pre-trial conference scheduled for Tuesday and an eventual court date may delay further the end to Feola's suspension — possibly into August. In effect, he has had a paid summer off, on the town.

Unfair, carp the critics. Suppose we all pull a few stunts, get suspended from jobs with pay and meet each other at the beach. Suppose Feola is found guilty of one of the charges levelled against him by Hull Police for drunken driving and possession of a dangerous weapon. Suppose Cohasset has paid a guilty man all summer. Hardly seems fair, we are told.

Supposing and what if's are conjecture. Continuing Feola's paid suspension is the only just course in this case. Not only had Selectmen set a precedent they couldn't rightfully change because the situation remains virtually unchanged from the day they issued the suspension, but also they were responding to a law of this land calling for the innocence of a man until he is proven guilty.To suspend a man without pay implies guilt.

Should Patrolman Feola's verdict not be handed down until the cows come home, then he should enjoy all the innocence and paid suspensions he's got coming to him.

George Jednick Remembered

[George Jednick, 49, of 113 Border Street, died last week in Cardinal Cushing Hospital, after a long illness. Ed.]

By Judith Epstein

Once last winter I had lost, or thought I had lost, a money order for several hundred dollars. I sat down in the Log and Line and tried to figure out what I had done with the check.

Georgie Jednick was in his usual spot having coffee with Chief Feola and spotting me, insisted I join them and have some breakfast. "Now just sit down and relax," Georgie ordered, when he learned about my situation. "Just relax and try to think of the last place you saw it."

I thought I might have left it somewhere in my apartment. The more I relaxed and talked with Georgie, I figured that's what probably happened and worked unworried for the rest of the day.

As it so happened my car broke down that afternoon and Georgie wound up giving me a ride back to my apartment in Scituate Harbor. As we were about to turn onto Hatherly Road in Scituate, Georgie thought better of it and continued straight on to the Minot Light Inn. He ordered wine for me and diet Pepsi for himself. He wasn't satisfied that I had given up my worrying for the day, and the wine would be good for me, he said.

It was. Georgie, then a teetotaler, had done his share of living it up, I had been told. He admitted to the same; "Until the ticker went," he would say.

At the bar Georgie talked of life and love. He told me about the red-headed nurse from Pennsylvania he had intended to marry in the 50's, only to find she had died tragically while he was in the service. "Nobody quite measured up after that," he confided.

He told me about his famous baked stuffed clams, and about how Bob Hawker over at the Greenhouse (which Georgie helped design) complained that his cooks could never quite capture the essence of Georgie's recipe. In months to come I developed an uncanny ability to pop over to Georgie's house on Border Street just in time to catch a clam specialty emerging from the oven. But everyone knew when Georgie had clams on the menu.

"Did you get a pass to come over the bridge?" he would ask as I entered. There in his kitchen he pointed to a spot in his back yard where the geese had been earlier in the day. His old dog limped around the kitchen looking for food and affection.

Georgie recalled the story about his mother's cat, and how when he was coming home on leave from the Air Force he learned that the cat had been in an accident and was lying in a coma. Georgie's mother assured him that the cat would come out of it in time for his homecoming, and sure enough as soon as he walked in the house they got the word from the vet that the cat had pulled through. "But you know, that cat saw butterflies in February ever after," Georgie laughed.

He showed me the plans he was working on (he was always working on somebody's addition or extension) and the spot where the garden was going in the spring. And how he went on about the flowers when they finally did bloom! "Roger," he marvelled to his friend Dr. Pompeo, "You should see them; they've got these double blossoms."

When Georgie and I finally left the Minot that day he dropped me off at my apartment. I rushed upstairs to see if my money order was in evidence and found it in the exact spot where Georgie made me remember I had left it. A few moments later my doorbell rang. It was Georgie, and he just couldn't go home, he said, until he knew if I had found my check.

That's the kind of guy he was. And I loved him.

ORDER LIFTED

Zoning Officer James Litchfield received copies of three letters from neighbors of Mrs. Michael Sawchuk that her property has been continuously used for storage of construction material and equipment.

Mrs. Sawchuk's son, Wayne Sawchuk said he has no intention of increasing activity there and will maintain the same type of operation. The letters were sufficient to allow continuance of his operation and to release him from a Cease and Desist notice issued May 9.

SPECIAL OFFICERS

Edward McGillicuddy of Boston and Frederick Huntwork of Elm Court have been appointed to serve as a summer (special) police officers with the Cohasset Police Department.

SMITH CASE

The Civil Service appeal case for Douglas Smith, a former Cohasset patrolman, has been continued to July 17 at 1 p.m. Smith is arguing that the Civil Service Commission, which affirmed Smith's dismissal by Selectmen, is unsupported by substantial evidence and is not justified.

LIFE INSURANCE

Town employees are covered under Boston Mutual Life Insurance Company for $2000 on group life and $2000 for accidental death and dismemberment. All retirees will be insured for the coverage.

GAS & PLUMBING FEES

To save confusion, because so many plumbers have requested it, the fee for a Gas and Plumbing Application, including the first fixture, will be $9.

The fee for each additional fixtur will be $1.00. A gas Hot Water fixture is $10. Please use the Gas Form Application. These fees will be collected before work can start.

INSPECTORS

Laurence Mitchell, Inspector, 37 Lawson Rd., Scituate, MA tel. 545-5849; (call just before noon) Plumbing and Gas License, # 9138.

Robert Rotchford, Assistant Inspector, 278 Clapp Rd., Scituate, MA tel. 545-0847; (call 7 a.m.-9 a.m.). Plumbing License, #14125 Gas License, #51, Pipe Fitter License, #002-452.

All Gas and Plumbing Records are now filed in the Building Department at Cohasset Town Hall. (Tel. No. 383-0017). All correspondence should be directed there. Gas and Plumbing Application Forms are available. Please use the correct Gas or Plumbing Form when making out the application.

SELECTMEN MEET

Selectmen will meet tonight Thursday, July 5, at 8 p.m. at the Town Hall. Their regular Wednesday night meeting was cancelled because of the holiday.

HARBOR CONCERNS

A meeting between both Scituate and Cohasset Selectmen and Harbormasters is scheduled for Tuesday, July 10, at 7:30 p.m. at Scituate Town Hall. Officials will discuss mutual Cohasset Harbor concerns, particularly regarding the new boat tax law and harbor maintenance.

Energy Alternatives Topic Of Discussion

Two speakers presented solar and water options for energy production at the Republican Town Committee's second meeting on energy alternatives last Wednesday.

Mansur Johnson, of Alternative Directions in Energy and Economics Inc., discussed large ocean grazing plants that would, through a desalting and thermal difference procedure, produce large amounts of electricity.

Ocean thermal energy conversion (OTEC) has the capacity, Johnson said, to generate five times the amount of continuous power than is required of direct solar installed capacity. In other words, to provide 100,000 kilowatts of baseload electricity (100 megawatts), a 100 megawatt OTEC plant could do what 500 megawatt solar energy can do, he said.

OTEC doesn't require extensive land use, Johnson noted, and could also produce fresh water, and by-products of ammonia and hydrogen. On a smaller scale, homes could be heated via OTEC by way of fuel cells or by hydrogen gas lines through mains in the street, he said.

Edward Allen, of Allen and Mahone architects and an MIT architecture professor, presented three solar alternatives — huge sun reflectors, satellite solar power stations, and solar homes — which could successfully capture the sun's rays for home heating.

The first two alternatives, Allen admitted, will probably not prove feasible as large energy collectors because of the diffuse form in which the sun's rays reach the earth. A good use for the sun, conversely, he said, is for low intensity use which could be applied to individual homes through proper house construction.

A passive system, one that Allen has seen work from first-hand experience, would require a home built with large windows on the south side. Dark floor surface, insulation, and properly placed overhangs would ensure enough heat from the low sun in the winter and protection from too much heat in the summer when the sun is high in the sky.

Such construction Allen estimated to cost $10,000 more than those of regular house construction and would complement convention home heating systems.

Obituaries

Roy Hiller

Private funeral services were held this week for Roy Andrew Hiller, 67, retired manager of the Pilgrim Motel, Norwell. He died Friday at his home.

Born in Janesville, Wis., he had lived in Norwell and Kingston before moving to Cohasset three months ago.

He had attended Janesville and Milwaukee public schools and was a Mason.

He leaves his wife, H. June (Stricker) Hiller of Cohasset, a son, Ronald B. Hiller of Florida; a daughter, Andrea Zahnzinger of Cohasset; three brothers, Donald G. Hiller, Ira S. Hiller and Robert W. Hiller, all of Wisconsin; a sister, Lillian Wunder of Missouri; and two grandchildren.

Funeral arrangements were made by Sparrow Funeral Home of Cohasset and Norwell.

Charles Stoddard

A funeral service was held July 27 in Sparrell Funeral Home for Charles Remus Stoddard, 86, of Cohasset, who died at home. He was a retired employee of the town and of which he was a lifelong resident.

He was also a retired fireman for the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company.

He was a member of the Norfolk County Retirement Board.

Husband of the late Nellie Belle (Bates) Stoddard, he leaves four sons, Charles L. Stoddard of Cohasset, Sheldon B. Stoddard of Portsmouth, N.H., Elmer L. Stoddard of Norwell and Daniel W. Stoddard of Palmdale, Calif.; five daughters, E. Lillian Lincoln of New Jersey, Nellie M. Lincoln of Weymouth, Olive P. Morris of Hingham, Mildred N. Salyards of Cohasset, and Hannah E. Sawyers of Chelmsford; 26 grandchildren and 36 great grandchildren.

George Jednick

George Jednick, 49, an architect and designer who worked most recently for Grossman's Company, died Tuesday last week in Cardinal Cushing Hospital, Brockton, after a long illness.

A lifelong resident of Cohasset, he had attended town schools and was a graduate of Wentworth Institute.

He was a member of George H. Mealey Legion Post and a Korean Conflict Air Force veteran.

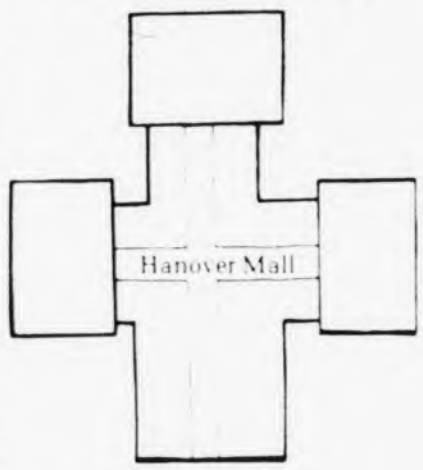
He was interested in athletics and held many bowling trophies; played football at Cohasset High School.

A funeral Mass was celebrated in St. Anthony's Church.

Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Louise Day

Private memorial services were held Tuesday at the Vedanta Center for Louise (Meister) Day, 84, former dedicated lay sister at the center for 15 years, who died July 27 at Cushing Hospital, Framingham.



Born in Germany, she had lived in Connecticut for most of her life where she attended school.

Mrs. Day was an artist, specializing in floral pieces and lamp shades, and as a horticulturist, had established two gardens while at the Vedanta Center.

She leaves a daughter, Florence Pessoni of East Hampton, Conn.

Gas Update . . . Who's Open When

Police Chief Randloph Feola has contacted all gasoline station operators in Cohasset to determine when gas will be available for motorists.

Feola is responding to the Governor's request made to communities for coordination of the opening and closing of gasoline stations. Feola was unable to answer for operators, however, questions about local attempts for set-aside allotments for operators willing to stay open on Sundays and holidays.

So far, gas stations in Cohasset haven't been open onSundays. And only a few have attempted to remain open for gas on Saturdays. According to Feola, only Getty and Exxon have been open on Saturdays the last few weekends.

Feola was unable to contact Getty owner John Swann about his weekend hours and noted that the station, which is usually open longer hours than most, wasn't open last weekend.

Leo Fiori, manager of Exxon, pumped gas for a few hours last Saturday morning, Feola said, but found the situation too trying.

As far as Feola could determine, stations will open as follows:

Exxon — 7 to 10 a.m : Mobil — 7 to 10 a.m.; Sunoco — 7 to 8:30 a.m.; Amoco — hasn't been open since June 16 for gas; Gulf — 8 to 10 a.m. and possibly 4 to 6 p.m.; Arco — almost out of July allocation, sporadic opening when gas is available; Getty — open when gas is available; Texaco — 8 to 11 a.m.

Little League Grand Reunion Bows Sunday

Clark Chatterton, athletic director at Cohasset High School, is organizing a grand reunion of all the men who played on the original Little League teams which started 27 years ago in 1952.

Chatterton's idea was that the men who he could round up would play a game against the present all-star team on Sunday July 8 at 1 p.m. at the Little League Field. After the game a reception at the home of David Bernstein, a present Little League manager, is planned for a fun day of refreshments and remembrances.

Chatterton is amazed at the response he had received to the reunion. So far, 75 to 100 men who played ball during the 1950's have responded and intend to participate in the game — and a good number of these men still live in or are affiliated with the town of Cohasset. Chatterton said that the game itself will be a mock performance, allowing all the guys to get in an inning or two.

A hat will be passed to raise money for the Jimmy Fund. Any players from those early days who have not yet been contacted can call Clark Chatterton at 383-0560.

Permit To Atlantic Trust

The Zoning Board of Appeals has granted a Special Permit for the filling and construction of an on-site sewage disposal system at 79 Atlantic Avenue, property owned in a trust by Wayne Sawchuk, Glen Pratt, and Douglas Purdy.

The proposed joint disposal system, which would serve five home – one existing house and four new houses -- is subject to compliance with the requirements of the Conservation Commission, the Board of Health and State Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE).

The Special Permit is also subject to the execution and recording of A Declaration of Restrictive Covenants which would provide the right of access and use of the joint system for all lots. It will also provide the terms of liability for maintenance of the sewage disposal system by all of those using the system.

The permit is further subject to the inclusion of adequate means for the accomplishment of any necessary cleaning of the inverted siphon. The multiple sewage disposal system may be used only to serve the existing dwelling and four new houses to be built and a possible new house as shown on the Plan of Land on Atlantic Avenue.

Enroll For Photography At S.S. Art Center

Photography classes are now being enrolled at the South Shore Art Center at 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset for a 6-week summer term that will begin Monday, July 9th.

Paul Fortin, well known newspaper photographer, will be teaching the beginners class on Monday evenings from 7:30 to 9:30. The course will be given in a lecture-demonstration approach with students signing into the darkroom to complete assignments between classes.

The course will be an introduction to the camera and how it works, learning how to develop and print, learning the elements of good composition.

Mr. Fortin received his BS from the University of Rhode Island and a diploma from the New England School of photography. He has taught photography at the Brockton, Needham and Scituate High Schools and the Boston Center for Adult Education as well as Exhibiting in Boston Galleries and doing free lance photography for the Patriot Ledger, Boston Globe and Boston Book Publishers.

Linda Wasko will teach Intermediate-Advanced photography on Tuesday evenings from 7:30 to 9:30 in a demonstration - lecture-critique approach. intermediates will concentrate on sequences and special projects while advanced students will explore tone-line separation, solarization, high-contrast negatives and other topics.

Ms. Wasko teaches at Chamberlayne and has taught at the MIT Art Association. She has exhibited at Boston City Hall, Polaroid Corporation and lthe Museum of Fine Arts and has studied with Minor White.

For further information, telephone 383-9548 Monday-Friday 12-4 p.m.

A Welcome To Cohasset

By Judith Epstein

One way to avoid the panic and unsettled feeling of moving into a new town and not knowing a soul in the area is to join the local Newcomer's Club, which is also known as the Welcome Wagon Club. They'll get you acquainted soon enough.

Although winding down to close for the summer the Scituate-Cohasset Welcome Wagon hostess in the respective towns will continue to contact newcomers during warm months when many people will make their move to the South Shore.

When the Welcome Wagon hostess calls (she usually acquires newcomers' phone numbers from real estate agencies), she welcomes the new residents to the town and invites them to the club's next meeting. Meetings are held once a month and membership is now at 147 men and women.

Newly appointed club president Mary Ann Devine, a Scituate resident of two years, said, "The club's major objectives are to help people new to the area to become acquainted with the community to provide an atmosphere of friendliness." She explained that while the club is primarily for those who are newcomers, the club's bylaws state that a person in any changing situation such as moving within a community, becoming engaged, or having a new baby, would benefit from membership.

Though membership is at a high, the numbers are, of course, changing all the time, as people may join and then drop membership, as they become more comfortable in the town. Mary Ann noted that while there is no limit to the length of time members may stay in the club, after three years they can't become board members.

Members are required to pay dues and are obliged to attend monthly meetings. However, interest groups within the club are really what bring people together, Mary Ann said. The interest groups are held both day and night, for men and women, and usually meet once a month so that activities don't conflict. The groups include a wide variety of subjects including: antiques and decorating; arts, crafts and needlework; bowling; bridge groups; couples gourmet; couples restaurant adventure; talic writing; luncheon adventure; mahjong; and tennis groups.

Mary Ann finds these groups particularly gratifying as a way to meet new people and to broaden one's outlook on life in the community. She would also find it rewarding, she remarked, to steer the club toward more service oriented activities.

Some of the club's recent programs have included a talk on oriental rugs, a flower arranging demonstration, December cocktail parties, a stenciling demonstration, an annual spring fashion show, and installation luncheon. The club capped off the year with a roundtrip boat tour June 2 between Hull and Boston which featured spirits, hors d'oeuvres, and a sparkling view of the coastline.

A September coffee will welcome the newest of the newcomers and will be publicized during the summer, along with the designated meeting place for the upcomming year.

Be sure to mark your calendars, especially if you are contacted by the Scituate Welcome Wagon Hostess Diane Dunbar or by the Cohasset Hostess Ann Bush during the summer month.

New club officers are: first vice president and program director Jean Morrison of Scituate; second vice president and interest group coordinator Barbara Turnbull of Cohasset; Treasurer Debbie Elder of Scituate; Secretary Sandy Bieryla of Scituate and Historian Pat Beddows of Cohasset.

Appointed officers covering club activities are: membership, Laura Asherton of Cohasset and Pat Jones of Scituate; telephone chairman, Meg Manning of Cohasset and Kay Artman of Scituate; ways and means, Christie DiBeneditto of Scituate; newsletter (which comes out monthly), Deidre Barrett and Nancy Bruno of Cohasset; public relations, Judy Volungis of Cohasset; correspondence secretary, Ruth Medrow of Cohasset; and refreshments, Betty Russell, Charlotte Riley and Mary Smith, all of Cohasset.

Organizations which receive donations from the club include: fish, Jaws for life, Scituate Youth Center, and the Cohasset Community Center. A scholarship fund for a graduating senior in both Scituate and Cohasset has also been established.

Keys To The Cohasset Water System

The Aaron River Dam is an earthfill dam approximately 900 feet long and approximately 25 feet high.

An impervious fill cutoff wall prevents seepage beneath the dam structure and a concrete ogee spillway protects the dam from overtopping under flood conditions. The Reservoir created by the dam holds about 323 million gallons of water and has a surface area of about 150 acres, 129 of which lie within Wampatuck State Park.

A fish ladder has been constructed at the dam to allow fish to migrate to and from the reservoir. The dam contains approximately 57,000 cubic yards of various types of fill material including 40,000 cubic yards of impervious fill material for the core.

Permanent monitoring wells have been installed to observe water level fluctuations both upstream and downstream of the dam. Water level is controlled by a weir gate at the entrance to the fish ladder. A low level outlet pipe is used only to drain the reservoir in emergencies or for maintenance.

In addition to the concrete ogee overflow spillway, an earthen emergency spillway protects the dam from overtopping during periods of very high rainfall and runoff.

The construction cost of the dam and reservoir was $900,000, Arthur Scholfield Inc., contractor.

BOUND BROOK CONTROL STRUCTURE

The Bound Brook Control Structure is a reinforced concrete structure at the Beechwood Street bridge which provides control of the water surface elevation in Lily Pond by means of adjustable gates.

It is designed to maintain the water level in Lily Pond between elevations 42 and 45 and has a hydraulic capacity of 600 cubic feet per second. A fish ladder was also incorporated into the design and construction to encourage the eventual introduction of fish runs from the Atlantic Ocean to the new Aaron River Reservoir.

It is required that a minimum flow of 1 cubic foot per second be maintained at all times in Bound Brook below the control structure. In order to provide for this requirement, and to supplement the water supply in Lily Pond for the water treatment facility, releases of water will be made from the Aaron River Dam during periods of low precipitation and runoff.

The control structure at Bound Brook diverts this released water to Lily Pond by adjustment of the movable weir gates. The stream channels upstream of the control structure, including Bound Brook and Herring Brook, were excavated to provide increased flow capacity from the dam to the control structure.

The construction cost for the Bound Brook Control Structure was $43,000, Jay M. Cashman Inc., contractor.

WATER TREATMENT FACILITY

The Cohasset Water Treatment Facility is designed to treat an average flow of 1.2 million gallons per day and a peak flow of 3.0 million gallons per day.

The treatment process includes fine and coarse screening, rapid mixing, flocculation, settling, filtration, pre- and post-chlorination, fluoridation, and chemical addition for coagulation and pH adjustment. A laboratory and control room are located on the upper level of the treatment plant.

The building also houses administrative offices for the Cohasset Water Department consisting of a secretarial office, superintendent's office, conference room, personnel room, and engineering office.

A natural gas-powered standby electric generator, five bay garage and two sludge lagoons are located on the site separate from the main building.

The construction cost for the treatment facility, garage, and sludge lagoons was $1,900,000, A. Bonfatti & Co. Inc., contractor.

HOW COHASSET'S WATER IS PURIFIED

Cohasset's new water treatment facility employs the latest technological advancements in water treatment. Here is the step-by-step process:

Raw water from Lily Pond flows to the intake structure containing coarse and fine screens and upon entering the plant passes through a flow metering and control device. This metering device, in addition to measuring the quantity of flow, also provides an automatic signal for controlling amounts of chemicals fed into the water.

Coagulating chemicals are added to the water in rapid mix tanks and are rapidly and thoroughly mixed in the water.

The chemically treated water then flows to flocculation units where the tiny coagulated particles are brought into contact with each other by slowly revolving paddles. This causes the particles to cling to each other, or "floc", and thus to increase in size so that they will settle more rapidly in the sedimentation units.

In the sedimentation units, the water is held for a sufficient time to allow the floc to settle. The clarified water then passes on to the filters. The settled particles are removed by mechanical equipment to sludge lagoons for dewatering. The water from the lagoons is then returned to the pond and sludge is removed to a disposal area.

The filters consist of a 30-inch layered bed of two materials, each of different particle size and density: anthracite coal and silica sand.

These materials provide a gradation of particle size from coarse to fine in the direction of a flow through the filter. The filter bed rests on a 10-inch gravel layer.

After the water passed through the filters it moves to a clear well or filtered water reservoir. There it is chlorinated and pumped into the town's water distribution system. If the rate of output of the treatment plant exceeds the rate of consumption, the water is pumped to the standpipe on the top of Bear Hill where it is stored for use during periods of peak demand.

Recreation Report . . . Playground Program, Tennis & Golf

SPECIAL EVENT

On Tuesday, July 10, from 10 a.m. - 3 p.m., there will be an outdoor carnival at the Osgood School. The regular Playground Program will not meet that day. All resident children and adults are invited to the carnival that consists of game booths, moon-walk, and a host of other special activities. Prizes are awarded to all participants.

Tickets for the games and activities may be purchased at the site and cost 10 cents apiece and each child would probably need $2 or $3 to participate in all games.

Parents will be responsible for children as the playground staff will be busy operating the booths. Younger children should be accompanied by an adult or older, responsible sibling.

The Playground Program will resume, as usual, the next day, Wednesday, July 11.

MUSIC CIRCUS TICKETS

Tickets for the Thursday morning, July 26 performance of "Connecticut Yankee" must be purchased on Wednesday morning, July 11, at the Recreation Department Office. The cost for this show is $2.05 per child. Please come before noon.

ADULT TENNIS LESSONS

The Cohasset Recreation Department is now registering classes for Beginner, Intermediate, and Advanced Tennis Lessons. The program, taught by NELTA professional Mark McGuire, will be held at the following times on Monday evenings, beginning Monday, July 23; beginners, 6-7 p.m.; Intermediates, 7-8 p.m., and Advanced, 8-9 p.m.

To register for lessons call the Recreation Dept. Office, at 383-6791, before Friday, July 20. The fee for the six-week (one hour per week) program is $10 per person. Classes will be filled on a first-call-first enrolled basis. Non-residents will be accepted on a space available basis only after Friday noon, July 20, for an extra $1 fee charge.

GOLF LESSONS

Registrations for Golf lessons age 12 through adult will be accepted by calling the Recreation Department office at 383-6791, before Friday, July 20. Classes will be offered for Beginners, Intermediates, and Advanced players and will be taught by Rich Thibeault, assistant Pro, Cohasset Golf Club.

The fee is $10 per person for the six one hour classes held at the Town Hall. Classes will begin Monday, July 23, at the following times: beginners, 6:30-7:30 p.m.; intermediates, 7;30-8;30 p.m., advanced, 8:30-9:30 p.m. Non-residents will be accepted as space dictates after Friday noon, July 20, for an extra $1 fee charge.

Participants should have their own clubs (not a full set); however, arrangements at no charge may be made for those individuals who do not have clubs.

Both the four and five and 6-12 year old Playground Programs will participate in a Balloon Flying Contest at Miliken Field, Friday, July 6, with a rain date for Monday, July 9. Balloons and helium will be provided by the Recreation Department. Children should bring in a stamped, addressed post card to their assigned staff member, during the first two weeks of the program.

On Friday, parents should bring their children to the Miliken Football Field (head of Norfolk Road) rather than to the Osgood School. Four and five-year-olds should be picked up at the usual time (12 noon) at Miliken Field; 6-12 year old program will be walked back to the Osgood School, and continue with regular activities until 3 p.m.

Scholarships Awarded

The winners of the MacIvor Reddie Scholarship awards given by the South Shore Art Center for 1979 are Lisa Drescher and Joseph Bernasconi. Examples of their work will be on display during the Art Festival taking place in Cohasset from July 1 through July 8th.

The MacIvor Reddie Scholarships are given to graduating High School Students who have been accepted in accredited Colleges to pursue study in Art; it is in honor of the nationally known watercolorist who was also a founder of the South Shore Art Center.

Lisa Drescher is a resident of Hingham and a graduate of the Cambridge School of Weston. She plans to continue her study of printmaking at the State University of New York College at Purchase School of Visual Arts.

Joseph Bernasconi is a resident of Wollaston and graduated from North Quincy High School. He plans to continue his study of drawing and painting at the Museum School of Fine Arts in Boston.

The Scholarship Program is only one of the educational programs available to the community through the South Shore Art Center. On a year-round basis the Center offers a full schedule of classes in the arts for children and adults, gallery exhaibits, lectures, films and social events. It is a member of the Metropolitan Cultural Alliance and is affiliated with the Massachusetts College of Art Continuing Education Program.

Scituate-Cohasset Talks Continue On Harbor Issue

By Judith Epstein

Cohasset Selectmen met with Scituate Selectmen at Scituate Town Hall Tuesday night to discuss mutual Cohasset Harbor concerns. Approximately 62 boats lie in Scituate waters within Cohasset Harbor, and Scituate intends to collect the excise taxes due on those boats.

Legislation in effect July 1 states that taxes are paid to the town where the boat is moored. In the past boats were assessed in the town where they were stored as of January 1.

Selectmen Chairman Arthur Clark expressed "anxiety and concern for the past and future" of the harbor. The town has expended $369,000 in the last few years on harbor maintenance, he said, and paid costs for floodlighting, use of utilities and floats and piers for all those who used the harbor.

Harbor maintenance concerns had been voiced in March by Cohasset Selectmen when Scituate Town Administrator Richard Bennet and Harbormaster John Simons had first discussed the matter with the board. At that time, Bennett and Simons had worked out a tentative proposal which offered Cohasset the return of half the mooring fees on Scituate boats in Cohasset Harbor. The issue was abondoned until both towns could dispense with the business of Town Meeting.

Bennett said Tuesday that after having time to examine the law and after consulting with Town Counsel Edward Ryan, he recommended that Selectmen opt for "the best and only recommendation — to comply with state law, to collect taxes on boats moored in Scituate waters and to do nothing else" for this year.

Mooring collection will remain as it has, with Cohasset collecting $1 per linear foot per boat, except for commercial craft. Bennett added that after this season, a mutual agreement should be worked out between the towns on harbor taxes and maintenance.

Clark noted the 50 per cent of the taxes taken on boats must be returned to the harbor as maintenance funds. He wanted to know if that percentage would go to Scituate Harbor proper or to Cohasset Harbor to help defray its expenses.

"Scituate has done nothing, and now you are going to collect the money. We desperately want to be good neighbors, but it takes two to make good neighbors," Clark said.

He further pointed out that Bassing Beach and night

A Mud Room Lives At Cohasset High School

There is a phenomenon at the Jr./Sr. High School known as the mud room — probably because it is a mud room.

At the end of the west wing addition of the junior high school there is a door that leads to an L-shaped room literally three quarters filled with thick, clay-like dirt. When the addition was built, 15 years ago, the basement room wasn't "programmed" to be finished or used, according to architect David Anderson of Drummey, Rosane and Anderson, the firm responsible for the job.

WHAT IS IT? Why a mud room, of course! Doesn't everyone have one?

"The building was built into a hillside," Anderson said. "We put foundations around the earth. There was no programmed need at that time for the room — so we just left it unexcavated."

Apparently the room was never intended for future use either, although the idea of using it for storage space has been bantered around by the School Committee recently. The room unexcavated could yield 1700 square feet of space. The operation isn't as easy as simply digging the room out, however.

The construction techniques used in the mud room, Anderson explained, were to supply support for the two classrooms upstairs, which were a part of the construction program. "It was the most efficient, least expensive way to do it," Anderson said. He noted that the addition had been bid twice to keep costs down.

The footings along the foundation of the mud room have to be four feet below the finished exterior grade. The finished floor of the room may be as much as 10 feet below the footings, thus leaving the footings exposed. Right now they are resting, or bearing, on undisturbed earth, Anderson said. If the dirt is removed and if the foundation was not properly underpinned, the end of the building could collapse.

A $16,000 construction project would reinforce the mud room so that it could be used for storage. "A four foot wall would have to be built all around the periphery of the room to insure that the bearing integrity wasn't disturbed under the footings," Anderson said. That would leave 1200 square feet of full cubic footage space and additional "shelf" space on the top of the reinforcement wall.

The School Committee, however, can't consider the project until possibly next year, as costs weren't budgeted this year.

So, in the meantime, rest in the knowledge that Cohasset is still in possession of its own believe it or not — the peculiar mud room.

Metco Standoff Continues

The School Committee and the State Board of Education are at a standoff concerning requirements for statistical, financial and programmatic reports on the Cohasset Metco program.

The Committee last May returned the proposal signed, but with the deletion of the phrase "that it (the Committee) will comply with the Department's request for statistical, financial, or programmatic reports."

The State Bureau of Equal Educational Opportunity responded with a letter asking for a commitment to provide program and fiscal data by July 6. The letter stated that if a revised signature sheet weren't received by that date, the review process for Cohasset's Metco program wouldn't be completed in time for the August 28 assessment by the Board of Education.

While committee members last week voted unanimously to provide the state with annual and semi-annual statistical and financial reports, they remained firm in their opinion that the request for the reports on the program were too undefined.

A letter was drafted by the Committee and sent to the state board last week stating that they recognized the need for good management information but were hesitant to sign anything that would encumber upon them responsibility for unknowns. "Given our lean administrative staffing, we are not willing to commit ourselves to the collection and compilation to an unspecified number of reports," the letter reads.

The letter asked for a listing of all reports Cohasset would be responsible to submit, as patrol for the harbor need constant vigilance and that it costs money to keep up that type of maintenance. "I hope you will share in these things," Clark said, "or we're the losers in this whole thing."

Harbor

Scituate Selectman Gerald Dwight said that he had been apprised by Simons that 125 boats could moor in the Scituate portion of Cohasset Harbor. He envisioned a joint effort between Cohasset and Scituate "to make it a good harbor, not caring where the line is." He wished to see not only a joint maintenance fund, but also a joint effort for harbormaster control and patrol.

Each of the Cohasset Selectmen doubted the possibility of mooring any more boats in the harbor. Clark noted the recent court case to have a boat removed from the harbor for being too large for its mooring, and the 400 people listed on the mooring waiting list. A $5000 engineering survey to be performed by Coastal Zone Management (CZM) should discern the harbor's capability for taking on additional moorings, he said.

Selectman Henry Ainslie felt that Cohasset's situation was more unique than that of other towns or of other portions of Scituate because Scituate's only access to Cohasset Harbor is through the channel, across private land or through the usual Government Island parking facilities. For that reason, Selectman Rocco Laugelle added, Scituate should have a part in Cohaset Harbor responsibilities.

Scituate Selectman Chairman Rose Zoob tried to ascertain how much money would be taken by Scituate and Cohasset assessments, but officials of both towns were unclear about dollar amounts. Zoob said that because figures were uncertain at the moment, it would be hard to tell if the 50 per cent assessment to go into harbormaintenance funds, possibly for Scituate waters in Cohasset Harbor, was a substantial or negligible amount.

It was agreed that for this year, Scituate would collect the taxes on the boats in Scituate waters, and that before the boating season next year the Cohasset Harbor Study Committee and the Scituate Waterways committee would meet to decide on a mutually acceptable course of action.

831- Pound Bluefin Landed On Fourth

By Karin Bartow

The official tuna fishing season runs from January 1 to September , but the fish don't usually arrive until around July 4. Not coincidentally, but fortuitously, Floyd and Barbara Robbins, and their children Rebecca and Benjamin, harpooned a whopping 831 lb. bluefin tuna on Independence Day.

This first-of-the-season tuna to land in Cohasset Harbor was followed by the second, on Saturday, and again by Floyd Robbins. He towed another 800 pounder, lasooed by its tail to the stern of "The Codfather," into the Harbor.

Both fish were caught in the northwest corner of the Middle Bank which runs between Gloucester and Provincetown, about 30 miles out to sea. Robbins returned there on Sunday looking for number three and "saw 'em, but didn't catch any," he said. There is a great deal of luck involved in catching a tuna, and certainly skill. Also, government regulations limit the catch to one a day, and close the season after 2,700 have been caught.

Robbins, a Scituate contractor, and his wife are both experienced fishermen. Their two Korean born children enjoy the sport also. Rebecca took a ten day fishing trip in stride only two days after her arrival in the family.

The Robbins prefer to harpoon the tuna because it's more sporting and safer. The harpoon has a line attached which is used to hand haul the fish in. It is walked to the stern of the boat, with the aid of a gaff rig, where it is secured by its tail. It's all an exhilarating procedure and, "very tiring, but you don't realize it because of the excitement," Mrs. Robbins said.

The tuna is bought right at the dock, processed the same night, and leaves the country within 24 hours. Ninety-nine per cent of the bluefin tuna (found only in North Atlantic waters) is shipped to Japan where it can sell for as much as $30 a pound. A dark red, fatty fish, not favored here, it is considered a delicacy in Japan. Americans prefer the white albacore tuna found in Pacific waters and shipped to us mainly by the Japanese.

Robbins' largest tuna was a 922 pound giant caught a few years ago. Asked if there would be a third tuna this season, Robbins said, "That could be it. You just never know."

Drescher, Bernasconi Win Art Scholarships

The winners of the MacIvor Reddie Scholarship awards given by the South Shore Art Center for 1979 are Lisa Drescher and Joseph Bernasconi. Examples of their work will be on display during the Art Festival in Cohasset July 1-8.

The MacIvor Reddie Scholarships are given to given graduating high school students who have been accepted in accredited colleges to pursue study in Art; it is in honor of the nationally known watercolorist who was also a founder of the South Shore Art Center.

Lisa Drescher is a resident of Hingham and a graduate of the Cambridge School of Weston. She plans to continue her study of printmaking at the State University of New York College at Purchase School of Visual Arts.

Bernasconi is a resident of Wollaston and graduated from North Quincy High School. He plans to continue his study of drawing and painting at the Museum School of Fine Arts in Boston.

Feola Suspension Continued Again

Patrolman Randolph Feola, Jr.'s paid suspension has been continued once again until the next Selectmen's meeting, July 18.

Feola's trial date was set for September 18 at Hingham District Court at a pre-trial conference held July 3. Selectmen suspended Feola in May after he was charged with driving violations and possession of a dangerous weapon by Hull police.

Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark said that he will speak with Town Counsel concerning the continuation of the paid suspension.

Town Counsel J. Blake Thaxter said this week that he didn't know what the Selectmen's position was because he hasn't yet been approached on the matter.

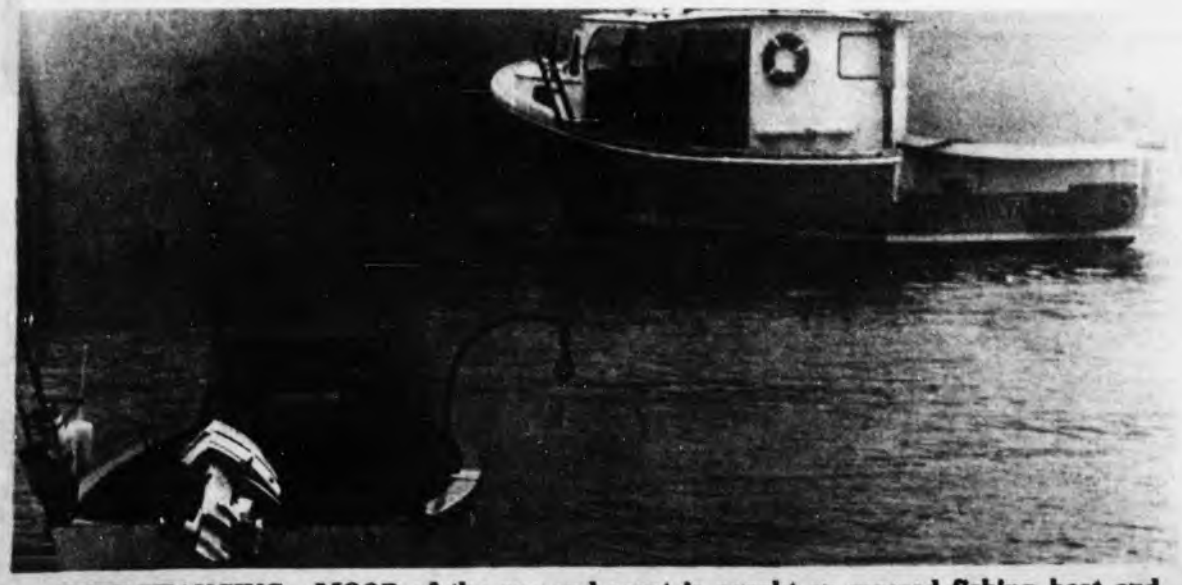
The Harbor Issue

An imprecise boundary divides the Towns of Scituate and Cohasset through harbor waters from Government Island Pier to the first dolphin buoy at the breakwater. This invisible line also divides Norfolk and Plymouth Counties.

Every year the Selectmen walk and define the boundaries of the town, but even that board has yet to walk the waters of the harbor.

According to Harbormaster Harry Ritter, a "tentative map" showing the harbor dividing line exists.

In the past boats were assesed in the town where they were stored on land as of January 1, but now with the new legislation in effect July1, excise taxes are paid to the town where the boat is moored.



Where the boat is moored is suddenly of extreme interest to both towns. Cohasset fears that Scituate will claim their due of taxes from boats lying in Scituate waters within Cohasset Harbor and once happily paid will again leave harbor matters to Cohasset. In other words, take the money and run.

Apart from the tax issue, since earliest memory Cohasset has been supply all harbor maintenance, dredging, lighting, parking and access for Scituate residents usind Cohasset harbor. Services rendered to Scituate in Cohasset Harbor also included use of water and electrical outlets for work and repairs made on boats, flood lighting, police night patrol and inspection and upkeep of mooring tackle.

What the most effective compromise between the towns will be over the harbor issue, is a moot question which will be discussed over the year. One reason for inaction so far is the lack of data and tax dollar amounts from each town, as this is the first year of enforcement of the new law.

Scituate and Cohasset should do some basic arithmetic together to determine how many boats are moored where. From there tax computations and joint maintenance procedures can be decided next year.

We tend to agree with Selectman Clark, however, that 50 per cent of the taxes garnered by Scituate from boats moored in their part of the harbor should be applied to the waters from whence they came.

RESIGNATION

Selectmen agreed to accept with regret the resignation of Stephen O'Connor, M.D., from the Board of Health.

SPECIAL OFFICER

Harbormaster Harry Ritter has requested, and Selectmen have agreed, to appoint Dean Williams as a special police officer for harbor night patrol.

SPORTSMAN'S CLUB?

A registered letter is to be sent to the Sportsman's Club on Route 3A, to ascertain the club's activities. The town voted in 1960 to donate the property to the club, but now it is suspected that the land is being used as a private dwelling.

"If someone picks up the letter, he will have to answer for it," Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark noted.

BUILDING REMINDER

Building Inspector James Litchfield is upset with residents making repairs at their home without proper building permits. "Any repairs or building done on a home requires a building permit," Litchfield said. Building permits are available at Building Inspector's office at the Town Hall.

Repairs don't usually require plans, Litchfield said. "But alterations or structural changes require a plan so that the Building Inspector can inspect to see that the job is being done in compliance with the Massachusetts State Building Code," he said.

"Some contractors are very qualified with the gift of gab, but not so with the hammer and saw," Litchfield remarked.

HENDERSON OPINES

Assistant Town Counsel Richard Henderson will send an opinion for future reference to both Building Inspector James Litchfield and Harbormaster Harry Ritter concerning the most effective way to bring about expeditious prosecution of violators of municipal bylaws and regulations.

SUMMER SCHOOL

A summer school reading program at the Joseph Osgood School for elementary grades will be held from July 9 to August 17. The six-week program will improve basic reading and math skills. This service will be provided by three teachers working four hours per day.

Mood Indigo...

Cohasset's Picturesque Harbor

By Ann Fogg

The jutting rocks. The reversing rapids. The weather-beaten sides and the broken window panes of Gaffney Yachts and Mill River Marine. The granite pier. Cohasset has to be one of the more picturesque harbors south of the Maine coast.

Even on an early summer weekend, it's peaceful almost to the point of being sleepy, more like the romantic image of the tiny down east harbor than that of an affluent and thickly populated Boston suburb. Sitting on the float at the end of the steeply sloping ramp, it's pleasant to bask in the sun, watch the outgoing tide boil over the rocks from the placid gulf above the bridge, and contemplate the swirls of white and brown foam as they make fanciful designs about the boats.

Draped with seaweed and encrusted with barnacles, the rocks rise dark grey from the foam, then lighten above the high tide line. Skiffs wait sluggishly in a row between the wooden float and the stone pier. Encrusted with fish gurry and gull droppings and awash with the unevaporated remains of the last rain, they catch the foam's brown residue on the paint chips of their peeling sides.

A man in a blue shirt and chinos walks down the ramp, pulls his skiff up on the float to empty it, then with a practiced hand sculls with one oar over the stern to the lobster boat "Prime Ribs."

The Harbor Master's trim little red and white shack, like Motif #1, adds color to the green hillside above the stone pier. His dingy grey work boat rests beside the float. Across the rapids, the Mobil pump on the Gaffney Yacht's pier sports a sign, NO GAS.

Against the background music of the gurgling, rushing, racing outgoing tide, aluminum pullies clank against aluminum masts, and the seagulls scream their anguish the way they do in every harbor. A bunch of boys gathers on the bridge. One climbs to the concrete rail and leaps. Splash. "Ecstasy!"

A white, fiberglass sloop, the "Strumpet II" moves slowly in toward the pier under power, towing a rubber dinghy and its passenger, an eager black lab. The brown foam piles up in front of the sleek white bow. "I think it's holding me away," the man laughs. Their problem is that they can't find any bait. They've been out to Bassings Beach but found no clams, and steamers at the fish market are $1.25 a pound. "Expensive bait," the man says to the woman, then shrugs, "OK, you're the fisherman."

Lobster boats "Louise S." and "Margie" pull in to the float, pick up blue-jeaned and booted crews and baskets of flounder shadows and head out through the maze of boats.

Across the harbor, diners in suits and dresses alight from air-conditioned cars into the hot sunshine of Hugo's parking lot, gather in groups, and enter the air-conditioned restaurant for lunch with a view of the boats and the brown and white foam on the outgoing tide.

Hot in the sun, I slip off my sandals, dangle my feet in the cool water, and idly watch the brown pieces of solid matter collect in streaks through the foam and swirl in eddies around my legs. Moving with the tide, the foam pushes the streaks, and they crinkle up and coalesce to form brown sections in the water and up and down my ankles. The brown solid dries on my skin. I'm surprised to find it soft and odorless, but it won't come off until I dip my legs back into the water and scrub. What is it and where does it come from?

I dry my clean feet in the sun and climb back up the steep ramp. Pink beach roses bloom along the fence at the edge of the rapids. They soften the wire mesh and contrast with the granite. In the calm gulf above the bridge, a white egret stands on long stilts in the mossy green edgewater and feeds off the bottom.

Cohasset Harbor has to be one of the more picturesque harbors south of the Maine Coast.

Then...

Little League Old Timers Return

"We may be old but we're still swinging," quipped the T-shirts of the former Little Leaguers who showed up Sunday to play against the current All-Star team.

It was a real baseball afternoon — complete with three H weather and stands full of fans. And the game, real or mock no one has admitted, wound up All-Stars, 8, to oldtimers, 6. At any rate, it was real fun.

The former players didn't exactly have the most orthodox batting order, as different years from the teams of the 50's took turns both at the bat and on the field. And their manner of play? Well, it ranged from diving headlong into second to prevent an out to throwing their own team members out at home from the bench.

"Most of the guys who were here then are here today," George McLaughlin, the first president of Cohasset Little League in 1952, said. It was true. If you took a look at them, you'd see almost all the managers, presidents, sponsors, and many of the players from 25 years ago. All assembled in one place, too, instead of dispersed all around town, where many still live.

The old board of directors, according to Clark Chatterton — the man responsible for the reunion brainstorm — were almost all present. They included: George McLaughlin, first president of Little League; Chester Brown, second president; original umpires Paul Blackmur and Ronnie Beale; sponsors Roy MacDonald and Normal Megathlin; managers Robert Leonard, Gerard Keating, James Collins, Charles Marks, Hank Freniere, Al Semcabaugh, Jeff Loughran, Dick Cummings and Pat McCarthy, Sr.

Two original directors who have passed on and who have remained fond in the hearts of Cohasset Little Leaguers were Harold Barnes, a president of the league for years and for whom the playing field was named, and Nate Hurwitz, first vice-president. Good wishes were also extended to John Carzis, an original sponsor.

...and 25 Years Later

well as clarification of what was meant by "programmatic" reports. An official response from the state board is forthcoming.

Superintendent John Maloney explained that when a definition of "statistical and programmatic reports" were handed down, the School Committee would be better able to determine if it could reasonably comply with the requests. "The state has consistently added on restrictions," Maloney said in what he feels to be an effort to take control away from local school systems.

Maloney also complained that the accompanying increase in paperwork is another way to restrict local control. "What used to be a two or three page proposal is now 30 pages, what used to be a simple budget is now line by line requiring back-up data sheets," he said. "It's almost as if you're running a segregated school system," he added.

Assistant Director of Metco, Inc., Stephen Shaw, said this week that Metco supports the continuation of Cohasset's program, which Metco finds excellent. "It is a matter of disagreement about procedure, paperwork and reports," he said.

"I think there needs to be a measure of accountability that all parties agree with. We're spending public money and we have said that he sympathized with the fear of an inundation of paper work and added, "I think they'll come to some agreement."

Doreen Wilkinson of the state Board of Education said that the administrative requirements, which are a part of the proposal, "have nothing to do with what goes on in Cohasset or its curriculum." She was concerned that unless the revised signature sheet is received by the Department that she would be unable to request those reports for the upcoming school year and that the program wouldn't be accepted. She admitted that the request was administrative and not statutory, but that community cooperation was necessary for management of the seven million dollar Metco program.

The amount of state funding requested by Cohasset for its 48 Metco students is $67,776, plus all costs for transportation and Metco, Inc. expenses.

School Committee member Patricia Walsh noted that several South Shore communities aren't happy with the requirements requested by Metco. "Cohasset, Hingham and Rockland are bothered by the whole thing," she said.

Arts Festival Awards

BEST OF SHOW

Lisa Langhammer, Chelsea Men, Charcoal. Juror's Comments: Lisa has a boldness, a confidence, in the use of medium and space. She shows great energy. The spectator is drawn into the work.

PAINTING

1st Prize: Jane McDaid, Pumpkins, Oil. Juror's Comments: Lush use of oranges and yellows, the painting is loose and free. It promotes a gutsy quality that juts out.

3rd Prize: Margaret Dillon, New York Summer, Acrylic.

SCULPTURE

1st Prize: Dennis Kowal, Organic Crystal, Carved Acrylic w/Copper & Steel. Juror's Comments: Dennis uses the medium of steel and other materials in a beautiful way.

PRINTS

1st Prize: Wilfred Loring, Geology of Hingham, Aquatint. Juror's Comments: It is a masterful handling of textures with good draftsmanship.

2nd Prize: Joyce Zavorskas, Sea Wall, Double Aquatint.

3rd Prize: Iris Osterman, Madeline, Monoprint.

PASTELS

1st Prize: James R. Hoyt, Untitled, Pastel. Juror's Comments: This work is a gripping, intense color-distortion used to a powerful effect.

2nd Prize: Tom Lucas, Summer Path, Oil Crayon.

3rd Prize: Robert Dec, Man with Ambiguous Space, Pastel.

Honorable Mention: Constance Flavell Pratt, Mother, Pastel.

WATERCOLOR

1st Prize: Eugene Conlon, Coal Shed, Thomaston, Maine, Watercolor. Juror's Comments: Complete sensitivity in the use of the medium; use of light and dark, sign on the building and the white boat on the shore.

2nd Prize: Anne Marie Belson, Rostropovsch, Watercolor.

3rd Prize: Joanne Young, Yellow Road, Watercolor.

Honorable Mention: Judith C. Campbell, Homage to Woody Allen.

DRAWINGS

1st Prize: Lisbeth Koopman-Wyman, Robert, Conte Pencil. Juror's Comments: Her work illustrates many years of hard work. She uses lots of white and black but with rich details of color. There is a contrast between strong masculinity and the delicacy of its execution.

3rd Prize: Sheila Droege, Solitary Death, Pen and Ink.

Robert and Barbara Cucchairella of 66 Breseter Road are parents of a first-born, daughter Tiffany, born June 27. Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Lucien Cucchairella and Mr. and Mrs. Mario Accardi, and live in New York.

Jacqueline Plante, 12, of Cohasset received a $100 savings bond for her success while participating in the 1979 "Ride-a-Bike for Mentally Retarded People" on April 29.

Jacqueline, who collected $1,242.25 in the Cohasset Ride, was the top money earner in the age 16 and under category of all participants in the 85 rides around the state. Over 25,000 people rode on April 29 in the eighth annual fundraiser for the Massachusetts Association for Retarded Citizens (MARC).

Deborah Lamb and Patrick Plante, coordinators of the Cohasset Ride, were delighted that one of their riders had won. Ms. Lamb and Mr. Plante were among the 85 coordinators most of whom are members of the Massachusetts Teachers Association and who were honored at the banquet.

Since the Ride-a-Bike began in 1972, over $1,500,000 has been raised through the efforts of the Massachusetts Teachers Association, which organizes students and others in many local rides and contributes funds to local communities.

Brian and John Keane of Cohasset are among 13 South Shore men and women who have been accepted to the Harvard-Radcliffe Class of 1983. They and other area freshmen were recently honored at the spring dinner of the Old Colony Harvard Club.

Eleven year-old Robert Corkery of Hillside Drive received a special certificate from the American Automobile Association. Robert, a fifth grade student at the Deer Hill School, was one of 1000 Massachusetts students who participated in the AAA's 35th Annual National School Traffic Safety Poster contest. His art teacher at the Deer Hill is Jean O'Malley.

Robert Mullin of Cohasset, president of the Plymouth County Multiple Listing Service, reported last week that MLS sales broke new records for the first six months of 1979, reflecting an increase of 38 percent in the number of properties sold compared to the first six months of last year. Projections, he said, show that people realize real estate is among the soundest investments and that the South Shore is being recognized as a growth area for metropolitan Boston.

Ooops! Couple of weeks ago, one of our funny staff writers called Sandy Beach "Rocky Beach" in a front page picture caption. Since we couldn't plead typographical error, we asked him to see how many rocks he could find on the beach. He couldn't find many.

Marianne White and the Rev. Edward Atkinson recently returned from East Lansing, Mich., where they were delegates to the 18th annual General Assembly of the Unitarian Universalist Association held on the campus of Michigan State University. Among the speakers to the convention were the Rev. Jesse Jackson, president of Operation Push and the Rev. Daniel Berrigan, a well-known peace and civil rights activist. At the convention, delegates helped set denominational policy for the coming year.

According to our business editor, an industrious Cohasset teenager could make some good summer money by selling sea worms and other marine bait to fishermen leaving the Harbor.

Captain Frank E. Sequeira, USNR and Rochester, native, relieved Captain Kenneth Hassett, USN, of Dennis, as commanding officer of Naval Reserve Center Boston/Quincy. Capt. Sequeira also will serve as Commanding Officer, Naval Reserve Center Quincy; Senior Naval Officer in Boston representing the Commandant, 4th Naval District; and as Naval Control of Shipping Officer, Bsoton He reports to Boston following a tour of duty on the staff of the Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Reserve Affairs in Washington, D.C. His previous assignments include Director of Plans for the Chief of Naval Reserve in New Orleans; Commanding Officer, Naval Air Station, South Weymouth, and Commanding Officer, Naval and Marine Corps Reserve Center, Norfolk, Va. He Sequeira, his wife, the former Eileen Waters of Newport, R.I. and their two children will reside in Cohasset.

Rotary Rates Bow

The month of July is traditionally a time of transition where the new Rotary Club officers are installed and the past year's accomplishments are reviewed. This year Cohasset Rotary Club has something to be proud of.

Cohasset Rotary ranked second in monies donated to the community. The leading club, Hyannis, with contributions of $6,025 has 124 members, while Cohasset with 24 members contributed $5,500. That's quite an accomplishment.

Guest speaker recently was Dave Gaffey from the Scituate Rotary Club. Gaffey spoke on bureaucracy in government. A funeral director from Scituate, he was most interested in the increasing government involvement in the funeral business. He feels the government wishes to somewhat regulate or oversee the funeral business which in turn may cause an increase in the cost of burial.

Club members with 100 percent attendance during the past year were Arthur Clark, Jim Kearney, Peter Logan, Ed Mulvey, Warren Pratt, Bill Ripley, Al Livingston and Fred Howe.

Missing were Fred Johansen, who is on vacation, Lloyd Prescott and Ed Goff.

Visiting rotarians were Henry Adams from Marshfield, Nate Whitten from Hawaii, Dave Gaffey from Scituate and Ted Vitty from Brockton. Another visitor was a former rotarian, Bob Fessler.

Monday, July 9 is club installation of officers and ladies night. A delicious buffet is planned, highlighted by a special dessert, compliments of our new president.

Groundbreaking Launches Sail Club Year

The Cohasset Sailing Club launched its "Year of Renewal" program last week when ground was broken for its new central building on Government Island. It will provide classroom, workshop and storage facilities to replace the existing makeshift structure.

The new 28" by 55" building, estimated to cost $60,000 is the gift of an anonymous donor and construction was approved by Cohasset residents at April's town meeting. Architects are Strekalovsky and Hoyt, Hingham.

At the ground-breaking, Commodore Edward Atkinson announced plans for a companion $25,000 Fleet Renewal Fund drive to start next month with the objective of eventually replacing the present fleet of Widgeon sailboats used in the training of juniors and adults, and adding other types of craft to permit development of intermediate and advanced training skills.

"We are embarking today on a two-part program of renewal," Atkinson said. "Through the exceptional generosity of an anonymous donor we are able to start construction of a building that will greatly improve our ability to carry out the club's basic purpose of training Cohasset youngsters and adults in seamanship, sailing and water safety.

"As a matching effort on the part of the club, we will undertake to raise $25,000 so that we can bring the fleet up to the level of our new shore facilities. The present sailboats are in need of increasing maintenance after many years of hard instructional use, and we also need additional types of boats to meet the need for training in intermediate and advanced sailing."

The Cohasset Sailing Club is in its 20th year of operation, having opened for business in 1960. It was organized by a group of Cohasset citizens as a non-profit corporation with membership open to all Cohasset residents. The town permitted the club to use town property on Government Island and the Club added two small buildings and floats.

This year the club has approximately 175 members and again is offering shore school instruction and sailing lessons to 140 children and adults.

Children between the ages of nine through 15 receive training in fundamentals of sailing week days between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. Adults meet for instruction on Sunday mornings. In addition there is open sailing for members each week night and on week-ends when the boats are not in use for training. The club also offers dock facilities for mooring of members' skiffs. Membership and service fees have been kept to a minimum through maximum use of volunteer help.

Chris Collins is Steward of the club this summer with responsibility for operation of the facilities and supervision of two dockmasters. Stephen Bobo, a college sailing champion, is chief instructor, heading a staff of five assistants.

Officers of the Club this year, in addition to Commodore Atkinson are: Vice Commodore, R.C. Porter; Treasurer, P.H. Greenman; Clerk, D.C. Sweeney, Jr.; Rear Commodores P.A. Carlson, D. M. Baccari, P.A. Chapman, Francis X. Johnston III, R.A. Dabrowski, and R.M. Davenport.

CZM Grant Pond Boon

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, R-Cohasset, announced this week that the Massachusetts Coastal Zone Management (MCZM) Office awarded an $8,000 Community Assistance Grant to the towns of Hull and Cohasset for a study of eutrophication and associated salt pond management problems in Straits Pond.

The study will result in scientifically based solutions and detailed management plans for improving the quality of the salt pond and its future use for recreation and public access.

The pond, which is located in both communities, has developed a number of environmental problems in past years including noxious odors, poor water quality, algae blooms, overgrowth of aquatic weeds and a breeding environment for midges and mosquitos. An apparent cause of the pond's eutrophication appears to be excessive amounts of nutrients entering the pond.

Pollution has entered the pond through a number of sources including substandard septic systems, storm water outfalls, storm water runoff and leachate from the Hull landfill.

The study will provide not only a thorough understanding of the pond's physical characteristics and problems, but it will also assess possible mechanisms to reclaim the pond for recreation activities

In addition to the $8,000 grant, the towns will provide $2,000 in matching funds.

Saga Of The Sally Marie

Fisherman Local Version Of Boat People

Matthew Marr's 38' fishing boat, the "Sally Marie," was ordered removed from Cohasset Harbor by Norfolk Superior Court Judge Rudolph Pierce last Monday. Marr removed the boat Thursday night, possibly in contempt of court, to a temporary mooring in Scituate Harbor.

Assistant Town Counsel Richard Henderson last Monday mailed a copy of the restraining order to Marr directly, a copy to Marr's attorney, Michael Savage, and a copy to the Norfolk County sheriff's office for servicing.

"I believe Marr received the order by Tuesday," Henderson said Friday and noted that he should have been served by the sheriff by Thursday night. Because the boat was still in the harbor on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, Henderson said, Harbormaster Harry Ritter came to Henderson with a complaint.

"Believing Marr had received the order on Tuesday, a contempt petition was filed by the town on Thursday, July 5, and another Norfolk Superior Court judge issued an order of notice for a hearing on the contempt," Henderson said. The hearing on the contempt charge will also be heard on July 12 in conjunction with a hearing for a preliminary injunction to further restrain Marr from mooring the "Sally Marie" in the harbor.

Henderson added, "The fact that the boat is now removed means that the Town can request that, or will be inclined to, withdraw the contempt charge."

When Ritter was questioned Thursday night as to the whereabouts of Marr's boat, he replied, "It was last seen going through the channel." The boat was moored overnight at Scituate Harbor town pier, according to Marr, and has since been moved temporarily to a lobster car mooring in Scituate Harbor.

"I'm hopefully going back to Cohasset," Marr said this week. Marr said that the restraining order from mooring in Cohasset was making it "very difficult" for him to fish. "It's practically putting me out of business," he said.

Marr contended that the mooring difficulty was contrived. "There was no problem of my boat coming near any boats. They didn't dare put Harry Silvia's boat (a 32' Pacemaker) on his mooring while mine was there because it would show there wasn't any problem."

Ritter had been unable to moor Silvia's boat on its mooring because of low tide flows which he feared could cause congestion and collision of boats in the area of Marr's mooring. Silvia's boat was temporarily moored on a 34' lobsterboat mooring.

Donahue Heads Slate Of Gridiron Club Officers

The Cohasset Gridiron Club has begun its new year with the election of new officers for the 1979/80 season: President, Bob Donahue; Vice President Bud Howorth; Secretary, Bob Walls; Treasurer, Peter Androski.

New members inducted were Bob Ripley and Pete Conway.

Coming events and chairmen were announced:

Gridiron Clinic — Date to be announced. Co-chairmen: Peter Androski; Bob Meers; Rob Devin.

Kick off breakfast — Date to be announced. Co-chairmen: Bud Howorth; Bob Walls.

Homecoming — Date to be announced. Co-chairmen: Bill Broderick; Dick Ainslie.

Fall Dance — Date to be announced. Co-chairmen: Pete Conway; Bill O'Brien; Pat Conlan.

The Gridiron Club will be sponsoring again this year the trip to Martha's Vinyard for the first game of the season. The team is housed and fed through money raised by the club during the year.

The scholarship fund is what the Gridiron Club is all about. This past year $2500 dollars was given out. The recipients were: William Roy, $500; Brian Conlan, $400; Matthew Salerno, $500; Joseph Durkin, $400; Daniel Prendergast, $400; and Diane Maloney, $300.

Villagers Think Christmas

Board members of the Cohasset Village & Harbor Association met July 5 for their monthly meeting.

Plans are now being formulated for Christmas decorations on the common and village area. Electrical requirements necessitate the early planning. Means of combating vandalism, littering and shoplifting were also discussed. The success of the litter baskets around town, paid for by the C.V.&H.A. and put in place by the town and ways of discouraging litter in the Common duck pond are being studied. It was agreed that "All" Vandalisms and shoplifting be reported.

CHS Drama Workshop Arts Festival Hit

The Cohasset High School Drama Workshop last week performed Jules Feiffer's "Hold Me" at the Town Hall — a show presented in conjunction with the South Shore Arts Festival.

Director Ron Emmons is trying to build Drama Workshop funds to that new lighting can be added to the high school auditorium. The 1979 class donated $800 toward black velour backdrop and side curtains for the stage, another contribution toward more effective drama performances.

ACTORS AT WORK in scene from Hold Me, Cohasset Drama Workshop production at recent Arts Festival at Town Hall.

"Knock, Knock," also a Feiffer production will be performed by the cast August 17 and 18. "Hold Me" was buoyed by alumni members of the Workshop, Emmons explained, to give undergraduates a chance to spend the summer working with more experienced actors.

"Hold Me" went the gamut of emotions. Anyone who has read the Feiffer comic or rather tragic strip, knows that he regularly examines the futility and joy of life, love and frustration. And so, in a wonderfully combined series of sketches, the Drama Workshop portrayed the continuing saga of the human condition.

The modern human condition, that is, for no matter how normal a character attempted to be, a neurotic side sneaked out — sometimes foiling, sometimes offering success to the particular protagonist. For instance, the search for self, for me-ness, seemed a constant quest of the characters. Freedom was sought by getting a divorce and partying, beauty was sought behind a series of masks, and social success was gained only with the aid of a self-serving machine.

Perhaps the most poignant message from the production emerged when a young woman, at the prompting of her annoyed boyfriend, realized that she was free to go her own way. As she releases her strangle hold on him and starts to walk off to live her own life, he becomes startled and worried. "Hold me," he begs her as he runs after her.

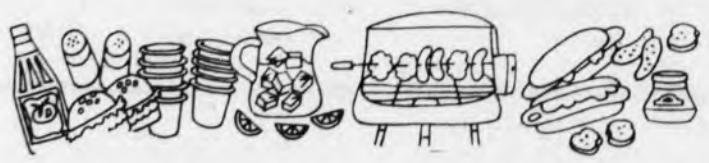
Beth Donahue, Meri Fink, Lisa O'Toole, Disa Pratt and Jim Vivian appeared in the Drama Workshop production of "Story Theatre" which won the state drama competition this year. All five were named to the state all-star cast. In addition, Meri and Jim were selected as two of the top 15 best high school performers in New England. Meri, Lisa and Disa will be seniors at Cohasset High School next fall. Beth will study theatre at Emerson College this year, while Jim begins his theatre studies at Boston University.

Who's fueling?

Stay tuned to WATD fm96 for gas station openings.

When the gas line stretches around the block, stay tuned to WATD. We'll keep you informed of gas allocations, and tell you which stations on the South Shore are pumping.

We'll also have some tips for how best to conserve gasoline once we've helped you find it. And we'll ask some interesting questions about the origins of the oil shortage, and what's being done about it.



So remember, when the gas lines are long, stay tuned to WATD. One way or another, we'll let you know who's "fueling."

PROBATE COURT
No. 59832

Norfolk, ss.

NOTICE OF FIDUCIARY'S ACCOUNT

To all persons interested in the estate of Ada Forbush Faxon late of Cohasset, in said County, deceased.

You are hereby notified pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 72 that the thirty-eighth to forty-first accounts of New England Merchants National Bank and Edward C. Johnson, II as Trustees (the fiduciary) of the will of said deceased for the benefit of William Faxon and others have been presented to said Court for allowance.

If you desire to preserve your right to file an objection to said accounts, you or your attorney must file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before the eighth day of August, 1979, the return day of this citation. You may upon written request by registered or certified mail to the fiduciary, or to the attorney for the fiduciary, obtain without cost a copy of said accounts. If you desire to object to any item of said accounts, you must, in addition to filing a written appearance as aforesaid, file within thirty days after said return day or within such other time as the Court upon motion may order a written statement of each such item together with the grounds for each objection thereto, a copy to be served upon the fiduciary pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 5.

WITNESS, ROBERT M. FORD, Esquire, First Judge of said Court, this twenty-second day of June, 1979.

His Backyard Hobby Is Bees

"I'm just a backyard hobbyist," claims Joe Migliaccio, who keeps three hives of 250,000 bees each in his backyard on Ripley Road.

Migliaccio keeps over two million bees in all, with eight additional hives dispersed throughout Cohasset. It is an avocation that is a one-day-a-week job. There are side benefits, though — in the form of honey.

The ultimate end to Migliaccio's beekeeping means is the honey which he sells all year long. The Mariner visited at the bees peak honey making season and watched as they milled around Migliaccio's backyard gathering nectar.

"The workers all have a job," Migliaccio said referring to the bees that were busily roving between flowers and the hives. These were Italian honeybees, he explained, and comprising a hive are workers, drones and a queen bee.

The bees, governed by instinct and communication with the rest of the hive, may travel as far as two and a half miles before returning to the hive with news of a nectar source. Although the life span of the bees is a matter of weeks, except for the queen which can live up to two years, the hive population is easily replenished. The queen bee can lay 1000 to 2000 eggs a day and therefore insures a constant crop of workers.

Migliaccio calls beekeeping "a very expensive hobby" and explained that it costs approximately $150 to get set up with one hive. He now makes his own boxes for the hives, retrieves swarms bothering neighbors to replenish his supply, and of course, sells honey to defray expenses for his hobby.

Migliaccio "smoked" his largest hive to allow the Mariner photographer to get a picture of the bees making a withdrawal from a tray of honey. "The bees think the hives are on fire and will automatically go to the honey and fill up with it. In case they had to abandon the hive they fill themselves with enough to last for a few days," he said. Although he noted that he had never been seriously bitten by the bees, he made sure to protect himself with the smoker, a full-length suit, a head net and gloves.

Because it is the height of the season, the tray Migliaccio displayed was almost full of honey, and had filled within a week. He averages 50 pounds of honey per hive annually, he said, while leaving the bees 60 pounds to feed off.

Migliaccio, who works for Marshfield Sand and Gravel as his full-time occupation, mentioned some of the other accomplishments of bees, aside from their honey making capabilities. His bees have also been used for pollinating cranberry bogs and in the treatment of people with arthritis.

Although the season got off to a slow start because of all the rain, things sure seemed to be buzzing over at Joe Migiliaccio's last week.

ZOO MOBILE

On Monday, July 23, the MDC Traveling Zoo Mobile will visit the Osgood playground from 10 a.m. until noon. The Playground Programs will meet as scheduled and will visit the Zoo Mobile. All residents are invited to view the Zoo Mobile between 11 a.m. and 12 noon. There is no charge for admittance.

FILM SERIES

Remember: Thursday, July 19, 7:30 p.m., Town Hall — "Great Expectations" ends at 9:25 p.m.

On Thursday evening at 7:30 in Town Hall July 26, the fourth movie of the season will be shown. It is entitled "Captains Courageous." Rudyard Kipling's classic novel about the adventures of a spoiled rich boy on a Gloucester fishing schooner. The movie stars Freddie Bartholomew, Spencer Tracy, and Lionel Barrymore and is directed by Victor Fleming. Younger children must be accompanied by an adult or responsible, older sibling. Children should be picked up this week at 9:25 p.m. sharp!

BAND CONCERTS

The third in a series of six concerts on the Common will be held at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, July 24. The 30-piece South Shore Concert Band will be performing. There may be an additional seventh band concert given by the United States Navy this summer. Please watch local news media for particulars.

6-12 YEAR OLD FIELD TRIP

On Tuesday, July 24, the 6-12 year old playground group will be taking a field trip to Drumlin Farm, Lincoln, Massachusetts. Drumlin Farm offers children an experience in nature and nature studies which is probably unparalleled. A pre-registration will be mandatory and reservations will not be accepted after Monday, July 16. There will be a minimal fee.

The four and five year olds will also take a field trip July 31, to the Trailside Museum in Milton. Details will be announced next week. There will be a minimal fee.

SAND CASTLE CONTEST

On Wednesday, July 25, beginning at 9 a.m. at Sandy Beach, the Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct a Sand Castle Contest. There will be four age groupings: pre-school up to age 5; 6-8 year olds; 9-12 year olds, and 12 years and over. Ribbons will be awarded for first and second prize in each group. Children may do individual castles or group castles. There will be separate classifications for group and individual work.

Children may bring shovels, buckets, pails, etc. but all adornments must be natural. Parents must accompany and be responsible for children. The event will last approximately one-and-a-half hours. Ribbons will be awarded on the basis of creativity and workmanship. The rain date is Thursday, July 26, 9 a.m.

It's Come A Long Way

Recreation Season Winging

The playgrounds are full of happy children, and it's clear the Recreation Department's summer program is in full swing.

Summer isn't the only time the three-year-old department, charged with providing leisure activities for the town, is busy. The Dept. and Recreation Commission provide programs and services for the entire community the entire year.

The Recreation Department was formed under the Commission at the 1976 Town Meeting which gave the Commission authorization to engage the full-time services of a Recreation Director. That's John Worley, Director of Recreation.

"It was just the seven-member elected Commission for a year," Worley relates. "They ran summer playground, youth tennis programs and a few band concerts. That was about it. They did what they could in the time they had."

And with the money they had — which wasn't much. According to Worley establishing the foundations of the new department was no easy task. Worley's first budget totalled some $6000 which he stretched to offer "a little of something for everyone."

After he submitted that budget (which was due within two weeks of his arrival), Worley found himself with a matrix of programs for all age groups. Many of the Recreation Department's programs

Murray Bill Would Produce Harbor Money

Legislation to change the assessment and collection of excise taxes imposed on boats moored or docked in harbors has been approved by the Massachusetts House and was being considered by the state Senate this week.

The bill was filed by Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, R-Cohasset and if passed the bill would make both mooring fees and excise taxes payable to the town responsible for harbor maintenance.

Cohasset Selectmen last week expressed concern about Scituate's intention to collect excise taxes from boats lying in Scituate waters, and their lack of contribution to harbor maintenance.

THE LANGUAGE

The bill states "in the case of a vessel which is habitually moored or docked in a harbor bounded by more than one city or town, such return shall be made to the assessor of the city or town which controls and expends funds to maintain such harbor."

The second section of the bill reads, "said excise shall be assessed in the city or town where the vessel is habitually moored or docked," and provides "that in the use of a vessel which is habitually moored or docked in a harbor bounded by more than one city or town, said excise shall be assessed in the city or town which controls and expends funds to maintain such harbor."

At a joint meeting of Scituate and Cohasset Selectmen last week, a discussion on mutual harbor concerns indicated that for this year Scituate will collect excise taxes on boats moored in Scituate waters within Cohasset Harbor. Mutual maintenance agreements would be discussed, Selectmen agreed, over the course of the year before the next boating season. Mooring fees will be collected by Cohasset as in the past.

Clark was dismayed, however, that "Scituate has done nothing and now is going to collect the money." He felt the 50 per cent of Scituate's boat taxes which have to be applied to harbor funds should be returned to those waters in Cohasset Harbor.

Harbor Awarded $17,950 CZM Grant

Cohasset has been awarded a Coastal Zone Management (CZM) Community Asistance Grant for $17,950 to prepare a port and harbor master plan for Cohasset Harbor. These funds are to be used in conjunction with the $5000 matching funds appropriated at Town Meeting this year.

The project will develop objectives and management strategies for parking, recreational boating, navigation, commercial fishing, public access and land use management.

CZM reported that contract materials will be forwarded to the town for a prompt start, but noted that before the project can proceed, any outstanding budget and subcontracting issues must be resolved. Work on the project can proceed as soon as CZM has approved a project budget and subcontracting procedure and have received and countersigned the completed grant agreement.

West Corner Golf Ex-Caddy Klatch

The eighth annual West Corner Invitational Golf Tournament was held last Friday at the Cohasset Golf Club for former caddies who have grown up, lived and worked in the area all assembled to play a round of golf.

The 55 participants this year assembled at the Club House at 7 a.m. for breakfast and teed off at 8 a.m. When the first players returned around noontime, they were more than ready for cocktails and lunch. Dinner and dancing was featured that evening at the Sons of Italy in Hingham for the players and their families for a grand reunion.

The Rocco Froio Memorial Cup was the prize in contention and went to Anthony Barbuto of Hingham for his net score of 58. He will retain the cup for one year and received a small replica to keep. James Froio of Cohasset was proud of the fact that a different participant had won the cup every year, although Theodore Galo of Hingham won it twice in different years.

"The idea of the reunion is all of us getting together, where we grew up together," Froio said. Most of the

James Meadows & Jeremy Barnard stop in Cohasset overnight

Sailing The Ocean Blue, From New Orleans To Maine

By Judith Epstein

James Meadows and Jeremy Barnard, a writer and photographer team, are sailing the ocean blue — 3200 miles of it, from New Orleans to Friendship, Maine. In 120 pound single mast "Phantom" sailboats, no less.

They were last seen around these parts at the Cohasset Yacht Club pier, fending off reporters and photographers. To the tune of up the eastern coastline in 149 days, the duo is planning to complete their trip on July 27. Why? In time for a huge party in Friendship, of course, where all the crews' friends and followers will assemble for the bash.

From the sound of it they'll need R-and-R from both the trip and the party.

The night's stop over in Cohasset, where Barnard's parents live, was one of a succession of respites since their initial shove-off March 1. "We stop every night, camp on beaches, or stay in hotels and motels. We've been put up by people all along the coast, " Barnard said.

"Peeople are very receptive," Meadows said, adding "Especially in the South; there is something to southern hospitality."

As for the daily amenities, the pair carries about five days worth of food and water apiece.

"We wanted to get away from society and back to nature, in a way," was the way Meadows explained the trip. According to Barnard, he was in for the "sheer adventure." "Every minute has been great," he said, and then qualified his remark, "Crazy. It's almost taken our lives several times."

Somehow "sheer adventure" is putting it mildly when confronted with tornadoes, sharks and robbers, as were these two young men at various harrowing points of their journey.

Barnard recited one of the milder incidents, "A 10 foot wave threw me and boat. I hit the water first and when I looked up the boat was coming down on me. It's not a very comforting feeling," he said.

Then there was the time the 12-foot hammerhead shark decided to surface under Barnard's sailboat. "One thing you don't do," he advised, as if it were the type of thing people go out and do every day, "one thing you don't do is violate a shark's feeding grounds. They are very protective and possessive."

Meadows told of the two tornadoes they sited off the coast, and which almost veered in their direction. The team's practice is to sail along the coastline fairly close, although they have gone as far out as 10 miles.

Their worst experience, and somehow the most humiliating of all the things that could go wrong, occurred when they are designed for adults as well as youths to this day, Worley stressed. The Department has grown to a $36,500 budget and is developing more programs all the time.

"We're small in comparison to others, but we've come a long way. Many people have come forward gratis," Worley said appreciatively.

The Commission is a policy setting board from which Worley derives his direction, and from which he disseminates recommendations. "They provide input on recreation in all forms," Worley said.

This input or feedback of people's wants and needs is the crux of Worley's job. "It is a dynamic process. A successful program this year may not be next year. It requires constant evaluating and adjusting. We want to provide what they want," he said, and encourages letters and calls to the recreation office at any time to discuss ideas and needs for programs.

Two current projects under the aegis of the department are the Elms Meadows Skating Area, and the building on Lilly Pond donated for recreation purposes by the Water Department. The former is being landscaped as a winter skating rink and as an open space recreation area. The building off King St. may have a pier for rowboats and fishing, Worley noted.

The Department's Summer Series offers 30 structured programs in conjunction with a number of special events year. This year, Worley said, six outdoor band concerts sponsored by the Federation of Musicians will be played on the Common on Tuesday nights. Worley explained that money is divided out to communities from the Federation, and that for every performance a town books, the organization matches with another. Cohasset, however, is only paying for two concerts while receiving the six, Worley pointed out. A summer film series also offers movie classics Thursday nights at the Town Hall, free of charge.

Another change Worley has made since becoming Director, was in centralizing the playground program, at the Joseph Osgood School which originally had a satellite playground in Beechwood.

"We now have a full day program which is structured like a day camp," Worley said. Although the playground is fully staffed and structured, children up to age 12 can drop in whenever they want, providing they check in and out. The 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. playground day requires that the child bring a lunch and a swim suit if partaking in the optional swim on Monday, Wednesday and Friday at the Swimming Center.

On Thursdays, the playground children may take advantage of a 25 per cent discount for kiddie-show performances at the Music Circus. Overseeing all this activity are 10 paid staff members, plus three CETA workers and five volunteers.

"They key to any program is a good staff. We have an outstanding group," Worley said of the college aged staffers, who have a good blend of accomplishments.

For a complete listing of summer activities consult the blue brochure enumerating all activities available at the recreation office.

The Recreation Department also partakes in a job opportunity program placing young people in jobs. "We act as a clearing house in getting local youth jobs such as lawn mowing and babysitting. So far we have placed 25 to 30 kids."

Also this year a recreation student from Johnson State College, Christopher Swider, interned for a semester at the Department. He worked without pay, Worley explained, in turn for learning how to run a municipal recreation department.

The response to all this activity by the town has been overwhelming, Worley attested. In 1979, 6828 people participated in programs and special events. Although the Department is tax supported, Worley said he is trying to offset costs with a minimal registration fee of $4 to $15.

Last year the $5377 taken via registration fees was turned in to the Treasurer-Collector and applied to the total budget. This practice in turn helps to defray the tax rate, he explained. By the same token Worley tries to keep costs down by offering a 50 per cent discount to subsequent children in a family signing up for the same program in non-self supporting programs.

It's all pretty hectic Worley admitted, yet he feels the Recreation Department is doing well making use of the town's existing facilities, buildings and playing fields to have a good time.

Cookworks continues fund raising for Independence Gown Museum.

Painting the exterior of this nice old building is the goal for this summer. A professional will paint the high peak area this weekend & the remainder will be done by volunteers.

The color design has been contributed by Phillip Smith of Creation Interiors. The Cohasset Historical Society will provide the paint, the Cohasset Tree Dept. will remove the old shrubs & Betsy Hoopes of Cohasset, Landscape Architect will design the plantings for the front.

Any of you Cohasset folk who would like to contribute to the restoration of this building a check to the Cohasset Historical Society will be greatly appreciated. Any questions call, Connie Parker, 383-0773 or Larry at Cookworks 383-1906

There is also a need for 2 pairs of shutters 70" or 72" for the first floor windows (any condition.)

Our town deserves to be better than better & revitalizing this fine old building requires our attention.

Unnecessary Expenses

The appropriation for legal expenses for Cohasset is $500 a year. Unforeseen and extraordinary costs beyond that may be transfered by approval of the Advisory Board.

That $500 sum seems hardly able to cover this year's litigation costs for harbor court cases alone. Are these suits necessary or are they the result of ignorance of and disregard for harbor and mooring regulations? Are residents aware of the fact that the town and the Harbormaster have the right to establish and enforce those regulations?

Selectman Arthur Clark, Assistant Town Counsel Richard Henderson and Harbormaster Harry Ritter have been summoned to court almost weekly this summer.

"We've certainly had a flurry of suits lately," Clark said, putting it mildly in his usual easy-going manner. What he didn't say is that every time he has to go to court, he is being taken away from the town hall. Don't forget, Clark serves as a town manager of sorts for Cohasset, and his not being in the Selectmen's office to handle business hurts the town.

Harry Ritter's place is in the harbor, not in court. With all the mooring, boating, fishing, construction and town line issues going on now in the harbor, Ritter's time is required there more than ever.

Richard Henderson has been grumbling all month about the excessive amount of energies that have gone into a glorified parking problem, also known as the Marr mooring battle.

"Stenographic costs for depositions and from Master hearings could be very expensive," he said. The Marr case alone could cost $1500 or $2000. "All legal costs pertaining to litigation have to be paid by the town," he said.

Exactly.

Here's Mud In Your..... Er... School?

A mud room isn't exactly an unknown quantity like where exactly Skylab would plop.

Many a home has one.

Usually it's a smallish-sized area between garage or even outdoors and kitchen. It provides exactly the service its name implies. Breezeways serve the purpose ideally.

Rubbers, overshoes, boots and accompanying foul weather garb are left there rather than track mud, snow, or water whatever all over Mom's waxed kitchen floor and wall-to-wall carpets or prized Orientals.

Small residents get brushed off there before entering the main menage (when caught in time).

Dad may shake out his trouser cuffs of clippings after mowing the lawn in the event he forgets to do it outdoors.

Some mud rooms do double duty as laundries, a handy idea since usually what's dumped there needs a scrub-down anyway.

They probably are a hang-over from the ell on old New England farmhouses which served the same purpose for Old MacDonald, trudging in from milking the cows or slopping the hogs, tracking mentionables and unmentionables along with him.

Usually mud rooms are floored with slate, brick, flag or tile, the more easily to remove the leavings.

Some are pin-neat, according to the penchants of the housekeeper or cleaning service, depending on who wins the job.

Others are carbon copies of Fibber McGee's closet catch-alls. And they catch an unbelievable variety of items. Everything from bikes and trikes to whatever else isn't deemed suitable for the inner sanctum sanctorums.

Necessarily there is evidence of mud in such rooms unless they've just been cleaned.

What else would you expect, to find in a mud room, gas?

However, the mud is usually limited to a clump here, a clump there. Even the most casual household doesn't accumulate the stuff to the point it dominates the entire decor.

So when they tell you Cohasset's high school/junior high complex has a mud room, there's hardly anything to get excited about. Even kids that age track in mud. It sounds like a pretty functional idea.

Then, though, you find out that this is a real mud room. It's wall-to-wall and floor-to-ceiling mud.

The school population isn't large enough to have brought in that much grime.

The purpose is intriguing.

Could be a supply for making mudpies? But that would come in handy only if it were a kindergarten.

If cosmetology were on the Cohasset curriculum, it would be entirely obvious that the material was stored for the mud pack course.

Were the room at Town Hall, you might figure it was held in reserve for election campaigns so candidates sling it at each other.

Now the athletes — football, soccer, field hockey, track, even baseball and softball-do pick up a certain amount of mud on their spikes and cleats. It's possible when their footwear is cleaned, the residue is dumped in the mud room to get it out of the way. Possible! But it would take the entire National Football League, American and National Baseball Leagues and the hordes of Attila the Hun, including their horses, to accumulate that mountain.

One might say the picture is muddy. And the thought behind the purpose muddled.

The explanation doesn't clear the muddied waters much.

Report is that when the building was constructed, the room simply wasn't excavated: ergo, the mud room.

It is indeed an architectural novelty, possibly a first.

Conceivably the idea was to leave room for future expansion.

Smart planning! Except that now in order to utilize the space, the mud has to go.

To do that will require excavating the mud manually through a door. Yeah, door! Every mud room a door.

That should keep some pick-and-shovelers in groceries for quite a spell.

But, it's also reported, there's another problem.

Such excavation means the foundation footings would be weakened and have to be strengthened. Naturally, that costs a few thou, like everything else today, which should do wonders for the mood of town taxpayers. Or is it mud?

Nobody, however, can contest that meanwhile the structure is unique as school buildings go.

Only a super-critical individual would suggest that the thing is, in a word, mud spelled backwards.

Around Town Hall

WATER OKAY

Superintendent of the Water Department Edwin Pratt said that there is no shortage of water and no restrictions on water use for Cohasset residents despite the hot and dry weather.

TRESPASSING CHARGE

Selectmen are charged with trespassing by William Figueiredo and were summoned to Quincy District Court on July 18. According to Selectman Arthur Clark, Figueiredo claims that he owns portions of the creek, which feeds into the harbor and which contain four of his moorings.

Harbormaster Harry Ritter said this week that he had initiated action against Figueiredo for mooring in the creek in violation of the mooring regulations. "He is mooring without supervision, direction or permission from the Harbormaster," Ritter said. That case is going to Dedham Superior Court on July 19.

BREAKWATER

As a part of the engineering contract with the town, Hickey Associates must obtain an Army Corps of Engineers permit and a DEQE permit before the reconstruction of the breakwater near the Bellarmine Estate can proceed. Payment of these additional services will be borne in full by the Disaster Relief Team.

APPEALS DECISION

Ocean Bay Nurseries of 231 Chief Justice Cushing Highway has been denied a site plan approval by the Planning Board.

The denial is based on the failure to submit enough information in accordance with the Zoning Bylaw for the Planning Board to approve the request. The Planning Board requested and has not received an easement for utility poles on the southerly boundary of the property, certified drainage calculations, verification by easement or otherwise of the drainage water, utilities available at the site and copies of a revised site plan.

The decision will be reviewed with submission of pertinent data and acceptance by the Planning Board by August 6.

Ocean Bay Nurseries was also notified by Building Inspector James Litchfield that the Special Permit to use a trailer, approved by the Board of Appeals in April, has expired as of June 30.

Hull Wants Tide Gate Money

The town of Hull wants money from Cohasset for combined funds to be used for the replacement and/or repair of the hoist and stem on the Straits Pond tide gate.

The letter sent to Selectmen last week stated, "We cannot raise or lower the flood gate, therefore we are having problems with the water in Straits Pond." It has been theorized that the amount of ocean water and the level of salinity in the pond help to control the growth of algae and insect life in the water.

Through some error, the letter continued, the Cohasset Selectmen weren't notified of the proposal at Hull's annual town Meeting regarding the expenditure of $2500. Those funds were to be used in conjunction with funds received from Cohasset andHingham for the tide gate project.

Selectmen Chairman Arthur Clark said last week that there was no money available to contribute to the job. "I could ask for a transfer from reserve funds from the Advisory Board," Clark said, "but with the gas and oil situation, I question whether they'd allow it."

GROUND BREAKING for Cohasset Sailing Club building.

Nazarene Church Opens

The Community Church of the Nazarene began services Sunday conducted by Rev. J. Scott Newell, Jr., of North Cohasset. The church was the former Pope Memorial Church.

United Methodist services were conducted at the North Cohasset church until Cohasset and Hull congregations voted to merge the services to the Hull Village Methodist Church.

The Rev. Newell is a graduate of Louisiana College, Eastern Nazarene College and Nazarene Theological Seminary.

The Cohasset Sailing Club launched its "year of renewal" program last week by breaking ground for its new building on Government Island, designed by architects Strekalovsky and Hoyt, Hingham. Chris Collins is steward of the club with responsibility for operation of the facilities and supervision of the dockmasters. Stephen Bobo is chief instructor heading a staff of five assistants. Vice Commodor is R.C. Porter, Treasurer P. Greenman. Rear Commodores are P.A. Carlson, D.M. Baccari, P.A. Chapman and Francis X. Johnston III, R.A. Dabrowski, R.M. Davenport.

Graduated from Holy Cross College in Worcester, Mass. are Patricia Bowen and Thomas Cowan.

School Superintendent John Maloney, commenting on the METCO program expansion, said his district, which has 48 METCO students, would reassess its participation in the program if control was taken from the local schools and given to the METCO organization.

Robert Keating of Windy Hill Road says his ambition in life was to live in Cohasset. So when he took the job of General Manager of the New England Tea Men of the North American Soccer League, he moved his wife Donna and children Linda, Terry, Diane, Brian, Sheila and Tracey to this ocean town. The Tea Men are enjoying a steady growth in attendances as the soccer boom in this country increases.

were robbed, wiped out clean, by thieves in Charlestown. "We were staying at a place along the beach at Folly Island," Barnard said. "We had pulled the boats up onto the beach. We must have been robbed while we were asleep by someone who saw us land," he continued.

"They took everything. Even our water and toothbrushes. Who wants your old toothbrush?" he asked, still incredulous. The only thing the crooks didn't get was Barnard's AM/FM weather band radio, as it was locked in its compartment.

Even Meadow's sailboat was absconded with. "I went down to check on the boats," Barnard recalled, "When I saw only one boat I thought, 'That's strange' because I knew Jim was still on land." The boat was finally recovered the next day out eight miles out at sea and was brought into a Coast Guard station in Charlestown.

They spent a week of frustration there, they said, trying to replace the $2500 worth of missing equipment so that everything was as it had been.

"The stuff was hard to replace," Barnard said, "because we didn't want just any old water bottle, we wanted the exact right water bottle."

Barnard, 31, and Meadows, 30, are sailors of longstanding and intend to make their travels the subject of a book, "The Voyage of the Phantom Sailors." Meadows is from Concord, Mass., and has formerly worked as a musician and is now a freelance writer. Barnard grew up in Scituate but now lives in Georgetown where he is a photographer.

Their trip has been subsidized in part by the Houmar Phantom sailboat manufacturers. The boats were donated for the trip but once the men land in Maine the boats will be theirs.

About ready for another leg of their journey Barnard quipped, "All I need is a transfusion, a psychiatrist and a stretcher." A friend standing nearby said, "How about a corn muffin?" "That'll do," Barnard responded.

Gee, for a sheer adventure he's easy to please.

Obituaries

Arthur Kelly

A funeral Mass was celebrated at 10 a.m. Monday at St. Anthony's Church for Arthur J. Kelly, 90, who died last Friday at his home.

Kelly was vice president, treasurer, clerk and director of the R.H. White Co. of Boston and vice president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

He was president of the Boston Credit Bureau, director of the Boston Citizens Council, was a member of the Boston Zoning Board of adjustment, chairman of the Boston Metropolitan district and an overseer of the Boston Board of Public Welfare.

He was born in Boston and lived there for many years. He had been a Cohasset resident for 22 years.

He was a member of the Mayor's Committee of 100 Club and the Mayor's Citizens Committee on Finance in Boston. He was a director for the Home for Catholic Children, was on the advisory committee for Catholic Boy's Guidance Center, president of the Catholic Alumni Sodality and was director of the First Friday Club.

For R.H. White, he was the vice president, treasurer and clerk for its realty company and was trustee of its charitable foundation.

He graduated from Roxbury Latin in 1908 and from Harvard in 1912. In 1957, he was awarded an honorary doctor of law degree from Boston College.

He was on the Boston College Business School Advisory Committee and was governor of the Harvard Club of Boston. He was an army veteran.

Husband of the late Helen (Finn) Kelly, he leaves his daughter, Kathleen S. Kelly of Cohasset; a son, Arthur S. Kelly of Wellesley; five grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Burial was at St. Joseph's Cemetary, Boston.

Cornelia White

Cornelia (Hallowell) White, 78, a former school committee member, died July 11 at her home.

Mrs. White, a longtime resident of Cohasset, was born in Boston. She was a member and past president of the Social Service League, helped fund the Community Center and was a member of the 60-plus Club, the League of Women Voters and the Community Garden Club.

She was interested in conservation and wildlife. Her summers were spent in North Haven, Me., and at Bass River, Yarmouth.

She leaves her husband, Richardson White Sr.; three sons, Richardson White Jr., of Washington, D.C., Frank White of Watertown and Donald White of Philadelphia; a brother Richard Hallowell II of Chestnut Hill, and eight grandchildren.

Funeral services and interment were private. Donations in her memory may be made to the 60-plus Club or the American Cancer Society.

Donald Sisson

Donald B. Sisson, 52, of Cohasset, a vice-president for Reed, Shaw, Stenhouse, Inc., insurance brokers in Boston, died after a brief illness July 6 at South Shore Hospital, Weymouth.

He was a resident of Cohasset for 12 years. He had previously lived in Seattle, Wash., for 17 years. He spent his summers in Mattapoisett.

Mr. Sisson graduated from Bryant College, Providence, R.I., in 1950.

He was a World War II Air Force veteran.

Before his vice-presidency at Reed, Shaw, Stenhouse Inc., he had been employed as a broker for nine years at Fairfield and Ellis of Boston.

He was a member of the Mariners Club of Boston and the Propellor Club of Boston.

Husband of the late Mrs. Ruth (Converse) Sisson, he is leaves two sons, Mark Sisson of Cohasset, and Gary Sisson of Eastsound, Wash.; a daughter, Sally Sisson of Cohasset; two brothers, Gordon B. Sisson of Wareham and James H. Scott of St. Petersburg, Florida; and three sisters, Mrs. Dorothea Tripp of Mattapoisett, Mrs. Irene Hathaway of Ruskin, Fla., and Mrs. Carol Littlefield of Arvada, Colo.

Memorial services were held in the Second Congregational Church, Highland Ave. with private graveside services at Cushing Cemetery, Mattapoisett.

Donations may be made to the American Cancer Society.

Update On The Sally Marie

Matthew Marr's 38' fishing boat, the "Sally Marie", is prohibited from mooring in Cohasset Harbor until the case is tried on all merits August 14 at Norfolk Superior Court.

The temporary restraining order to keep Marr's boat out of the harbor has been made a preliminary injunction which will remain in effect until the court disposition, Assistant Town Counsel Richard Henderson explained.

"The case is going to trial on its merits before a Master on August 14 at Norfolk Superior Court," he said. Henderson also noted that he withdrew the contempt charge the town had filed against Marr for failure to remove his boat promptly after receiving the restraining order.

Michael Savage, Marr's attorney, has filed an amended complaint which has not yet been heard or approved by the court, Henderson said. The new brief claimed that Harbormaster Harry Ritter approved Marr's request to moor his new boat at his present mooring following a February meeting on the matter.

The original complaint stated that at the February meeting between Marr, Ritter and Selectman Arthur Clark, it was opined "that the present mooring was sufficient for his (Marr's) enlarged vessel, and they (Selectmen) did not disagree." "In reliance upon" that conversation, the brief continued, Marr purchased a 38' vessel.

According to Henderson the most significant change in the complaints is that the former assumed approval to moor a larger boat by way of implication, and that the latter claimed approval by the Harbormaster.

Marr is still arguing that the Harbor regulations, amended in June 1978 by the Harbor Study Committee, were designed to strangle the fishing industry. Henderson pointed out that the amendments to the regulations are guidelines only, and have no legislative authority.

He explained that the Harbor Regulations are town bylaws, enacted by vote of Town Meeting. The Harbormaster by state statute has the right to make mooring regulations, which in turn are passed by Selectmen. The June 1978 amendments to the mooring regulations, Henderson noted, were enunciated by the Harbor Study Committee, and are guidelines, not laws.

Story Hour At The Pratt

By Richard Hayes

Library hours during the summer are Monday 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Cohasset youngsters are "Putting it All Together with Summer Reading" in the children's room. This program encourages children to read, keep their reading skills sharp over the summer, and encourages personal interests through books. Parents sign reading slips confirming that the child has read a book at the appropriate reading level.

A certificate of accomplishment is awarded to each child who reads ten books. Also, a "puzzle piece" with the child's name is added to the giant wall puzzle board made by Liz Glasfeld, a volunteer. Children who read 20 books may choose a free paperback, donated by the Friends of the Cohasset Library.

The children's librarians have observed that by minimizing the competition, by motivating reluctant readers, and by offering selection advice and encouragement, the summer reading incentive program is indeed an opportunity to "put it all together."

A summertime series of weekly story hours will take place on Friday mornings at 10, Aug. 3 through 31, in the children's room. Pre-schoolers between the ages of three-and-a half and five are welcome and advance registration is not necessary.

Children will hear stories attuned to summertime fun, learn fingerplays and songs, and become acquainted with the joy of books. The programs last about 45 minutes and time is always provided for children and parents to select books, records, filmstrips and cassettes to enjoy at home.

Recent acquisitions in the adult services department include the New England Aquarium family pass, gift of the Friends of the Library, available to families of Cohasset for one day free loan.

Assigned To The Desk

Patrolman Feola In Hot Water Again

Patrolman Randolph Feola, Jr., escaped serious injury early Saturday morning when the van he was driving flipped over on its side after sheering a utility pole in half on Atlantic Avenue in Hull.

Feola pleaded innocent to charges of operating under the influence and driving to endanger in Hingham District Court Monday morning.

No other motor vehicles were involved in the accident which occurred at 5 a.m. in the Green Hill section of Hull; the area was without power for an hour after the pole was struck, police reported.

Selectmen voted last week to rescind their previous May decision to suspend Feola with pay until the court disposition for earlier charges of drunken driving and possession of a dangerous weapon, also levelled by Hull police. That trial date is set for Sept. 18 at Hingham District Court.

The new vote to supercede the former called for the return of Feola for desk duty at police headquarters without police powers. His duties would be of a clerical nature, Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark said.

Feola returned to the Police Department Monday and assumed his assigned desk duties on the second shift. He was sporting a new short haircut.

Clark said that when the original vote was made, Selectmen were unaware that the case would be continued for months. "We didn't know the case would be dragged out. It could go on for a year," Clark said.

"It's only fair to the town and to the taxpayer," Selectman Rocco Laugelle added.

Police Chief Randolph Feola, Patrolman Feola's father, indicated the new vote to return his son to desk duty was in violation of the police contract, particularly under the sections concerning disciplinary action, extra pay details and overtime.

The article of the police contract which covers disciplinary action and which Chief Feola feels was violated in particular by Selectmen, reads, "No permanent employee shall be removed, dismissed, discharged or suspended in any manner except for just cause, and at any hearings or interviews in which there is a question as to whether or not the employee's job is in jeopardy, he may have an opportunity to have an attorney present on his behalf." The Chief noted that neither Feola, Jr. nor his attorney were apprised of the meeting and weren't in attendance.

Chief Feola also said that extra pay details and overtime, which the contract reads will be distributed evenly, offered to regular officers first and assigned by the chief, also leaves his son at an unfair disadvantage.

"I don't see how they (Selectmen) can suddenly dispense with the collective bargaining agreement," he said.

Selectmen will meet this week, although a meeting wasn't regularly scheduled, to discuss the matter of the new arrest.

School Board Endorses METCO Plan

The School Committee unanimously voted to sign a revised signature sheet approving the program and fiscal data information required by the State Board of Education on Cohasset's Metco proposal. Metco coordinator Thelma Burns also signed the agreement.

The Committee and the state Board had been at a standoff concerning requirements for statistical, financial and programmatic reports since last May. The Committee at that time had returned the proposal signed, but with the deletion of the phrase "that it (the Committee) will comply with the Department's request for statistical, financial, or programmatic reports." The new signature sheet will include the phrase previously deleted.

Three committee members met with officials from the Bureau of Equal Education Opportunity last week, to discuss and better define the nature of the requested reports. Committee member Diana Kornet, spokesman for the visiting members, said they were satisfied with EEO's explanation of the reports and recommended that the Committee sign the clean signature sheet.

Oldest Drama Club Still Young

By Judith Epstein

The Cohasset Drama Club is the oldest continuing drama club in the country and is now in its 59th year.

Ironically, Club President Ron Massa, a member for two years, assumed leadership for the reknowned troupe after just three months membership. "I was asked to try out for "The Hound of the Baskervilles." Massa recalls, and he wound up with the lead — Sir Henry Baskerville, himself. He was reelected president again this year, and is having the time of his life.

The Drama Club's productions are primarily straight dramatics, Massa reports, as the last musical "Where's Charlie" was performed in 1961. "It's our tradition to do usually two comedies and one drama," he said of the three yearly productions. Massa finds that the Drama Club's selections, which are painstakingly culled out by the play selection committee from literally thousands of plays, blend nicely with other area drama companies, such as the musically-minded Hingham Civic Theatre and the Duxbury Bay Players.

Tradition is one of the names of this drama club's game, for during the past 58

The Singles Mingle

By Ann Fogg

The evening, a forum of South Shore Singles, was a study in paradox. From the first tentative get-acquainted efforts over wine and cheese through the circle discussion to a wrap-up at a local tavern, we found contradictions to accepted views of life.

Recently organized in this area through the Social Action arm of Universalist-Unitarian Churches, South Shore Singles provides for the never-married, separated, divorced and widowed of all faiths a situation in which to meet people and share problems and insights.

The twice-a-month Forum meets on Fridays in area church halls and discusses some aspect of the life of a single person. It also serves as an information instrument for singles retreats and socializing.

First Parish in Norwell became involved after the Social Action Commission sponsored an open meeting with the Rev. Marjorie Sams, minister of the First Unitarian Church in Belmont and author of 'Living Through Your Divorce'. The Rev. Richard Fewkes credits the Rev. Donald Marshall, who started a group in Attleboro, for help with the South Shore group.

According to Rev. Marshall, the churches donate their space as a community service for what they see as a deep human need.

This singles group is much less threatening to many than a singles bar. It differs in focus from another major singles group which advertises as a dating center. Neither is it limited to single parents. Instead, its goal is acceptance, even affirmation of the single state.

The meeting one evening was in Norwell. There are two in August, on the 10th and the 24th, in Weymouth. Some three dozen people drove from Quincy, Hingham, Bridgewater, Marshfield, Scituate, Cohasset and other area towns. At 7:30, first arrivals were setting out cheese and crackers and opening jugs of wine and bottles of cranberry juice and ginger ale.

Entrance was the hardest. People wandered in looking uncertain, paid a $2 donation, picked up the current newsletter, wrote out a name tag numbered one to four and helped themselves to refreshments. According to their shyness, they looked for a conversation to join or a way to strike up a conversation.

A woman was volubly holding forth, I joined the four or five around her. She was talking of adjustment to her single state and successes so far, her job, her new apartment, a recent singles weekend at Ferry Beach in Maine. She tumbled on, the hurt showing under the bravery.

"My husband says there's never been a divorce in his family. It's all right for him to do all those outrageous things, but a divorce is embarrassing!" she said.

"The weekend at Ferry Beach was wonderful. Nice people, busy with workshops and discussions."

Yet, recalling religious education camps she'd attended several years ago, she thought people had been less up tight about themselves and their sexuality there than at Ferry Beach.

The first paradox emerged. People can be more open when it's less important to them, when they haven't gone somewhere for the express purpose of discussing it."

Another young woman stood silent behind the group. Someone commented on the intricately tooled leather bag over her shoulder. "I made it," she burst. Everyone wanted to know how. She told us how she cut it from cowhide, shaped, stitched and tooled it.

Someone called to bring chairs to a circle.

Laurie and Jean, two designated as leaders suggested that instead of breaking into smaller groups we stay in one group for discussion. We introduced ourselves by first name and town. Laurie offered the topic, — positive aspects of being single.

Laurie said she realized, that when you're

Complains About Youths

Robert Salvador of Atlantic Avenue appeared before Selectmen once again to complain of youths parking and drinking illegally in front of his home near Black Rock Beach.

Salvador threatened to take the matter to court, as he feels that the problem is increasing and becoming a situation which police can't enforce. "It is a personal matter of health at this point," Salvador said, claiming that the noise from the crowds that assemble along the Cohasset/Hull seawall deprive him of his sleep and that he has had to turn to tranquilizers for relief.

Police Chief Randolph Feola was called to the meeting to comment on the ability to patrol the area effectively. "We've been locking them up for drinking," Feola said and cited several instances in which youths were brought to court for public drinking.

Salvador said that police enforcement hasn't been adequate enough and related an incident when drinking youths were bypassed and told only to move their parked cars. He was told later that Sgt. Richard Barrow, the officer on patrol, said the youths were over the town line in Hull and therefore out of his jurisdiction.

Chief Feola said, "Public drinking involves everybody. The younger people are so used to going to the beaches and drinking outside. We are doing the best we can." The problem at Black Rock Beach is not unique in town, he stressed, and enumerated other areas, especially in the Beechwood area, where he finds similar activities. He said also that the department would step up their patrol of the trouble areas.

A New Wrinkle

Frank England, vice chairman and clairvoyent in residence of the School Committee, predicted Monday night that the board won't support hiring of a health specialist, a new and board-approved position Supt. John Maloney is now in the process of filling.

England's announcement came after the position had been discussed at length on three occasions and voted affirmatively twice during budgeting last winter. The forecast wasn't supported by a committee vote. We wonder, in fact, where and how England "seemed to know" support would exist from enough committee members to kill the position. The Mariner doesn't remember any public negative rumblings about it, nor does the other press, nor does the Superintendent.

Apart from the audacity of England's remarks, we question their legality. Resident and faithful meeting-goer Mary O'Brien was appalled to think that the School Committee would disregard their own votes, and equally horrified to imagine the telephone conversations, and tete-a-tetes that must have gone on around town, for England to have arrived at his thumbs-down consensus.

So are we. Perhaps a call to Norfolk County District Attorney Delahunt's office would determine the validity of England's soothsaying. Perhaps a name could be applied to his proposition — like violation of the open meeting law, for starters.

Unofficial terms such as distrust, intimidation and discouragement might also be tried on for size.

Maloney will continue his search for a health specialist, to coordinate a program for the school system, per the standing committee vote, despite England's considerate advice not to "waste" his time.

And supposing Maloney heeded England's sage advice? Why, the board would probably axe him, too, for not doing his job. What's needed, it seems, is a full committee to vote on a reconsideration of the position. England, having voted negatively couldn't move for reconsideration, and the rest of the board didn't feel it was right until they meet in toto — and that may not happen until September some time.

Whether the interviewing and recommendation process will have been for naught, whether a potential health specialist for the schools will be disapointed by being voted down, whether future votes will be discarded like a worn dishrag remains to be seen.

The School Committee is always good for a new wrinkle.

Around Town Hall

TRESPASSING CASE

At a Quincy Court meeting last week, attorneys for Selectmen and William Figueiredo, agreed to a civil court hearing for charges of trespassing by Figueiredo and illegal mooring in Bailey's creek by the town, respectively. The Superior Court date to obtain a restraining order which would prevent Figueiredo from mooring in portions of the creek, which he claims he owns, was cancelled and will be handled in conjunction with the trespassing charges. Selectman Clark indicated that the case could become complicated and may go before a Master hearing.

COMMUNITY CENTER

The Community Center envisions growth at Tilden Park, the property lying between the Center and the post office, and has expressed interest in acquiring that land. "The Center has seen a rebirth over the past year, and the infusion of capital and renewed interest is enabling us to restore and refurbish the building to serve the needs of the community," a letter from the board of directors stated. The Tilden Park land could further enrich the Center, the letter said.

ALLOCATION OFFICER

Donald Ainslie has been appointed the gasoline allocation officer for the town and will be in communication with area dispatchers.

WHEELRIGHT PARK

After all the discussion and planning, the washed sand treatment at the riding ring at Wheelright Park has still left a dusty situation, riders are chagrined to admit. The oiling process, which has checked out with the town Water Department and DEQE but which has not yet been conducted, is troubling nearby neighbors who are afraid of runoff contamination. For the time being riders are wetting down the area well, and will be required to take extra precautions on July 28 at their next horse show there.

LETTER OF APPROVAL

Selectmen agreed to send letter to Senator Allen McKinnon supporting the bill concerning the assessment of bats which is now in its third reading in the Mass. Senate, to Gov. King in support of the bottle bill, and to the president of the Harbor Study Committee Charles Fink for his work in the awarding of the $18,000 CZM harbor assistance grant.

SEEPAGE FIXED

Lombardi Washed Sand and Gravel Corporation has embarked on a $15,000 project to repair the seepage of water through the abuttments of the old bridge at the Bound Brook control structure on Beechwood Street. According to Water Superintendent Edwin Pratt the bridge, which was built several hundred years ago of lode, stone and cribbing has given way.

The purpose of the control structure, to maintain levels of water in Lily Pond, was prohibited by the seepage. The abuttments are being repaired with an imperviable cut-off trench with rip rap.

BOARD OF HEALTH

The Board of Health will meet on August 15 at 8:30 p.m. with Selectmen to appoint a Board of Health member. Applications will be received until Aug. 10 and then they will be rejuvenated by the board at their Aug. 13 meeting before the appointment meeting.

Pratt Leaves Post

Glenn Pratt has resigned from the Planning Board to prevent more conflict of interest allegations over his involvement as a local developer.

Pratt, a former board chairman, served three years of a five year term. He said recently that his involvement with 79 Atlantic Trust, a development project which he owns with Wayne Sawchuk, also a former board chairman, and Douglas Purdy would hurt the Planning Board.

After March allegations by Eric Pearson, owner of Highway Motor Sales, that Pratt, was in conflict because of the Planning Board's consideration of the Atlantic Avenlue property, the charge was referred to Selectmen, Town Counsel J. Blake Thaxter and finally Norfolk District Attorney William Delahunt.

Delahunt ruled in April that Pratt was not in violation of the conflict of interest law because members of the Planning Board were classified by the town as "special municipal employees," which exempts them from portion of the conflict law.

Selectmen Probe Viability Of Sportsman's Club

Whether or not the Sportsman's Club on Route 3A is still a viable organization remained a moot question after Selectmen questioned Joseph Rosano, club president, last week.

A 1950's Town Meeting had voted to place the three-room clubhouse on town land, and allowed the acreage behind that building, as rental property for the club. Since that time taxes and insurance have been paid on the clubhouse. Yet residents have been questioning the ongoing nature of the club, Selectman said, and wondering whether the property is being used as a private home.

Rosano had signed for the registered letter Selectmen sent the club questioning any ongoing club activities. Rosano and his son Joseph Jr. informed the Selectmen that although membership had dwindled to five people, the club was still in existence. Rosano Jr. said he was the club custodian and stayed at the house part of the year for maintenance purposes.

Rosano presented a sheet with names of existing officers from 1975, many of whom, including the secretary and vice president, have since passed away. This was the last official document from the club that Rosano could present, although his son contended that the club had met three weeks before and continue to meet on occasion.

Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark doubted the club's existence on a number of counts. "We're not allowed to make a lease for over five years, and your lease has never been renewed that I know of," he said. He also noted that if consistent meeting minutes and secretary's reports weren't kept, the club couldn't be legally considered an ongoing organization.

Rosano Jr. questioned whether official reports were necessary to keep the club going. He was uncertain about the club's financial status and whether it was incorporated.

Selectmen said they wanted a secretary and treasurer's report, as well as a financial statement.

"We're being faced with either renewing the lease or discontinuing it," Selectmen Henry Ainslie said. "The original lease isn't worth anything now."

Older & Better

By Lois Martin

If you remember, several months ago I mentioned I'd be attending my 25th high school reunion this summer.

Well I did, along with about half my classmates from Ellsworth High School. We rallied at the Alamoose Lodge beside a quiet lake in Orland, Maine.

And I heartily recommend it. It'll do you a world of good to attend your 25th reunion. It's far better than your fifth or 10th, even 20th. Apparently by the time we reach this ripe old age, we achieve a no-nonsense perspective. People don't care if we've made it big or not at all. They're simply delighted to see you 'cause you were part of The Class.

Time was, in earlier reunions, a few would drop names or tell whopping tales of various successes. No more. At our age we're tickled to death just to reminisce. We thought we were wonderful as we were remembered.

The gathering was like that of a family that had been apart too long. We who hadn't seen one another in 25 years based our friendship on a shared English class or a chemistry partnership. Those days we viewed as impressive. Nothing since then carried much weight.

We got to the reunion early. Stanley Richmond's wife had arranged the flowers. Mildred Young Davis had spread endless scrapbooks of Class of '54 achievements on the center table. And Marlene Leavitt Sprague, always the most reliable, had mimeographed names, addresses and occupations of graduates.

We had to help one another out with faces that appeared in the doorway, using the yearbook as a resource. There were moments I feared I'd greet a husband as a fellow classmate when it was his wife who'd graduated with us. But that wasn't a problem. We've all seemingly married good sports. The mates that accompanied class members were as receptive to a warm hug and gladsome greeting as the rest of us.

We couldn't fathom that we had children as old as they are. We're too young for that. We bounding, boundless friends didn't believe that gray hair qualified us to have college graduates or grandchildren. We were, for that one night, still the same old crowd, gossiping about our teachers, speaking fondly of the janitor, and singing the school song . . . "Let's give a cheer for old Ellsworth High."

Two young men, soon to be freshmen at MHS, stood outside a door peeking in. What they viewed as a nursing home aggregation was actually the Class of '54 doing the bunny hop, or something close to it.

They were in awe. We ignored them. What did these young saplings know of tall oaks, after all. They couldn't understand how people who hadn't seen one another or corresponded for years could regather with such gusto.

We ceaselessly marveled at how good we all looked, better really than in 1954. I don't know the average belt size of the group. Certainly it's more generous than it used to be. But that's probably compensation for having less hair.

Our group has not ruled the world. From our gathering there's been no eminent physician, philosopher, politician. But it isn't what you are; it's what you think you are. And at the reunion, we thought we were magnificent. We were on common ground. We'd struck out into the world, sprained our ankles on the rickety ladder of success but made it back together to celebrate survival.

Lewie Merchant, for example, grinned from the outset of the evening to who knows when. Ernie Tracy danced until our one musician, Ben Adams, blew a fuse on his electric organ affair.

I noticed a certain sadness in the evening's end. I'm not sure why. Perhaps it's because we don't know when we'll see one another again to enjoy the uncommon, unguarded acceptance. But there surely are withdrawal pains in leaving old friends.

Where else could six women sing "Side by Side," by popular request without getting booed? Who else would listen to endless hours about our state championship basketball team? The friendship and school spirit of '54 are obviously timeless.

And it's funny. We'd watched middle-aged strangers come in the door at 6:30 that evening. But we saw them as the youthful faces in the yearbook. And that, by the by, is how we'll remember the old gang, by choice.

Labor Problem May Delay HUD Money

Labor allegations against Schofield, Inc., contractor for the town's dam and reservoir project, may hold up Cohasset's final payment from the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

According to a letter from Frederick Aufiero of SEA Consultants to Edwin Pratt, Superintendent of the Water Department, the Department of Labor has indicated that Schofield was found to have falsified payroll records and did not pay proper overtime rates in accordance with the Davis-Bacon Act and the Fair Labor Practices Act. Other charges were also made against Schofield concerning labor practices on the project, Aufiero stated.

The Department of Labor claims that Schofield owes $124,000 in unpaid labor costs, the letter continued.

HUD accountant Paul Rosenstein said $99,400 is being withheld from the town primarily because the town hasn't completed its final audit, and that Arthur Tonemi, also of HUD, recommended the final audit be completed before confronting whether Schofield's labor problems will continue to hold up the final HUD payment to the town, it was noted.

The letter pointed out the possibility that HUD could ask the town for an additional $25,000 in addition to the $99,400 already withheld to cover the $124,000 in labor under payment by Schofield.

Pratt suggested last week that the town could go after Schofield's bonding company to cover the $124,000 underpayment to relieve Cohasset of the responsibility.

Aufiero said Schofield has 30 days to respond to the charges, and if he fails to respond at the end of that period then the Labor Department would request that funds be transferred from HUD to the Labor Department for disbursement to those employees who were underpaid.

Aufiero said that if this were the case, Humphreys had indicated he would seek to obtain an injunction to stop the transfer of funds.

Quite A Fall

Not quite synchronized with Skylab's fall to earth, a 300 foot nylon aerial advertising sign floated down from the skies to Cohasset after it broke loose from its mother airplane.

The giant kite tail landed atop a tall tree on Spring Street, so far up, in fact, that it required the Brockton Edison crew's 50 foot ladder to retrieve it.

All in a day's work.

School Board May Nix Health Teacher

Despite two School Committee votes last winter to hire a Health Education teacher at a salary of $14,000 the Committee indicated last night that they would not support the position.

Committee Vice-Chairman told Superintendent John Maloney, who is responsible for screening health specialist applicants, that the Committee would vote against the hiring of the teacher, and that there was no sense in wasting time going through the interviewing process.

"There's no sense putting the cart before the horse. We should have a program made up first," England said.

Maloney reminded England that he had voted against the new position and a Committee member who had voted in the affirmative must make a motion for reconsideration before a new vote could be taken. Although Committee member Martha Gjesteby was willing to make the motion, the Committee decided to wait until all members were present, as Chairman John Langmaid was on vacation and member Diana Kornet had left the meeting early.

Maloney stressed the need for uniform standards and goals in the area of health education. The person he was looking for, he said, would be a health specialist who would help to develop a program for the entire school system, who could assist teachers, and unify and eliminate overlapping of sporadic health instruction.

Resident Mary O'Brien was vehemently opposed to the Committee's reversal. "I always thought the School Committee would accept a vote of the committee regardless of personal feelings for the sake of the children," she said.

She said she was appalled and thought it a disgrace that decisions were apparently being made outside meetings, deciding to axe the position. Committee member Irene Brown agreed, and charged that England "seemed to know" he had enough votes to block the position.

England responded that he wanted to make sure the practical thing would be done and noted that the position was now under the scrutiny of a new committee.

Superintendent Maloney remained uncertain whether he should continue to interview applicants for the job, as the Committee will not vote on the matter until next month.

Greenhouse Restaurant Sold

The Greenhouse Restaurant, as well as surrounding stores, has been sold to New Cohasset Properties for $565,000.

Robert Swain of North Scituate of New Cohasset Properties is the president and stockholder of the restaurant. Carmine Carlucci of Quincy will be general manager of the restaurant, specializing in French cuisine. Carlucci was the former chef and caterer of the Log and Line restaurant on Ripley Road.

Swain is president of Crown Investment Group, which manages Cushing Plaza locally and several other properties in Massachusetts. The Greenhouse, originally owned and developed by Robert Hawker, will retain its name and hours, Swain said.

Youth Tennis Clinic On Tap Friday

The Youth Tennis Foundation of New England (YTFNE) will conduct a Tennis Clinic for youngsters and adults Friday, July 27, on the Miliken Field courts in Cohasset, from 10 to 11 a.m. for ages 8-13 and 11 to 12 noon for 14 and older.

The clinics are free and are conducted by Ed Serues, the highly respected tennis coach at Amherst College. Serues is active within the United States Professional Tennis Association (USPTA), and the New England Professional Tennis Association (NEPTA). The National and regional organizations are dedicated to quality tennis instruction for everyone.

For more information, the Recreation Department, at 383-6791.

Board Of Appeals Denies Special Permit

The Board of Appeals has denied a Special Permit for the conversion of Thomas and Ruth Payne's Sohier Street home into four apartments.

The Board wasn't satisfied that the existing disposal system could support four separate households, nor were off-street parking provisions satisfactory, they indicated.

The Payne's had failed to apply for a required variance for one of the apartments which would be located entirely above the second floor.

By Joan Pinkham

Do you sometimes get the feeling not everyone is too concerned with curbing their lifestyle just because of a little old recession? Consider Athos Pratesi's customers who flock to his New York store to pick up a few linens, leaving behind an order for seldom less than $2,000. Towels, table linens and sheets for the likes of Johnny Carson, the Rockefellers and Frank Sinatra are personally designed. But no one has topped the order placed by Saudi Arabian royalty for an 18-bedroom yacht. The bill came to $600,000. For those of us who take pleasure in the more simple things in life, how about a walk in the woods, stopping along the way to visit a favorite blueberry patch. Margaret Ward's muffins, hot out of the oven, doesn't carry a high price tag, but is a nice way to indulge your family.

BLUEBERRY MUFFINS

Preheat oven to 375. Makes 12 muffins.

1 c. blueberries
1/4 c. softened butter or margarine
1 3/4 c. flour — use 1 tsp. for berries
2 1/2 tsp. baking powder
1/4 tsp. salt
1/2 c. sugar
1 egg
1/2 c. milk$
1/4 c. sugar
1/4 tsp. lemon rind

Sift dry ingredients into mixer bowl. Add margarine. Mix at low speed. Add unbeaten egg and milk. Beat 2 min. Remove from mixer. Fold in floured blueberries. Spoon into muffin tins and sprinkle top of each muffin with sugar. Bake for 25 minutes.

Or, we can really live it up as they did in Kitchener, Ontario with an "eggstravaganza." The recipe for the omelet made to celebrate Kitchener's 125th anniversary called for 11,000 eggs. The special griddle was 10 by 30 ft. and served with the omelet was 800 lbs. of sausages.

"Simplify, simplify," Thoreau advised. Certainly fashionable shops and noisy celebrations played no part in the rich enjoyment he found in the woods and along the shore sof Walden Pond. I have a feeling a dessert such as this was not exactly this philosopher's cup of tea. However, those of us who have sampled this summery dish thought it perfectly delicious. Jeanne FitzGerald is on the staff of the Steeple School and this recipe from their annual recipe exchange is called

LEMON LIME COOLER

2/3 c. of sugar
1 c. evaporated milk
1 small lemon jello
1 small lime jello
1 can crushed pineapple, drained
2 c. cold water
2 c. boiling water
1 pkg. vanilla wafers

Line a 13x9x2" pan with vanilla wafers rolled fairly fine. Save little of crumbs for topping. Make jello according to directions. Use pineapple juice instead of all cold water. Chill till nearly set. Beat until foamy. Whip chilled evaporated milk until it resembles whipped cream. Gradually add 2/3 c. sugar to milk. Fold in crushed pineapple. Pour over crumbs. Sprinkle remaining crumbs on top. Refrigerate til firm.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Ellis and Mr. and Mrs. Roger Porter entertained a large gathering of friends at an overnight party held at Bassings Beach last Friday. The gala party was held in honor of Ellis and Porter's recent victory in men's 45 and over invitational doubles tournament at Whispering Falls, Maine.

The sanctioned tournament is held annually in conjunction with the Whispering Falls Grange Fair. The Ellises were double celebrants at the Bassings Beach affair, as Mrs. Ellis (Jane) has also won first prize in the Fair's bake-off contest for her baked beans.

Tom Hamilton, vice president of the Gallery of Homes of the South Shore's Cohasset office, Dean & Hamilton, Inc., recently spent two days at an All-Advertising Seminar presented by the advertising department of the Gallery of Homes. Over 70 Gallery of Homes brokers, advertising directors, and representatives from member ad agencies attended the seminar held at the Atlanta Hilton in Atlanta, Ga.

Tom Hamilton

Games and activities at the party were coordinated by Mr. Ellis with bottle raising, marathon sitting, charades and frisbee-throwing being the most popular events.

Porter conducted a tennis clinic for the children, while Robert Sweeney of Elm Street, Cohasset, provided sailing and fly-casting instruction.

Mary Kennedy of Stevens Lane, Cohasset, won the award for the most original beach outfit for her peach Georgette and Cat's Eye sandals, while the Wendell Driscolls, of Fargo, North Dakota, garnered the prize for the guests travelling the longest distance to attend.

Beth Gabaree of, 486 Jerusalem Road, Coh. majoring in Computer Science Engineering Technology, has been named to the Dean's List at Wentworth Institute for the second semester. A senior, she is majoring in Computer Science Engineering Technoloby.

David Campbell of Cohasset was recently appointed manager, Group Department of the Hobbs Brook Agency, Inc., a subsidiary of Arkwright-Boston Manufacturers Mutual Insurance Co. based in Waltham. A native of Beverly Farms, Campbell attended Colby College and earned a BSBA degree in marketing from Babson College. Before joining the Hobbs Brook Agency, he served assistant vice president of William M. Mercer, Inc.

Two Cohasset residents were awarded bachelor's degrees at Ithaca College's 84th commencement exercises. They are: James Allen Hagler Jr., Bachelor of Arts in History, son of Professor and Mrs. James Hagler of North Main Street; and Christopher Greenman, Bachelor of Science in Accounting, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Greenman of Stoneleigh Lane. Hagler is a graduate of the Lawrenceville School and Greenman of Northfield Mount Hermon.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jordan of Atlantic Avenue attended the gala opening of the Water Park at the New England Aquarium. The dedication of Water Park was an early present for Boston's 350th birthday, and coincided with the 10th anniversary of the Aquarium. A magnificent statue of eight leaping bronze dolphins, sculpted and donated by Mrs. Katherine Lane Weems, was the highlight of the evening.

PADDLE POWER works just fine for, from left, Tracy Fitzpatrick, Sherry Winn and Nora Leary propelling their raft about the Harbor.

Commander and Mrs. Tyrone G. Martin of Pond Street, and Mrs. Frank Neer Jr. with her daughters Betsy and Susan, enjoyed Navy Night at Pops.

Mrs. Carl Gustafson of Beechwood Street was recently named to the board of directors of the Protestant Social Service Bureau, a Quincy-based agency service for the South Shore communities with adoption and family counseling services.

A luncheon and fashion show will be held at Hugo's on August 1, sponsored by the Scituate Historical Society to raise money to purchase the Old Oaken Bucket homestead. Charles Sumner of Newbury Street will present his fall fashions.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Nisula of North Palm Beach, Fla., formerly of Sankey Road, cited the lethargy of Cohasset residents in not making the quorum during the June 26 town meeting. In the 25 years the Nisulas were residents of Cohasset, they never missed a town meeting or failed to vote in the primaries. Their good citizenship will be missed.

State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray of Margin Street was at the end of a practical joke by her fellow legislators. As the voting board at the House lit up red, meaning no votes for her bill to allow Hull to rent its aquarium to Harvard, everyone laughed. The Majority leader switched to green as he declared: "I release you all," and Mary Jeanette was happy, the bill would move to the Senate for approval.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis A. Evans of 31 Fairoaks Lane announce the marriage of their daughter, Priscilla Michelle, to Stephen Dennis Sullivan. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Sullivan of Quincy.

The ceremony took place June 9 at St. Anthony's Church. The Rev. John Keohane officiated. A garden reception followed at the home of the bride's parents.

Mrs. Jane Coff of North Scituate, sister of the bride, was the matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Anne McMenamy of Quincy, sister of the bride; Rosemary O'Connell of Scituate, sister of the bride, and Ellen Sullivan of Quincy, sister of the bridegroom.

Eugene Sullivan was the best man. Ushers were Thomas Sullivan and Kevin McCarthy, both of Quincy, and Lawrence Evans of Cohasset.

The bride is a graduate of Archbishop Williams High School and attended Providence College. She is now with the Stop & Shop Co.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Archbisnop Williams and Suffolk University. He is with the New England Merchants Bank.

The couple is now living in Quincy.

Drama Club

years, 175 of the most popular of all plays have been presented on the Town Hall stage. Although Massa admits the old auditorium "is terrible", he finds that its still existent charm and nostalgic qualities are a big attraction.

As it is, a well publicized show will draw 150 people a night during their three night stands per play, filling half the hall in the delapidated (and collapsible) seats. If and when the Town Hall undergoes the proposed refurbishing, which would reduce the size of the auditorium considerable, Massa quipped, "Then we'll play to a full house."

There's a lot of memories attached to the old stage, Massa was quick to add. Did you know that the stage was once graced with the acting talents of Humphrey Bogart, or that Thornton Wilder first produced his famous play "Our Town", right here in our town? Massa asked. All true.

Another important term, marking the Drama's Club general philosophy, is — fun. Aside from the play, the club hosts beach parties, social gatherings, play readings, get-togethers, theater parties and discount theatre tickets — offering something for everyone. But most of all, Massa stresses, the club offers just plain fun.

If you can act, sing, dance, direct, paint scenery, pull curtains, gather props, or just plain breathe, Massa insists, you qualify to join, contribute, have fun and meet some nice people. And you don't have to be a Cohasset resident either, he said. Half of the club membership is derived from Scituate alone, as well as from 7 or 8 other communities.

Massa explained the requirements of the current 120 person membership. Active membership included mandatory participation in at least one major production or play reading during the season. Anyone wishing to support the club financially and attend the plays but who don't wish to be involved otherwise may join as a patron member.

"Membership runs the gamut," Massa said. The range of ages of people in the club runs from 16 to 86. Theatrical experience runs the gamut, as well, from the totally inexperienced novice, as Massa once was, to those who have professional acting experience. Name all the trades in between, and you find those among the members, too.

"The uniting force behind this group of solid, semi-solid and liquid citizens is producing three plays per season, three performances per play, plus several play readings," reads an old publicity brochure. It's still apt, and Massa is urging an even greater junior membership to further complement the growing membership.

Massa extended his thanks to the townspeople and to the local merchants for their generous contributions to the Club. Proceeds which are garnered from advertising, membership dues and from admissions, go, of course, toward the next production, the special events, and buying of costumes and wardrobes. (Costumes, by the way are stored at the Historical Society's Gown Museum, as well as in the locker room in the celler of the Town Hall.)

So, next time you see the polished cast delivering their lines (seemingly) flawlessly from atop the stage, bear in mind that rehearsal for the event was five or six weeks in the making, and rest assured, also, that they had a ball doing it.

Metco

"Nothing new is being asked for," Kornet said. "The statistical reports will be less complicated this year." Financial reports are required at the middle and end of the fiscal year, she said, and programmatic reports require nothing more than what Metco Coordinator Thelma Burns submitted under separate cover in May.

"We are the last town to sign the agreement," Kornet pointed out. Rockland, another town wary about assigning signatures to their proposal, finally signed last Tuesday, she said.

"Technically we shouldn't be considered," Kornet remarked, as most communities' proposals have already been reviewed and accepted by the state Board. "However, the committee will meet again August 28," she said, to review Cohasset's late proposal.

The Committee also discussed the legislation now being considered by a sub-committee that would give Metco, Inc. supervision of the local coordinators. "There is little chance of the bill passing this year," Kornet reported. It was further noted that EEO, the State Department of Education and school committees in general were not in favor of the bill.

Superintendent John Maloney noted one other Metco requirement that had changed within the past year — that money left over at the end of the fiscal year must be returned rather than used at the discretion of the communities. Kornet replied that though technically the money must be returned, in anticipation of money for the new year which arrives in October, the remainder may be used for expenses at the very beginning of the year.

Wunschel To Retire

By Virginia Burbank

Mr. Frank Wunschel, one of the most highly respected English teachers at Cohasset High School, has decided to retire after twenty-four years of service to the children of our town.

He has also served diligently in many capacities throughout the years: as social studies teacher, as chairman of the Social Studies Department, and as assistant principal of the high school. It is obvious to us who have worked with him that Wunschel has maintained the highest standards in his teaching and has been a real example to many of the newer teachers.

His friend and colleague, Doris Lahage, Chairman of the business department at the high school, remembers Frank as assistant principal a few years back: "Mr. Wunschel as assistant principal brought to the position the best qualities of an educator, an administrator, and a disciplinarian; he was unexcelled."

John Leary, our C.T.A. President, had much to say about Wunschel's contributions to our school system: "Mr. Wunschel's contributions have been noteworthy and frequently made at great personal sacrifice. He has never been satisfied with mediocrity from his students and always taxed his own abilities and time in order to insure that his students would profit from his efforts. Mr. Wunschel has always demonstrated outstanding professionalism, and we in the Association are proud to have had him among us. We truly regret his decision to retire."

There are many of us who hold Frank in the highest esteem. His friend, Ms. Patricia Coultrip, sees Frank as "well-liked, reliable, and a man with a keen sense of humor." Ms. Frances Cronin, also a fellow English teacher, remarked: "Frank Wunschel is a totally professional and ethical teacher who has a gentle and sincere concern for his students beneath his firmness, and a strong sense of obligation to them as well. His teaching is enriched by his wealth of experience in the theater, books, and travel."

When I spoke to Laura Leonard, a recently-retired English teacher who knew Frank well, she focused right on Wunschel's love for literature and the remarkable way he was able to transfer this love for reading to his students.

This, of course, is what we all strive for in the classroom, but very few of us have been as successful at it as Wunschel. Perhaps Frank will drop in from time to time to give us a few of his secrets. We all love Frank, and we'll miss him.

Final Fate Of A Bluefin

This (circa) 700 pound bluefin tuna fish was harpooned off Stellwagon Bank and brought into Green Harbor for processing. So, consider step one the catch.

Head fishcutter Ted Gaglis removes the head and entrails with a special power cutter. That done, about 80 per cent of the fish will be shipped to Japan where bluefin is considered a great delicacy. It is eaten uncooked.

Here Bob Brooking inspects the fish tag which records data for the Division of Marine Fisheries. He is also checking the fish's temperature by inserting a thermometer in the beast.

Gutted and ready for market, the bluefin is packed in ice (never frozen) before being shipped to Logan Airport and flown to Japan. Most fish reach Japan 48 hours after being caught. And the price for the fisherman' Well, t'aint bad, ranging from a low of .85 cents to a high of $2.25 per pound for "dressed weight."

Singles

single you have control over your own goals. I remembered, and said I'd taken years to discover any assets of singleness. Laurie suggested the group could be a shortcut. She asked what I'd discovered. "Independence!" I said. "The freedom to do as I please, when I please."

Others agreed. Being single gives you the freedom to have peanut butter sandwiches for dinner if you feel like it, to buy an extravagant item. Someone else thought freedom should be a part of marriage. But many said it hadn't been for them.

Another woman said independence isn't an asset if you're single and a parent. "You still have to meet the kids' demands. But you need an adult to talk to, at breakfast, at supper."

Someone raised the question whether a single person's goals would differ whether ever married. It was not resolved. One woman spoke of never-marrieds who led fulfilled lives. Another described an architect who looked successful but hated her lonely apartment.

Another paradox: everyone agreed singles and marrieds both think the others lead great lives. The singles envy the security and companionship of marriage. The marrieds look, longingly at the freedom and independence of the single life.

We began searching for reasonable goals for the single person. For many the goal is some degree of self-sufficiency. One man said his wife taught him to broil steak before they split up. Now, he just broils, never fries or bakes. For another it was paying bills. There was some sharing of information about which mate kept house, which relocated. Contrary to the stereotype, some men kept the house, the woman moved out.

The man who broils steak offered the next paradox to the effect marriage, which we expect will maintain a high degree of passion from courting until death do us part, is actually an inhibiting relationship. He illustrated the point.

Another said his wife underestimated what he could do on his own. He developed far more in cooking, art, literature and theater than in marriage.

For others the goal is establishing identity when you're no longer part of a pair. An articulate woman was painting during divorce. "The paintings hang on the wall now," she said, "with no name on them."

The identity problem seemed more acute for women who think of themselves as Mrs. John Smith rather than Jane Smith. "My wife thought of herself as Chuck's wife," said a man. "No one should do that."

Several women pointed out with some anger, that for years women have been raised to submerge in another's identity.

The conversation returned to self-sufficiency.

One woman said after six months it's a daily struggle and a major goal. Another said after five years it's no longer a problem. A third, still single, said living alone is something you get used to. "You realize you have to do everything, get the car fixed, hassle with the phone company, pay the bills, shop for food. There's only you to do it." Another learned to look at her cup as half full, not half empty.

At this point came the ultimate paradox: "It's only when you achieve your goal of independence that you realize you don't depend on other people for companionship, that you can really enjoy them as companions."

Near 10, the meeting broke up. People returned the chairs to the rack, packed up the wine and cheese and made arrangement to meet elsewhere. "No matter how positive the topic is," said Jean, "some have problems, bitterness, pain and anger that needs to come out. We need to deal with that, not dwell on it."

I went home with the feeling some had faced themselves, their situation, their feelings, their problems, discovered some goals, some truths. Perhaps another positive aspect of being single is the impetus to do this.

Gospel Singers Concert

The Mansion Heirs, a gospel singing group from the Evangelical United Methodist Church of East Wareham, will present a concert of Southern-style music in the Community Church of the Nazarene, Jerusalem Road, North Cohasset, on Sunday, July 29, at 11 a.m. They will also sing during the Sunday School hour at 10.

The ensemble uses piano, bass, guitar and drums. Members are all from one family: Grace Perry and Tom Perry, oldest and youngest of 12 children; Paul and Ruth (Perry) Lombard; John Perry and Bob Sousa. They are joined by the Lombard children, Kristi, Tammy and Brian and another sister, Faith (Perry) Haraala.

The Mansion Heirs have given concerts throughout New England and recently took all-round honors in a Gospel Musical Festival in Pennsylvania. They have recently cut a second record of old-time gospel favorites.

After the Morning Services there will be a pot-luck picnic at the church, near the Route 228 intersection and the Hingham-Hull-Cohasset town line.

The new congregation began services this month in Pope Memorial Church where United Methodist services were formerly held. The Pastor is the Rev. J. Scott Newell Jr., of North Weymouth, phone 338-8429.

Regular services are held Sundays at 10 and 11 a.m.; Vespers at 6 p.m. and Wednesday Prayer and Bible Study at 7 p.m.

Cohasset Wins Award For Safety

The American Automobile Association has presented Scituate, Cohasset and Norwell with national awards for no pedestrian fatalities.

The special plaques were awarded to Scituate Chief of Police Walter T. Driscoll Jr., Cohasset Chief of Police Randolph A. Feola and Norwell Chief of Police Richard Joseph by Richard W. Hoover, Safety Director for Mass. Division AAA.

Scituate's award is for no pedestrian fatalities for three consecutive years (1975-1977).

Cohasset's award is for no pedestrian fatalities in 1976 and 1977.

Norwell's award is for no pedestrian fatalities in 1977.

These awards are part of AAA's nationwide program to give recognition to local officials who are working toward greater pedestrian safety. Started in 1937, AAA's Pedestrian Safety Program has helped to reduce pedestrian deaths by 45 per cent.

Busy Time For Sculptor- Farmer White

By Karen Bartow

Richardson White is busy at this time of year. He's a farmer and he's got 25 acres of hay to cut at Holly Hill Farm on Jerusalem Rd. White is also a well known animal sculptor, a logger, sawmill operator, horseman, and designer and builder of farm machinery and equipment.

A vigorous man at 75, White offered some anecdotes and insights into his versatile life early one morning, while the dew dried off the hay. The studio where he has been creating sculptures for 45 years is adjacent to the stables, paddock, fields, and woodlands of the 200 acre farm.

A worn and comfortable place adorned with family pictures, clay and plaster working models of horses, sketches, tools, and equipment, it is topped by a leaky skylight. During the summer months White works mornings in his studio as the light is best then. Often he rides in the evening. He divides his time equally between farming and sculpting in the winter.

While he is the fifth generation of his family to live at Holly Hill Farm, he is the first to do so year-round and garner a living from the land, and the animals, for they are inextricably tied to his sculptures. He grew up with parents, grandparents, and stories of generations before, who shared his interest in farming and love of horses. Fox hunting, steeple chasing and flat racing were all part of his youthful pastimes, as well as some interesting river and sea adventures. It still amuses him to recall the horse that was given to him and his sister. Since riding made her dizzy, he had the horse to himself.

He attended Harvard University where he studied romance languages. Through a friendship with John Nichols Brown, he met Joseph Coletti, the late Boston sculptor with whom he started that career. Coletti was given his first commission by Brown at St. George's School in Rhode Island. White began studying and working with Coletti in 1927, "the very day I left Harvard," White adds. Their association lasted for several years, but White misses his Cohasset farm, so he returned there in 1934.

White always loved horses and wanted to raise and race them, but lacking the capital to do so, turned instead to sculpting them. The success that he has made of that undertaking reflects his indomitable spirit of ingenuity and inventiveness. The exquisite quality of his renderings attests his intimate knowledge of the animals, horses now.

He works first in clay. A plaster model is made from that and refined further. The final form is cast in bronze and a patina (application of chemicals to bronze to change color), and then wax are applied.

Although White detects minor flaws in his sculptures through impeccably critical eyes, they are measured by artists, sculptor, critics, and laymen as masterpieces. His ability to capture the energy, power, and grace of the horse in motion is unparalled by any other American sculptor.

His pieces have included commissioned and Holly Hill Farm drafthorses, thoroughbreds, Morgans, clydesdales, Arabians, and standard breds, as well as bulls.

Mr. Dinikian of The Arvest Gallery in Boston, where White's sculptures have been on permanent display since 1973, says, "Mr. White's knowledge of horse anatomy is optimum. His work is very classical, unique. There is no one else like him." Dinikian explains that White's bronzes are expensive ($1,000 to $8,000) for two very good reasons: "They are so good and he works only in additions of 10." This means that the maximum number of castings that will be made for each piece is 10, and only one is made at a time.

Clair Stein, Director of the National Sculpture Society of New York, hates to use the cliche, but admits, "He is a sculptor's sculptor. One of the best." White became a member of this oldest and largest association of sculptors in 1972 and has received their Bronze Medal in 1973 for his Bull, and the Hexter Award in 1976 for A Rearing Horse. Membership acceptance demands a thorough selection process, and the annual juried shows, in which prizes are awarded, further narrows down the field of the best. Stein feels White's success is due to his ability "to achieve a balance between absolute realism and abstracting the general planes of the animal — a difficult and rare accomplishment."

White says, rather modestly, "I am a machinist. I like to make things." He has applied his inventiveness and ingenuity to numerous mechanical projects on his Farm, and some ideas were well ahead of their time. If a new vehicle or machine was needed, he simply made one, using scrap parts, and his own lathe and forge. He had a great interest in hydraulics, and making utility tractors from Army surplus parts, adapted the concept in winches and lifters for the heavy chores of farming and logging. He experimented with four-wheel drive and invented a hydraulic wood-splitter. Front and back winches were installed on his vehicles, and he was called upon numerous times to help haul heavy equipment out of the mud. Although he tried, he wasn't successful in obtaining patents for some of these modernistic devices, but he operated his Farm efficiently with them, and in ways that were way ahead of their time.

John Dean, who worked with White on his Farm for three summers, remembers that "he would sit for hours and hours working over one particular detail until he got it right." Whether White was working on a piece of sculpture, or fitting a recycled steering wheel to a tractor, he has the ability to sort through the problem and find the right solution. Dean worked with White in the mechanical end of farming, where they pooled his engineering background and White's mechanical and inventive prowess. Like most people who know White, Dean has great respect for his abilities and goodness and obseves that "he is a fundamentalist who believes in the cycle of nature, of which he is very much a part."

Much admired in his hometown, Richardson White might smile to learn how pleased his friends and neighbors are to have the opportunity to look at some of his fine sculpture, currently on display at the David Sharpe Gallery, 3 South Main St. One friend remarked when leaving the gallery, "His sculpture is good, just like the man."

Selectmen Suspend Ptl. Feola Without Pa

By Judith Epstein

Selectmen this week suspended Patrolman Randolph Feola, Jr. without pay pending final court action on seven motor vehicle related charges. The vote was unanimous.

Feola was suspended for five days without pay last week, for conduct unbecoming a police officer, following his second arrest by Hull Police within three months for drunken driving.

Feola appeared collected after the Selectmen's decision Tuesday night, but said, "If they keep picking and choosing laws to apply to me and if they keep listening to Sgt. (Richard) Barrow, who's out to harrass me, they'll be in more trouble than I'm in."

Local and Boston press covered the open hearing, which was held to ascertain whether the suspension without pay was to be continued. Patrolman Feola sat with his father, Police Chief Randolph Feola. Selectmen had a stenographer on hand to record the hearing.

Selectmen asked Feola at the start of the hearing if he had any comments on the charges or the suspension. He responded, "I'm here as an observer, so my lawyer will know what went on. You're going to do what you're going to do."

Selectman Henry Ainslie pressed Feola for comment. "We can't expect clarification of anything by way of explanation if you don't want to talk. We want to give you full opportunity to explain your position.

Feola didn't feel he had to defend himself, "I'm not on trial here. The court either verifies this or makes it null and void. This is not the place to explain, that place is in court."

"I have nothing to say regarding the charges. For me to discuss them now would be way out of order. This is the first time I've been invited before you, instead of being tossed back and forth like a volleyball," Feola continued. When asked by Ainslie if he had anything more to say on the matter of the suspension. Feola reiterated, "You're going to do what you're going to do."

Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark asked those in attendance if they had any questions concerning the hearng. One woman asked why Feola hadn't been dismissed and stated that she had been hearing about his misconduct for a year. She questioned if his Civil Service status within the Police Department was keeping him from being fired.

Ainslie said, "This is outside of Civil Service. Obviously, if we were to dismiss him in the future, then he could appeal. This would apply to any employee under Civil Service."

"We're following the law as strictly as we can," Clark said. Ainslie concluded that if Feola were to be found unfairly punished he would receive

The Legion Land, A Cobbled History

Two weeks ago the Planning Board approved a 33 lot subdivision for 70 acres off Forest St., also known as the Legion Land, owned by Dr. Roger Pompeo and Thomas Chamberlain of LesAnn Associates.

The land earned the name because it was left to the George Mealy Post 118 by August Petersen in 1942. The reason some people are upset about its sale and proposed development is the land has a legacy, if unofficial.

On Aug. 5, 1942, August Petersen wrote a letter to the Mealy Post confirming his oral statement made at the Cohasset Special Town Meeting of June 15, 1942 to dedicate 80 acres of his land on Forest Avenue deeded free and clear of all incumbrances to the George Mealy Post, American Legion.

The reason for the bequest, the letter states, was "for the use and purpose of providing without cost to any of the men from Cohasset serving overseas in any branch of our armed services on their return from the war, or who have so served in previous wars, or veterans who have not served overseas, but who, by a majority vote of the Trustees to be appointed by the George Mealy Post of Cohasset, are considered worthy of the accommodation and benefit to be derived from temporary or permanent domicile on any part of the acreage controlled under such Trust.

If the George Mealy Post sees fit to accept this acreage, the foregone wordage is not to be considered conditions, but merely suggestions." Petersen also recommended that the land provide benefit from "a recuperative standpoint," as a Legion Memorial Park, in part or whole, or perhaps part

Profile Of Town Counsel Thaxter

By Judith Epstein

"Referred to Town Counsel J. Blake Thaxter, Jr." the article might read — how often have you seen that phrase?

Official and ominous as it may sound, Town Counsel Thaxter of Thaxter Beckwith and Henderson, is an affable, sprightly fellow, with Yankee eyes, porcupine-cropped hair and a bow tie. He has the legal expertise and command of Dickens' Mr. Jaggers, and also happens to be capable of taking on as many different matters in a day, be they cases concerning the town or his private practice, as Keyston Cops can go in and out of doors.

According to the town's bylaws a Town Counsel is appointed annually by the Board of Selectmen. Thaxter has enjoyed this appointment for nearly 20 years and hopes

Disco Ice Skating At Winter Gardens

Disco, the hottest music around, goes cool this weekend with a New England debut of disco ice skating at the Cohasset Winter Gardens, Route 3A, Cohasset.

Saturday at 830 p.m., WVBF (F-105) disc jockey Bill Stephens will place the first record on the new disco turntable at Cohasset Winter Gardens to start disco ice skating in New England. He'll also be giving away record albums, compliments of the radio station.

Admission for the two and a half hour session is $2.50. All age groups are welcome and rental skates are available. Non-skaters will be able to disco on a special non-slip surface which will be installed at center ice. Persons wearing skates will not be permitted on this area.

Disco lights, including the now familiar multi-faceted revolving ball, will add to the atmosphere.

Rink owner, Peter Breen, decided to pioneer disco ice skating in the area when he saw the success of disco roller skating. His decision was underscored by the Ice Skating Institute of America, the national organization of rink owners and managers, which has recorded success ice disco operations in other areas of the country. Additionally, Breen's informal survey of his customer found them overwhelmingly in favor of the concept.

Chicken Affliction

By Lois Martin

There's a new affliction gripping our township. Months ago there were only subtle indications of this emerging ailment. It's now full blown.

We're hooked on chicken. Check your neighborhood. Loiter outside the windows next door at supper time. You'll smell that marvelous aroma that's taken over the town. Used to be you'd smell the clam flats or seaweed or pine trees. Now when you sniff the air, you'll pick up the scent of chicken.

Probably this started when they enshrined the cow, pricing shanks out of our reach. We no longer buy the bull; we only say it. Consequently, we started reaching for the bird in the display case more frequently. It was, after all, familiar, still affordable, and always a hearty nutritious dish.

PATCHES

But the thing is, we don't eat chicken any more because we want to. We have to. We are in the embarrassing position of seeking a near daily chicken fix. Grocery shoppers get their carts and head directly to the rear of the store, the chicken division to fill up. That doesn't mean they don't already have some home in the freezer. But you keep a full supply of chicken on hand like you do water.

We used to have chicken every Sunday. No more. Now we have it Monday through Friday. There's a person living in my house who, in referring to the freezer, said the ice cream was "right next to my mother's chicken."

This gives rise to the possibility that women are more vulnerable to chicken addiction than men. Certainly they're the ones most likely to buy and cook it. And we don't seem too fussy about how it's prepared, either. At first we'd gussy up the bird, dousing it in a sauce or stuffing it with ham and cheese. But we gave up the facades in chicken cooking. Just get the thing out of its wrapper and sling it on a burner. The goal is to consume the chicken as swiftly as possible.

True, I prefer the dark meat because it's more juicy and fattening. But I'm nearly as pleased to tackle the white meat. We addicts aren't above chomping on the wings and in desperate times, foraging on the neck portion. It's like any habit. If you need it bad enough, you take what you can get.

One of the high points in my life was the day I was alone in the car with an entire bucket of fried chicken. Ostensibly I'd bought it for the family to eat after the Little League baseball game. But, left by myself in the car with the wafting aroma of fried chicken, I had a go at it. In doing so, I committed the cardinal sin amongst chicken fan families. I ate all of the skin, my favorite part. The shame I faced on being discovered was well worth it.

The true chicken freak orders it in a restaurant. Never mind she has bones boiling from her lunchtime bird at home. She'll find it irresistible on a menu, in a nice salad, in a pot pie, in a club sandwich with lots of mayonnaise.

And now we've got this phobia. We're annoyed with the gas shortage, nervous about the fuel shortage, frustrated by the newsprint shortage. But at the mere suggestion that hen houses are almost empty, we're in a state of panic. We've put a chicken house and mother hen on our Christmas list just in case. Personally I won't feel secure until I hear a rooster in my own back yard.

Some people say it's not easy living with someone who's hooked on chicken. There's that pile of bones to deal with every day. And you can only do so much with a gizzard.

Still it's an innocuous hangup. It makes us reliable. People always know what they can count on for supper. They get Frank Purdue calendars on the kitchen closet. There's absolutely nothing to worry about while women have their families' chicken supply safely under their wings.

Dental Award To Dr. Woods

Dr. Edward Woods of Cohasset has been awarded a Fellowship by the American Academy of General Dentistry. The Academy is a professional organization of 23,000 family dentists that stresses the vital role of continuing education in guaranteeing the quality of dental care delivered to the public.

Dr. Woods is one of 26 New England dentists so honored in 1979. Unlike other awards granted by the dental profession which are essentially honorary, Fellowship in the American Academy represents a significant commitment. One must complete a minimum of 500 credit hours of graduate study in a diverse curriculum over a 10 year period. Dr. Woods has participated in over 700 hours of graduate courses representing a broad spectrum of dental health problems, patient education, and advanced training.

An associate in Oral Surgery at University Hospital in Boston, a Fellow of the Society of Oral Physiology and Occlusion in New York, Dr. Woods also participates as an Educational Associate in the Tufts University Dental Extern Program whereby senior dental students spend a continuous week in private dental offices learing daily patient care and the management of a private office. From 1960 to 1965, he represented the South Shore Dental Society in oral health matters on the Massachusetts Dental Society level.

After receiving his Bachelor's degree in Biology from Bowdoin College in 1943 and spending three years with the United States Army in Europe, he obtained his Dental degree from Tufts University in 1950. A year's internship in Oral Surgery at the Hartford Hospital followed. He has maintained a general dental practice in Cohasset for the past 25 years.

Dr. Woods served as Secretary of the Cohasset Conservation Commission for 10 years and was a member of the committee speaking for Cohasset in the acquisition of the Wompatuck State Park area from the Federal government. He has played an active role with Cohasset Scout Troop 28 for 10 years.

Why Hostility?

August Peterson stood up at a special town meeting in 1942 — in the middle of a terrible war — and bequeathed 80 acres of land to the George F. Mealy American Legion Post. It was to be used for the rest and recuperation of all veterans.

He left the land with no strings attached. It was left informally, with no stipulations, regulations or requisites for its use and the deed reflects the same. Only a letter, addressed to the Mealy Post, states his hopes and desires for the land.

Although what has and will become of the Legion land may not embrace Mr. Peterson's original wishes, the sale to LesAnn Associates and their 33-lot subdivision plan for it is entirely legitimate. This week's Mariner report on the subject relays a legacy, a history and a possible future, in expository fashion, for a large tract of land.

We do not pretend to have told the whole tale, for we were unable — rather, we were not allowed to find — all there is know. Why? Why the curious reticence when the passing of the land was legal and duly approved for subdivision by the planning board. Why the surly undertones about the decision to sell the land? After all, a gift free and clear can be done with as it will.

Nearly everyone we spoke to referred us to someone else who, as it turned out, was unwilling to discuss the land for one reason or another. We asked in innocence; we weren't damning, we weren't pretending to muckrake.

So why the string of no comments? Why the rudeness and hostility? Why? Why? Why?

We think all Cohasset would like to know.

'It's A Boring Town That I Like To Come Home To'

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Mariner publisher David Cutler suggested several weeks ago that an article on Cohasset Neighborhood Associations be done as a sort of summer series. "That sounds perfectly dull," we said.

"Maybe," David answered.

A quick check with town experts like State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray showed that there wasn't a lot of material on any neighborhood associations. The South Shore Music Circus noise-fighting group came to mind first...and Surrey Drive (one block long) was pointed out as being friendly and picnicky, but nothing terribly newsworthy.

"There used to be a Beechwood Association," one person said, "and a Gulf River Association and Hull Street Association...but I don't think any of them are terribly active. Cohasset really isn't conducive to neighborhood associations. It's kind of a block, although it has its fringes, and there are areas known as the wrong side of the tracks, like Beechwood and West Jerusalem Road. Also, there are a lot of divorces, travelling husbands, and atransitoryfactor."

Fifteen persons were selected at random for this story... the only criterion being that one had to answer one's phone when called. Chet Ellis and Donna Cogill would have been interviewed if they had been home. Millie Mitman is never home and when she is her phone is busy. Noel Ripley has been interviewed too much — scratch him. Gilbert Tower will probably write his own story anyway. Margie Knox and Marilyn Adams are off somewhere selling pinatas... so in any case, those individuals were not interviewed.

Cohasset residents, as opposed to Cohasset town officials, are quite shy. Only two out of 15 people interviewed permitted me to use their names, one being a town official. No one really said anything incriminating...they just felt they could be more expressive in their conversation without a name. "And then if I'm misquoted it won't matter," one person said.

When people cherish some set of values and do not feel any threat to them, they experience well-being. But suppose people do not experience any threat? Is that necessarily the experience of indifference? Roger Porter and others say not.

It would be easy to write about the insular town of Cohasset. But the right selection of quotes could make Cohasset seem more exotic than New York City. It would be just as easy to tell stories that are comically conventional.

The truth is a good deal less melodramatic or clear. But this seems evident. Those interviewed strongly expressed that they wished to live in a town where things were mostly working right. In earlier years, young married years, they had the experience of the corporate trail, of political involvement. Now in their early 30's and 40's, they want contentment, time with the family, and a beautiful community in which to experience it.

If Cohasset has any sense of a single, corporate identity...it is not surprising that it should come from public utterances from the town's various councils. It is the nature of politics that councils for the most part attract people who are opinionated and bossy.

It is also the nature of newspapers to give a lot of space to the opinion of local leaders, and more often than not echo those officials' outlook in editorials.

Although it has been expressed by several of those interviewed that various town boards give some odd judgments, one individual stating that "Cohasset is the only town in the South Shore which can perk rock," most felt that the town's problems are diminutive: "I've noticed over a period of time that the only problems which the town appears to have and which consistently make the headlines are with town government itself, and in particular the police department," one of our group said.

What effect does town government have upon the neighborhoods of the community? According to my experts, less than is imagined. Town government goes its own way, the tone and the intent of the town does not necessarily come from its town leaders, nor from the press.

MEET CLOVER

As a child "Clover" (not her real name) lived on a dead-end road and played kick-the-can. "I think it was probably more a neighborhood than The Common. I mean by that I was in other peoples' houses as much as in my own. My kids have only been in one or two houses on the green."

We said: maybe that's because one of your little kids is potty training and doesn't wear any pants. Clover ignored the remark.

"I solicited for the heart fund for several years in order to get to know my neighbors... but normally they don't answer the door. Actually there are a lot of renters on the green, and young working couples. So probably they just aren't home.

"Three of my neighbors are churches, a town hall and the community center. If you put people in those institutions as residents it would probably change things considerably, and collecting wouldn't be so hard.

"I'll tell you. I might as well be living in New York City. But I really like that — that gives me the privilege of being as bizarre as I feel like being."

HERE'S RUBE

Although in a former town "Rube" (not his real name) was active in town government, he has never even been to a town meeting in Cohasset. However a year or so ago he did attend an assessors' meeting when his valuation increased.

"I've never gone to a town

A Conversation With Randy Feola

By Judith Epstein

It was a contemplative and reserved Randolph Feola, Jr. the Mariner interviewed last week. Feola sat in the kitchen of his Hull home drinking hot tea to allay the effects of the muggy afternoon.

Cinnamon, his dobermine pinscher, and Rowdy, a German shepard pup — Feola's only housemates — yipped outside the screen door, wanting to be included.

Feola hadn't always been interested in police work, he said. Approximately 10 years ago, when he was working at Quincy Shipyard, the suggestion of his father, Police Chief Randolph Feola, to pursue a police career finally was driven home to him.

"I knew it was hard," Feola said of being a policeman and of having grown up the son of a controversial police officer. "I remembered what it was like in a small town. I knew it was hard, my father being a policeman. I knew of the difficulties of my own kids," he added, should he have his own family one day.

It's not the case anymore. In the 60's and 70's it wasn't a serious factor," he said, when he made the decision to become a policeman.

He took the police exam in May 1969 and was appointed a temporary intermittent in September of that year. He worked vacation coverage and an occasional detail until he was appointed a permanent intermittent in March 1970. He has worked full time ever since. After completing the Brockton Police Academy he was appointed a full time patrolman in May 1970.

"After I got on the force and saw what it was all about — working helping people, getting inner satisfaction and not just a check on Thursday, I decided I liked it," Feola said. "I didn't come on like gangbusters or with any ideas of changing the world. I formed my attitudes about it as I learned."

Feola's first full time shift was the midnight to 8 a.m., on the third or graveyard shift. "It was rough at first. Whoever I was riding with would drop me off at Cushing Plaza where I would check every door by hand. After a break I would be dropped off in the Common and hand check every door." Feola felt that these duties were necessary and should still be practiced with diligence today; however, he questioned the real reason he was expected to perform them.

He suggested that perhaps he was just being broken in as a rookie cop, or that possibly he was being kept out of the way so that he couldn't report to his father about any slack-off of duties at headquarters and elsewhere in town. The suspicion of Feola having a direct tattle-tale line to the Chief was always present, he said.

Randy Feola

"I used to go at it eight hours a day, whatever it was — answering class, checking speeders," he said. In those early days he usually was a passenger in a patrol car and rode with Sgt. John Rhodes, Clifton Jones, and David Moir. Lt. Charles Stockbridge was their sergeant in command of the third shift.

"I liked the work," Feola said further qualifying his career decision. "I liked being out on the street, talking to people. I thought I'd like to stay. I didn't have any thought of not being there, but things have a way of changing."

The way of changing Feola alluded to didn't happen over night. Although he claimed he kept with him always the notion that he wanted to keep people out of trouble rather than catch them in trouble, Feola started to feel more acutely the suspicion and antagonism rising toward him.

"Everybody can't be close with everybody. There was a lack of total acceptance with everyone I wanted to be friends with, though. It could have been part of what led me to seek more friends on the outside of the department."

"No one ever said anything to me personally," he said, of the negative factions he felt mounting within the department, although he indicated that he got along well with most of the officers. "It came back to me pretty quick, and let me know a certain faction didn't like me." Feola guessed that is was his lifestyle, his father, perhaps even his intelligence that earned him resentment.

"Every professional social group has its cliques. The Cohasset Police Department is like any other group that has its own internal factions. The majority I get along with, both on and off duty."

As far as he knew, Feola said that there had never been a complaint about him while he was on duty.

In 1972 Feola was switched to the second shift, 4 p.m. to midnight, the time he currently works. "I always liked it better; it was more regular. There's more time to see friends after work." When asked if that also meant there was more time to socialize with friends at drinking establishments, Feola made it clear that he didn't wish to discuss bars.

"Drinking to me is the result of other things. I hate to label it as a problem. It's not the case that if that were eliminated, everything would be perfect," he said. When asked what it would take to make things right he responded, "What it would take? I guess everybody is looking for that."

"What would probably help me is a whole new set of priorities, becoming what you care about, trying to figure out what you've thought about in the past and what's best for you in the future. Sometimes a few traumatic experiences can force you to reassess," he said.

Concerning the recent charges pending court action and all the publicity they have received, Feola said, "I know that those who have had confidence, trust and concerns for me, I may have let them down. I'd rather have 7000 people judge me on all facts than have a few people judge me on a few facts," he said.

As for the motor vehicle violations, in particular, Feola noted, "It could happen to anybody. The biggest point of availability to make a mistake is on the road in a public place. It's where they're the most susceptible, whether somebody hits them, they hit somebody or stop on the side of the road trying to help somebody."

"If the pending situations can be cleared up I know I'm still capable of giving the kind of concern and doing the kind of work I've done in the past.

"When you're in the public eye, you are subject to a lot more criticism and observation than others. There are a lot of accusations but no one can say they saw me do anything. I'm not being judged as Randy Feola, but as the guy who could use a haircut, the guy who stops at the Red Lion, the guy who doesn't have the image he's supposed to have for the position he holds."

Fran Charles, a junior at Tufts University, is a member of that college's sailing team which took part in the Morss Cup series of the Intercollegiate Yacht Racing Association's North American Championship in Chicago. Tufts led most of the way while winning its third New England title in the last five years at the U.S. Coast Guard Academy in May. They also won the Geiger Trophy and Kennedy Cup regattas. Tufts won the 1976 Morss Cup and has finished in the top three in four of the last five years at the North American paired dinghy championship.

Navy Hospitalman Apprentice Donald Bell has graduated from Field Medical Service School at Marine Corps base at Camp Lejeuen, N.C.

Henry Dormitzer, chairman of Operation Sail 1980, and a South Main Street resident, recently spoke before the Holbrook Historical Society. He is persuading countries to organize youth training courses on their tall ships and has already convinced Norway to take 35 American young people on its trip to America in 1980. More than 12 countries have agreed to send their magnificent sailing vessels to Boston for the birthday festivities.

Mrs. John Bleakie, director of the World Affairs Council, attended a luncheon to honor Ambassador Alfred Atherton Jr., who accepted the Christian A. Herter Memorial award from the Council. Mrs. Bleakie's parents, the Hollis Gleasons of Atlantic Avenue, David Place of Summer Street, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Benson of Forest Avenue and the John Keanes of Black Horse Lane enjoyed the chicken and rice luncheon.

Hiller Zobel of Jerusalem Road is one of four men nominated by Governor King as an associate justice of the superior court. Zobel is a partner in the Boston law firm of Brown, Rudnick, Freed and Gesmer, and is a member of the board of editors of Massachusetts Lawyers Weekly, and the author of articles on legal and historical subjects. His wife, Rya Zobel was recently appointed a justice of the court.

SNAIL SEARCH is rewarded and shared at Sandy Beach by Billy McDonough, Kevin and Katie Costello.

Whitney Hall Howard, of 309 Cross St., has been named to the Dean's Distinguished Academic Honor List at Baylor University in Waco, Texas, for academic achievement during the spring semester. Howard, a senior at Baylor, was one of 825 students named to the University's two academic honor lists.

Elizabeth H. Evans of Cohasset was among the approximately 1,050 students entering the freshman class as Dartmouth College began its academic year here in September. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Evans of 72 North Main St. A recent graduate of Milton Academy, Miss Evans is a National Merit Commended Student. She was vice-president and secretary of her school's student government, and a member of the Glee Club and chorus.

Chambers - Hauprich

Wearing her mother's dress of ivory silk trimmed with her great grandmother's Belgian lace, Wendy Gaylord Chambers was married to John Whitaker Hauprich, July 28 at St. Stephen's Church in Cohasset Village. A garden reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride.

Miss Chambers is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Durno Chambers, Jr. of Cohasset. Mr. Hauprich is the son of Mrs. Charles S. Adams, Jr. of Camden, South Carolina and Mr. Leonard Hauprich of Orangeburg, South Carolina.

Hope H. Chambers, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and Edwin Levering, IV, was best man. Bridesmaids were: Eleanor M. Chambers and Gaylord B. Chambers, both sisters of the bride, Susan K. Lary of Boston, Lisa J. Markarian of Belmont and Mary W. Levering of Baltimore. Ushers were Charles Bulterman, cousin of the bride from Darien, Conn., John D. Long from Philadelphia, Christopher Pistell from Baltimore, William G. Turner from LaPlata, Md., and John F. Shettle, Jr. from Baltimore.

The bridegroom attended Washington and Lee University and is employed by Eastern Aviation and Marine Underwriters in Towson, Md. His wife, a graduate of Simmons College in Boston, will join Maryland National Bank in September.

After a wedding trip to Magnetawan, Ontario, Mr. and Mrs. Hauprich will reside in Baltimore.

A Town I Like To Come Home To

meeting because the sense of Cohasset town meeting is pretty well controlled, reasonable, and more or less in line with my own reason. If I get excited someday about something, maybe I'll go." Rube has never voted, either.

"In relative terms, town government is probably the best control the taxpayer has. My real gripe is with the state. Although town meeting is important, it doesn't have as much control on a day-to-day basis. There are gigantic gross insufficiencies in federal government and equivalent inefficiency in state government."

When we asked how Rube would propose to deal with government at elevated levels, he said, "I'd have to quit my job and work 16 hour days for the rest of my life."

Rube feels that the word neighborhood is a city word and doesn't really have full meaning in suburbia. "I feel no need for a neighborhood association in my area (South Main St.). I'm sure if there were a need it would have been developed a long time ago."

Marie McCarthy of Old Pasture Road foresees more neighborhood solidarity as a result of the energy crisis. But at the same time, "I feel Cohasset is a very insular community. People are cut off, wrapped up in their own little worlds, and the worlds of their children. They're very content — I think.

"Every so often our neighborhood gets together and has a yard sale — but we're not a political or a pressure group. There's a feeling if you need anything, you just have to call. In a crisis my neighbors are there when you need them."

Roger Porter of Elm Street, and several others, expressed the fact that they and their families had made a commitment to live in Cohasset. At a certain stage on the corporate trail, Roger had enough, and started his own business in town.

He said he used to be involved in town politically, but is no longer willing to get involved politically. "It's boring. I am involved with a private non-profit group called Conservation Trust. We own a portion of Bassings Beach, and we have large-scale fundraising so we can buy other properties. We also own the Salt House beside Hugos. I think the town's very fortunate. The open lands in Cohasset have been preserved."

Roger used to attend town meeting, but no longer. "There is always a certain vocal minority who show up and speak for a long period of time. I don't feel a lot is accomplished at town meeting."

He feels there might be a lack of places for kids to go in Cohasset — but that's a problem in every town. He doesn't see the town having any big, insurmountable problems, and he's content with his neighborhood. But he feels his social outlets come from a variety of circles outside the neighborhood.

Clover was the only person in the group who said she might be able to leave Cohasset because she thrives on a more urban atmosphere. "But realistically, I don't know if I could. I believe there are a mixture of people in Cohasset — but they're not visible."

None of the 15 felt their indifference to town politics makes them apathetic. In so many words, many individuals expressed the thought that there is as much freedom and self-direction in a town ridden with custom, as there is in a dynamic society.

"Cohasset is not always running hither and thither after some new thing. This town has always been safe from the invasion of novelty," still another nameless individual said.

Roger said he knows of at least one couple who recently left Cohasset and experienced a cultural shock. "They are in the process of moving back."

Rube said: "I spend all week long in traffic, in job-related problems. When I drive into Cohasset it's beautiful. There are no shacks to greet me. I relax as soon as I hit the town line. I will die here."

Clover is less pleased. "I don't buy Cohasset as being an ideal place to raise kids. There's no community." Marie McCarthy disagrees. "I feel there are various outlets in the community. The community center is trying to reach out. A lot of new people are moving into town." According to State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, at least 200 families per year move into the town.

If there is a summary to be made from all of these various conversations, then it must be that Cohasset is content with itself, not necessarily smug, nor resigned, but content. And if we can depend upon "Rube" and people like him to "get excited" someday should something outrageous happen...we'll be OK.

Feola

Feola's second arrest came after he had been returned to limited duty on the desk two weeks ago, pending the outcome of the first five charges levelled against him in May. The desk assignment was handed down by Selectmen after initially issuing a paid suspension. The limited duty was assigned when Selectmen learned that the trial wouldn't be held until September 18. An August 10 Hingham District Court date is set to hear the second set of complaints.

Chief Feola felt his son had been unduly penalized. "He's been fined $2700," he said, indicating that even a suspension with pay would withhold from his son a possible $200 a week in overtme and detail work. "He's been found guilty four times already and he hasn't even been to court yet."

Patrolman Feola said, "I'll live. I can do lots of things. I can make more than I'm making here."

The Recreation Report...

MAGIC SHOW

There will be a Magic Show at the Town Hall auditorium, Tuesday, Aug. 7 at 10:30 a.m. The charge is 50 cents per child, payable at the door. Neither the six to 12 year old nor the four and five year-old program will meet at 9 a.m.; instead children should be picked up at the Town Hall around 11:45. The six to 12 year-old group should bring a lunch with them as they will be walked back to the Osgood Playground at noon, and continue with the Playground Program until the usual 3 p.m. time.

Magician Joseph Carota will perform a number of illusions and tricks for the children's entertainment. The Magic Show is open to all aged residents and children who are not enrolled in the Playground Programs.

BAND CONCERTS

On Tuesday, Aug. 7, at 7:30 p.m. at the Town Common, the 4th in a series of six 30-piece concerts will be performed by the South Shore Concert Band under the direction of Richard Whitmarch. The public is cordially invited to attend the free concerts. Please bring folding chairs or blankets to sit on. The concert will end at about 9:30 p.m.

The next performance is scheduled for Tuesday, Aug. 21, at 7:30 p.m., Town Common. The final concert of the year will be presented Aug. 28, same time, same place weather permitting. In the event of inclement weather, concerts will be made up and re-scheduling notices will appear in the Mariner and on local radio statins.

TENTS NEEDED

The Cohasset Recreation Department plans to sponsor a sleep-out for children 10 and older registered in the playground program. The department is in dire need of tents of any type. If you have a tent that you wish to donate or lend, call Jack Worley at 383-6791.

FILM SERIES

Remember: Thursday, Aug. 2, 7:30 p.m., Town Hall, that "Ivanhoe" ends at 9:15 p.m.

On Thursday, Aug. 9, at 7:30 p.m., the sixth film, in a series of eight, will be shown without charge. The movie is called "A Hard Day's Night." Supposedly it's about an average day in the life of the famed Beatles in the early 1960's.

Younger children must be accompanied by a responsible older sibling, or an adult. The movie ends at 9 p.m. and all children must be collected at that time, promptly.

BALLOON FLYING CONTEST

A few cards have been returned from the Recreation Department Balloon Flying Contest held July 6. Cards traveling (and returned) the farthest to date belong to: Kenny Caristi, who's card was picked up at Long Beach Pond, Brewster. Ben Dean's card was found in Norwell by Elma Stoddard July 8. Colin Knox's card was found, and mailed in by Jay Rattenbury, of 1 Briarwood Lane, Cohasset. Unfortunately, Jay lives next door to Miliken Field from whence the balloons were released. However, thanks should go to Jay for taking the time to mail it in via his postman dad, Henry Rattenbury.

Also returned was Jay Northnagle's card, which was returned from Harbor Beach in East Dennis. Where the balloons flew south for the most part, it is evident that most went out to sea, passing over, or around the tip of Cape Cod. Only a lucky few made their descent over land masses such as the Cape.

The Balloon Contest itself, devised by Richard Barrow, Recreation Commission Chairman, was extremely successful and will be conducted as an annual playground program event.

There were over 200 youngsters participating. While the Balloon Flying Contest is done in conjunction with the Playground Program, it is not limited to just Playground participants and all residents are invited to participate in next year's flying.

All too soon, it's August. Summer, as always, is flying by. It's been a long, hot summer, much to the dismay of the backyard gardener, but perfect vacation weather. Vacation time is many things to many people. Summer cottage, trailer or boat, for mother it usually means a different stove, not nearly as deluxe as the one she left behind. This recipe of Betty Smyth's could be made early in the day, to be served chilled for dinner and is a welcome relief from summer's potato salad.

RICE SALAD

2 pkg. Uncle Ben's Chicken Flavored Rice, cooked according to direction, omitting butter
2 jars marinated artichoke hearts, drained and chopped, reserving marinade
8 green onions and tops, sliced and chopped
16 stuffed olives, sliced
3/4 c. chopped green pepper
2/3 c. mayonnaise
1 tsp. curry powder

Let rice cool slightly. Mix marinade with mayonnaise and curry. Pour over other ingredients. Mix well and serve chilled.

Roadside stands are one of my many weaknesses. Seldom can I pass one by. If I do grit my teeth and manage to continue on my way, it's only with the knowledge that there's probably another stand around the next corner. We're fortunate to be surrounded by a veritable bonanza of fruits and vegetables on the South Shore, but corn at 20¢an ear, is a little much. Next time you stop at your favorite stand, pick up 2 lbs. of summer squash for Isabelle Wilson's casserole.

SUMMER SQUASH CASSEROLE

2 lbs. summer squash
1/4 c. onion
1 can cream chicken soup
1 can cream celery sjoup
1 c. sour cream
1 c. shredded carrot
1 pkg. (8 oz.) seasoned stuffing mix
1/2 c. margarine, melted

Slice squash and cook with onion for 5 min., drain. Combine next 4 ingredients and fold squash into mixture. Mix butter with stuffing. In 1½ qt. casserole dish layer two mixtures with stuffing first and last. Bake at 350 for 20-30 min. Serves 6-8.

Living near the water, we're a natural target for visitors who seemingly forget our very existence in the winter when the beaches aren't as inviting. While guests are frolicing on the beach, working up gargantuan appetites, with Milly Carr's ham in the oven, you can join in the fun, too. Milly writes that she does a lot of entertaining at her summer cottage, and her friends are her testers for a variety of new recipes she's always trying out.

CRUSTY BAKED HAM

1 (10 to 12 pd.) fully-cooked, bone-in ham
1½ c. brown sugar
2 tsp. dry mustard
1 c. fine dry bread crumbs
1/4 tsp. allspice
1/4 tsp. nutmeg
1/4 tsp. pepper
3 T melted butter, cider vinegar or wine

Remove skin or rind from ham. Score fat side of ham diagonally, making diamond shapes. Stud each diamond with whole clove. In small bowl, combine remaining ingredients, stirring with fork to blend well. With hands, press crumb mixture over top of ham, making even layer. Insert meat thermometer into ham and place on rack in shallow roasting pan. Bake at 325 degrees for 2½ to 3 hours.

to serve for another score. His predecessor held the post for 37 years — Town Counsel is no fly-by-night position. Thaxter admitted, "Sure it's prestigious, I certainly don't do it for the money."

"The money" is the annual $18,000 stipend he receives for handling the town's legal business, which among other things involves: preparing all contracts, deeds, bonds and other legal instruments to the town; legal advice and written opinions when so requested by the Board of Selectmen to any town officer, board and committee regarding any substantial legal question or matter; supervising investigation of any claim arising out of an injury to persons or property to protect the town against such claims; and prosecuting or defending all cases pending in any federal or state court.

This is a heavy load, attested Thaxter. No one doubts him, for even the briefest visit to his office reveals unending streams of phone calls, messages, briefs and people dying to get in his door. He has therefore two assistants, Attorneys Richard Henderson and Maurice McLaughlin, also of his office. "I literally couldn't do it myself and keep up my practice," Thaxter said and indicated that when he gets swamped with town business, he divies up the work load with his assistant town counsels.

Although Thaxter didn't dwell on the matter of money, he noted that surrounding towns pay a much higher salary to their town counsels. "Time sheets are kept showing the amount of time spent on each case — which proves that the time we spend is compensated at a very minimal fee," he said.

"But you're involved with town affairs," he said, and agreed rather proudly, he was glad to be a part of the town's trials (literally) and tribulations, hearings, disputes and Town Meetings, where his nasal "Second" can be heard confirming motions on the floor.

Henderson usually handles all matters pertaining to school zoning, building, and harbor rules and regulations. In fact, Thaxter pointed out, in the future bylaw violations will be brought as criminal complaints in the District Court of East Norfolk in Quincy. McLaughlin is busy with tax-takings and anything to do with real estate.

"In nearly 20 years we haven't had a lot of suits against the town, Thaxter said, "until recently — we're getting killed." He was referring to several involved continuing cases, such as the

J. Blake Thaxter

McGee zoning issue, the Marr mooring battle, the Kuhn versus the Board or Health case, and a suit involving the workers in the construction of the town's reservoir and dam, and one for personal injuries blamed on an alleged defect of a Cohasset highway.

Both Thaxter and Henderson bemoaned the time and money these cases were costing the town. They suggested that the flurry of litigation has questionable merit. Many have been heard before a Master, and transcript fees alone have mounted into the thousands of dollars. "The Kuhn case took 12 trial days," Thaxter said, and indicated that it was heard at his office, at Norfolk Superior court, in a Boston office and which is still in front of a Master. "Those stenographic costs cost us $1700," he said, of the total $6000 transcript bill. The town's legal fee appropriation is a mere $500; anything over that amount must be transferred from reserve funds by the Advisory Board at the request of Selectmen, Thaxter reminded.

Other continuing cases involving the Town Counsel have been the Smith and Moir hearings, former patrolmen who have appealed the decision of the Selectmen in their dismissals. Now the question of Patrolman Feola's suspension can be added to the list of police issues Thaxter must hear.

Charles Humphreys, a former partner with Thaxter's firm, was the town's contract negotiator, but since he has left Thaxter will take up that volumnous slack, as well. The fact that the police and fire contracts didn't get approved by the people during the last leg of the 1979 Town Meeting, because of the lack of a quorum, Thaxter finds a "tragedy." I feel it's too bad people don't take more interest. It's a tragedy that people aren't aware of how they're spending their money."

Apart from town business, Thaxter refers to himself and his associates as general practitioners, handling state, trial, conveyance, domestic and any other type of legal business one could think of. "Unrelated things," Thaxter said, of his practice, of the universe in general, "you have to have that ability, to go from one to the other."

And one must also have the ability to separate work and friendship. It's a small town, and it wouldn't be unusual for Thaxter to find himself sitting opposite someone he knew or has heard of in town. In the Smith case, for instance, Thaxter chose not to represent the town, as one of the case's witnesses was a former client of his.

"Obviously, we don't get involved if the case involves a close personal friend. We can't even give the appearance of impropriety," Henderson said quoting a portion of a law.

Ordinarily however, it was pointed out, legal conflict of interest and friendship doesn't enter in. "I call it as I see it," J. Blake Thaxter, Jr. said.

By the way the J. stands for Joseph.

The Legion Land

of it "convened, in, say, half acre lots for permanent domicile or temporary camping locations" for veterans needing rest and recuperation.

The suggestions were never made as stipulations. The deed now held by LesAnn Associates makes no mention of Petersen's intentions for the land but merely describes the parcel of land and to whom it was bequeathed. Copies of the letter are known to still hang in the George Mealy Post and the Petersen Real Estate Office. The land was sold by the Legion in September 1977 to LesAnn Associates for $135,000.

What transpired between 1942 and 1977 is not quite clear, however a cobbled history can be pieced together. Apparently more than a decade ago, the Legion land committee decided to sell the land, and attempted to do so in a number of ways — privately, and via the town.

John Burke, Legion commander in 1977, said the reason to sell the land was to accrue bank interest on the money made from the sale. "Year after year the land was brought up with the idea the money would go into scholarships off the interest," he said, for high school students.

"What we've done with it now, we're helping out kids, rather than just letting it sit there which just didn't seem right," he said. It has been mentioned that money was needed by the Legion to pay off renovation costs. However, Building Inspector James Litchfield said those building changes occurred before the sale of the land and were paid for as they were made.

Present commander Stephen Wigmore was unavailable for comment. Wigmore was questioned about the sale of the land by Health Agent Kevin O'Brien and if and when tests had been performed there. Wigmore responded that he didn't know anything about it.

According to Pompeo, Peterson Realty, headed by Fred Wood and formerly run by Fred Petersen, son of August Petersen, had the Legion land on the market for 10 years. Wood is the son-in-law of Fred Petersen, who retired several years ago. He had no comment about the Legion land, insisting it was sold privately by the Legion and that "it was not on the market with Petersen Realty for 10 years." Petersen Realty sales manager Frank Pattison, said that as far as he knew the land was never on the market through Petersen Realty.

Fred Petersen, although disinclined to discuss the issue because of familial involvements, said that he was "disappointed with the disposition" of the land. He indicated that if there were any connections between the land and Petersen Realty, he wasn't aware of them because he has been retired from the firm for approximately 10 years.

"Tests were done on the land by some developer," Petersen recollected, of the Legion's sale efforts. "It didn't perc, they weren't able to unload it," he said. "My father was like Martin Luther King — he had a dream," he added.

The tests that Petersen alluded to were probably those of Paul Reynolds, a real estate appraiser and consultant from Braintree, which were performed several years ago and submitted to George Jednick, the former chairman of the Legion's land committee. They weren't percolation tests, however; they were test borings, which according to O'Brien "don't mean a hoot." Those borings showed that there was some but not all buildable land there, he said, on Reynolds' 56 lot plan.

Conservation Commission Chairman John Hubbard agreed, in effect, that some of the land was developable. "It could stand some sensible development along the road," he commented, "but there are wetlands when you get in back. Some one should be watchdogging those developments."

Hubbard's dual feelings about the land reflected the attitude of the 1976 Conservation Commission which submitted an article pertaining to the land in the town warrant, anyway. The article asked the town to appropriate $100,000 "to acquire by purchase eminent domain or otherwise from George H. Mealy Post No. 118 Legion, Inc. a certain parcel of vacant land for conservation purposes consisting of 70 acres, more or less, on the Northeasterly side of Forest Avenue." The article was defeated by a hand vote, Yes, 60 to No, 238.

No percolation tests had been performed at that time, nor have they been since, except on the four lots which were sold by LesAnn Associates where four homes were built by Alltown Construction Company during the past two years. Hubbard surmised that the townspeople questioned the extensive percability of the land, and that there was then the matter of the pricetag.

Pompeo said he was disappointed the land wasn't picked up by the town. "It was a very fair price, it would have made a beautiful park and recreational area. I'm very disappointed the town didn't buy it." He recommended there should be riding and bicycle trails and footpaths there so that people could enjoy the beauty of the woods. "Some day there will be," he said.

As for the land's percability, Pompeo responded that it would be "foolish to do a perc test now" and indicated that he would wait for a higher water table to be established so that both perc and water table tests could be done together as they are costly. Pompeo is now sitting as chairman of the Board of Health, and when questioned about a possible appearance of a conflict of interest when Title V requirements on the land were reviewed by that board, he said he hadn't thought that far ahead.

Pompeo explained that percolation tests are performed by a licensed engineer and witnessed by the town's Health Agent. The Board of Health then decides if the application for a disposal permit meets the Title V requirements. Pompeo said he only intends to make one such application — for the home he intends to build for himself and his family on the land. What his position will be on the Board of Health at that time, he said, was "way ahead" of him.

O'Brien noted that nothing has come before the board concerning LesAnn Associates, but that if it did while Pompeo was a board member, he guessed that Pompeo would have to absent himself at those meetings. Hubbard expressed the same caution, noting that "there could be a direct conflict of interest."

What about the land itself? A walk through approximately 40 acres of the land with Pompeo revealed lushness, ledge and a lot of small wildlife. One-third of the trees should come out, Pompeo said, according to the advice of state forester David Holster. Selective thinning and the planting of bushes will help attract more birds, he said.

"There is a fantastic variety of trees here," Pompeo said, enumerating hickory, maple, birch, hemlock, pine and more. He also rattled off the array of wildlife he has seen in the woods — foxes, chipmunks, pheasants, owls. He pointed out Colorado Rock, a portion of ledge so named because of its steep incline and pretty view from the top. All the while he stressed his desire to see the land used for recreational and conservation purposes.

Although LesAnn Associates have a plan approved for 33 lots for that same land, what will become of that plan, whether it will ever be developed to its fullest — in other words, whether 30 odd homes will appear there — is unknown.

Riding Club Show Sunday

The Cohasset Riding Club will sponsor its third annual horse show Sunday, Aug. 5 at 9 a.m. in Whitney Woods Field, Rt. 3A. Parking will be available at the Mobile Station across the street from the field.

The show is open to children and adults and will feature pleasure and equitation classes. The club would like to receive entries by Friday Aug. 3. In the event of rain, the show will be postponed until September.

A stuffed horse will be raffled the day of the event. Tickets will be available at the field. The club is also supplying a food and refreshments table.

The public is invited.

Around Town

The Globe's yachting writer John Ahern singled out three Cohasset skippers for recognition: Sam Wakeman and Ed Hill of Atlantic Avenue, and Kingsley Durant of Beach Street. These three hold high credentials in the field of ocean racing.

Storyteller Virginia Tashjian At The Pratt

Virginia Tashjian, author and storyteller will be guest storyteller at Paul Pratt Memorial Library Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the children's room. School-aged children and their parents are invited to attend.

Mrs. Tashjian has been a professional storyteller for many years in the Boston area as well as an instructor of children's literature at Bridgewater State College. She has written three books for children: "Once There was and Was Not", "Juba This and Juba That", and "Three Apples Fell From Heaven". She is currently Director of the Newton Free Library.

This series of evening storyhours for families to enjoy together continues next week with Anne Hayden, children's librarian and storyteller of Marshfield, telling tales of Appalachia.

Aces Worth $1000

Two Cohasset residents are eligible to win $1,000 and a free trip to Scotland as a result of scoring holes-in-one recently. They are: Jeanne Topper of 37 Old Coach Road, who scored her ace at the Cohasset Golf Club, and Arthur Washburn of 520 North Main Street, who shot his at the Heritage Hill Country Club. Their aces qualified them for the Rusty Nail Hole-In-One Sweepstakes sponsored by the Drambuie Liqueur Company of Edinburgh, Scotland. The winner of the 19th annual competition will be announced early next year.

☐Four residents of Cohasset achieved academic distinction during the second semester of the 1978-79 academic year and are on the dean's list of Colby College. They are Ingrid Gjesteby, George Powers, Joanne Shannon and Lawrence Drago.

Art Enrollment Underway

Landscape painting in the Cohasset area is now being enrolled at the South Shore Art Center for a six class session beginning Thursday, Aug. 9. The class will meet Tuesdays and Thursdays from 10 to 12:30 and will be taught by Margaret Dillon. Students may use their choice of medium — oil, watercolor, acrylic and should be on the intermediate/advanced level. Color, form and composition taken from the living landscape will be the focus of the course.

Margaret Dillon has exhibited both on the South Shore and in Boston with recent one-woman shows at Schnabel Gallery and the South Shore Art Center.

Obituaries

Jerome Whitney

Jerome Andrew Whitney, Jr., 51, a retired vice president of Commercial Union Assurance Companies of Boston, died Sunday in South Shore Hospital, Weymouth, following a long illness.

Born in Springfield, Mr. Whitney had been a resident of Cohasset for the past four years. He had also resided in West Simsbury, Conn. for many years.

He attended Cathedral High School, Springfield, and was a 1950 graduate of Holy Cross College. He graduated from Rutgers University Law School in 1953.

As vice president of the Boston firm, he headed its nationwide claims operation. He formerly worked for Aetna Life and Casualty Insurance Company.

He was a member of St. Anthony's Church and Cohasset Yacht Club.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Carol Ann (Cronin) Whitney; a son, J. Andrew Whitney III, and a daughter, Sarah Mary Whitney, both of the home address; his mother, Mrs. J. A. (Desautels) Whitney of Springfield and Groton Long Point, Conn.; two brothers, Emery R. Whitney of Northfield and David R. Whitney of Three Rivers; a sister, Mrs. James (Eleanor) King of McLean, Va.

A funeral Mass was celebrated Wednesday in St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Donations may be made to the Peter Bent Brigham Building Fund or Jimmy Fund, 44 Binney St., Boston.

Erline Berens

Mrs. Erline (LeVangia) Berens, 54, of East Providence, R.I., formerly of Cohasset and Scituate, died Saturday at the Cranston, R.I. General Hospital.

Born in Lynn, she had lived in Cohasset and Scituate before moving to East Providence a year ago.

She attended Mt. Joseph Academy in Chelsea.

She was a member of the Cohasset Sailing and Garden Club.

She leaves her husband, J. Stanton Berens, a Providence, R.I. public relations executive and former news manager with United Press International in Boston; three sons, John Berens and Carl Berens, both of Marshfield and Michael Berens of Scituate; a sister, Mrs. Frank Jameson of Foxboro; a brother, William LeVangia of Everett; and three grandchildren.

Private funeral services were held Tuesday at the Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset. Burial was also private.

Storm Kicks Up Over Wheelwright Riding Ri

BEATING HEAT — Nancy Salesky and Patrick Donovan share a refreshing dip at the Swim Center as one way to beat the weather while Jim McCarthy prefers the ocean at Sandy Beach and even is cool enough to play ball.

The repeated attempts by the Cohasset Riding Club and their subsequent failures to quell the flying dust by watering and by recently laying a "rotten stone" covering over portions of the ring, brought 40 concerned residents, riders and parents to air the matter at last week's Selectmen's meeting.

Selectmen have agreed to allow an oil treatment on the Wheelwright Park town riding ring.

Should town or state officials feel that the oil is creating any pollution or ill effects to the environment all oiled sand must be removed.

Despite the heat, adults and children stood in the crowded Selectmen's office for an hour, debating the question of oil applications to the ring and its effects on the environment.

Sally Davenport, spokesman for the group, reiterated the Club's research on the efficacy of the oil application. She said they found that application of oil with sand or stone dust was the only procedure that would work. The Club has checked the problem with the Water Department, the Conservation Commission, and the Water Resources Commission of the state Division of Water Pollution Control. Il have given approval, Davenport said.

She noted in p approval of the engineer from the Water Resources Commission. That decision was based on the condition that drainage characteristics will not change, ponded precipitation at the northeast corner of the horse ring will not contain free floating oil, and that whenever residues of oil do appear at that location measures will be taken to contain and remove them.

The most recent opinion from the Conservation Commission was that a small (two barrels worth of low grade water-based oil) amount of oil, well worked in, wouldn't travel horizontally nor cross North Main Street. Davenport also showed pictures of an oiled ring which displayed no damage to vegetation, even though the ring lies below the majority of the property.

"There is very little damaging effect to the environment and we felt it would be the best answer," she said. "It is the only possible solution."

A petition from 25 residents in the area opposed the oil treatment. Arthur Lehr of North Main Street felt that the placing of oil in Wheelwright

Disco Fever Hits But Alls Cool

Disco fever hit Cohasset Winter Gardens Saturday night. Everyone kept his cool, though, as the temperatures necessary to maintain the ice provided the 300 skaters and dancers with a needed respite from the three week heat wave.

The extensive lighting system and largely disco music program transformed the otherwise somber 85' by 185' skating rink into a swirling, kaleidescopic carousel. Skaters spun round and round, while those who chose to keep their shoes on their feet danced on a non-slip carpeted dance floor at center ice.

It was a little too cool for disco garb, during the two and a half hour session DJed by Bill Stephen of WVBF (F 105), unless skaters followed Stephen's commands to "change polarities," reverse direction

Cohasset Cool To Hull Casino Prospects

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Last week the Legislature's Government Regulations Committee recommended a bill that would create a gaming control commission and allow casinos in Berkshire and Barnstable counties. As presently drafted the bill would not permit casinos in Norfolk or Plymouth counties, but proponents of the bill say it will be ammended to include Plymouth County, and that it will have a local option clause.

Although in 1977 Hull voters supported a non-binding gaming resolution 2-1, most state and local officials feel it is unlikely that Hull would ever be chosen as a casino site. Nevertheless, a Springfield developer has offered to buy the 58-acre Hall Estate in Hull (near West Corner) for a casino site.

And the fact remains that some South Shore residents have long lamented the lack of a convention hotel in the area as a year-round drawing card. But hotel chains are not interested in building in any area without a drawing card. Casinos are the new drawing cards.

Some proponents of the present gaming bill feel that the energy crisis may have an effect on the legislators' mood when the bill comes up for a vote (this present session is not expected to deal with it. The bill will now go to the

John Carzis Dead At 79

By Judith Epstein

John Carzis was a man with an eye for potentiality; a man who had made a million, lost it, and made it back again — several times. He died at his home at the age of 79, after a long illness.

Long known as a restaurateur, and with plans of continuing his culinary excellence in a hotel-restaurant-marina complex on the Boston waterfront, he probably most gained his reputation as the 30-year owner of Hugo's Lighthouse Restaurant in Cohasset Harbor.

"He loved that place," said Joanne Winters, Carzis' function manager for 15 years. "He was never not there. He was there all day, seven days a week. He demanded a lot and he got it," she said. "Above all, he believed in himself."

Carzis' devotion to work was clearly visible. He used to proudly escort new acquaintances through the Lighthouse's many dining rooms, pointing out the shimmering water view from vast windows and the place where boaters could temporarily moor their craft while enjoying his cuisine.

Disco

and boogie away.

According to Paul Parsons of Parsons Electric, four sets of quartz lights, four 'bubble-gum' blinkers, strobe lights and a revolving mirror ball extended from the middle of the roof, created the light show. A small computerized control system changed the patterns of colors.

Similarly, music programmer Michael Zotos perfectly timed the disco selections and a few slower numbers. One couple danced lovingly and nostalgically in each others arms to the tune of "Surfer Girl" by the Beach Boys.

Rink owner, Peter Breen, was very pleased at the attendance. "It's clean fun," he remarked. "It's over at 11 p.m., there's no booze and the kids are having a great time." Breen estimated that the venture, aimed toward the popular craze to boost business, attracted all age groups from Boston on down to the South Shore. He has an idea, however, that separate disco ice skating programs will be provided for those 14 and under, as well as for older groups in the future.

It was quasi dark in the rink despite the artificial aurora borealis, but there were no bad spills or accidents, nor did Breen anticipate any. Venturing out past the skaters onto the 20' by 20' dance floor for a turn or two herself, this reporter can personally testify that it was a literal case of the light fantastic.

What you like is what you get at Papa Gino's Grand Opening:

At a lot of restaurants, you take what you get. At Papa Gino's, you get what you like.

Like seafood? Try our delicious Mile-Long Seafood Salad Roll, served on a bed of fresh lettuce in a toasted roll.

Like pasta? Our Papa Platter features all your favorites on one plate. Spaghetti, shells, and plump cheese ravioli. Together with a homemade meatball and spaghetti sauce.

Like pizza? At Papa Gino's we're famous for it, and the reason is simple: We never cut corners on quality. We start with the freshest dough, rich tomato sauce, and 3 cheeses for extra flavor. Whole milk mozzarella, Wisconsin cheddar and imported Italian romano. Then we top it off with whatever you like.

Like hamburgers? Our Papa Burger is 100% extra-lean beef cooked to order. With melted cheese, crisp lettuce and special dressing on a toasted sesame seed bun.

Like french fries? We use Grade A Fancy western potatoes cooked in pure vegetable shortening.

Like free gifts? We're giving away pizza cutters to the first 1000 people who stop by. And we'll have free balloons (while they last) for the kids.

Like salad? The secret is fresh vegetables and that's just what you get along with your choice of dressings.

Like meatball subs? We make our own meatballs from extra-lean ground beef, romano cheese, fresh eggs and seasonings.

Hull Gaming

House Ways and Means Committee for study).

The energy crisis could have the effect of convincing at least Boston politicians to keep convention centers assessible to Boston — one of the biggest tourist attractions in the country.

Does Hull still want gaming? A resolution calling for casino gambling was turned down by a sparsley-attended town meeting in Hull this year, but it is felt by many Hull residents that the 1977 2-1 mandate in favor still represents the will of the electorate.

Chain letter "gambling" and lotteries can be played more or less privately. Those who wish to gamble by these methods can do so via a local merchant, or with the aid of a stamp. Chain letters and lotteries don't cause traffic jams.

Dog racing, horse racing, car racing and casinos require that large edifices be built. Invariably traffic congestion occurs, and sometimes small unsuspecting neighborhoods get squeezed in the process.

The bill which is presently on its way to the House Ways and Means Committee is still only a paper tiger. But with an amendment or two and a local option clause, it could develop some sharp teeth. As one town official readily admitted: "These are the kinds of things that do sneak up on you."

If a casino were to be built in Hull, Eugene Price feels there might at first be a "flurry" of interest from residents in the area, but feels that after the newness of a casino wore off the permanent casino clientel would be from urban areas.

"There's not only the aspect of gambling to consider... there's the element which gravitates to places like that," Price said.

William Morgan feels controls would be imperitive. While he feels there might be some fast-paced community growth in Hull, he said, Hingham and Cohasset could contain any rush for multi-family housing. Morgan added that the town might realize some beneficial "spin-offs" from a Hull casino, such as entertainment and dining trade.

Undesirable fringe industries such as loan companies and prostitution are what Martha Gjesterby, school committeewoman, foresees with a Hull casino. "It would have to have an effect on Cohasset. Las Vegas is a special situation — it's isolated. A Hull casino would effect the whole South Shore."

Ms. Gjesterby feels that if Hull has major problems with its tax base, it should work harder at attracting light industry with tax incentives.

While he feels the great middle class would treat a casino as an entertainment vehicle, Lester Hiltz feels that poor who could not afford it would be hurt, while the rich would discover a way to beat the system.

Although most of those interviewed did not condemn outright the possibility of a casino in the area, no one really spoke in glowing terms of such an industry.

Notable Quotes

☐Eugene K. Price, realtor — "A going casino in Hull wouldn't depress me. I don't feel there would be any long-term effects."

☐William Morgan, self-employed businessman — "If it were controlled I wouldn't be against it. Over the years Paragon Park has been a tourist attraction — there's never been any overflow to Cohasset."

☐Rocco Laugelle, selectman — "I don't feel the town of Cohasset would care for this sort of thing. Immediately, we'd have 3A problems. I feel 90 percent (of the gamblers) would use the expressway."

☐Police Officer Paul Laugelle — "I don't feel there would be any more effect on traffic than there is with Paragon Park."

☐Paul Cogill — "I'd vote against it because I'm not a gambler."

☐Donna Cogill — "I'm not for it or against it; but if I had to vote on the question I'd probably vote against it."

☐Pat Facey, chairman of the planning board — "We've never considered it. I suspect it would have implications, but it's always seemed like such a nebulous thing. Obviously it's something to keep our eyes on."

☐Henry Ainslie, selectman — "Personally I can't see that it would adversely effect Cohasset. I believe if Hull wants it, it should have it."

Martha Gjesterby, school committeewoman — "It would change the whole area, I wouldn't want it in Massachusetts."

☐Lester Hiltz — "I don't think there would be that much effect on Cohasset — it would effect Hingham more."

☐Mary G. Keating — "I really don't think it will ever take place."

☐Warren Pratt, chairman, board of assessors — "I'm against casinos in Massachusetts. I don't want to see any more gambling than the present lotteries."

☐Jean B. Cotton, advisory committee — "We've never discussed it."

Storm

Park would present a problem to youngsters and animals that inadvertently walked through the oiled area. That land, he continued, is a natural drainage area, and to add an unnatural substance there would act as a contaminant. He suggested continued watering of the ring, despite Davenport's protestations that the ring dries too quickly for watering to be of any longlasting value.

Those Lazy, Hazy Crazy Days....

By Judith Epstein

The awful, oppressive, hazy, humid weather pretends to be over. I'm afraid it's all a ruse, that it will come back.

I am one of those people, who, despite an air-conditioned office, fans blowing everywhere, and the occasional sea breeze, is hot.

Devils arise in me in the summer that never would dare appear in the winter. I dream of ripping off my clothes and standing in front of an open refrigerator 24 hours a day. I long to ride on the back of a motorcycle at full tilt all night long. I want to pitch myself into the Atlantic from the nearest bridge.

But one does just not do these things every day — too wasteful, dangerous or improper. So, I stand waist deep in the ocean or swimming pool, splashing myself for only momentary relief. The notion of an even sun tan seems absurdly vain now. The watery respite is really of little help, after all, I realize as I climb into my Chevy's black interior for the sickeningly sticky ride back home.

My Scituate apartment offers no refuge, for it is an old place, where the screens refuse to fit the windows and where flies swarm if those are kept open. Convincing myself that it is just as well to keep the hot air out, I take tepid showers. Five of them a day — something I haven't done since my visits home from college.

Other malevolent spirits invade me besides those craving coolness. The worst is the one in the form of insomnia. I lie in bed awake, a clammy sheet my only covering. I can hear my roommate's even breathing in the next room; she has fallen mercifully into the arms of Morpheus, her own bared limbs flopped obliviously over the side of the bed.

I envy her, and the cat, Scooter, who has fallen over like a thing dead, all fours in the air. I lower myself to the floor and listen for her breath. Her auburn flank still rises and falls, thank God; she'll be 16 years old soon.

Just when I am most acutely uncomfortable, I detect a quickening of the air, the sheet lightning which has been flashing on and off all night like a demented neon sign appears more ominous. I pray for a horrendous thunder storm to clear the air, but the lightning illuminations of my room never worsen and it never rains.

I get out of bed and rummage around gathering my notebooks, my journals, my old reporting pads — the exertion of movement alone makes me sweat — in an effort to occupy myself with something other than the heat. I arrange them all around me and start to read. "Could I have written that only four months ago?" I think, when something bites me, a mosquito, a flea, who knows. I lie back on the pillow, resolutely miserable, until somewhere in the blue hours of morning I awake to find that I have slept a few hours, the impression of a notebook's spiral binding pressed into my cheek.

The worst poltergeist inhab-

Due to the resignation of the Chairman Dr. Stephen O'Connor which was accepted by the Board at its last meeting, they voted Dr. Roger Pompeo, Chairman.

LAND FILL NEWS

Board member Marilyn Sweeney met with Mr. Thomas Clougherty of DEQE to check conditions at the Town's Landfill, Tyeryar Landfill, and the Rosano Septage Fill area. In consideration of Mr. Clougherty's comments concerning conditions at the Town's Landfill, and in an effort to extend the life of the Landfill, the Board unanimously voted to ban demolition wastes at the Town's Landfill.

The Board, in conjunction with the Health Agent, Mr. Kevin O'Brien, reminds the citizens the Landfill's hours are 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Tuesday, Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday. There are receptacles for paper, glass, aluminum and white metal (appliances, etc.) re-cycling. Using re-cycling techniques will aid the lifespan of the Sanitary Landfill, which is supervised by Mr. Joseph Laugelle.

At a previous meeting, the Board had voted to disapprove the Town of Hull's School Department dumping of asbestos in the Tyeryar Landfill.

In other business, the Board voted to direct Mr. Tyeryar to have all trucks entering his Landfill covered for the safety of the Townspeople.

DOG BITES

The Board reminds everyone that all dog-bite reports should be made to the Department of Health (383-1664) under State and local statute.

OFFICE HOURS

The Board and its Health Agent have established regular office calling hours for the Agent (8:30-9:30 a.m.) and Wednesday mornings (8:30 a.m. to 12 noon), barring emergencies. These hours have been established to meet the needs of all the citizens of the Town. The office is staffed by Secretarial personnel from the Sewer Department during the hours of 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., and by the Health Department's Secretary from 1-4:30 p.m.

DEADLINE

The Board has instituted a policy that all materials pertinent to its meetings which are held on the second and fourth Mondays of each month must be submitted to the Health Department offices at 43 Elm Street, by noon of the preceeding Friday. This material includes all plans, applications, appointments in connection with the Agenda.

APPOINTMENT DISCUSSED

The Selectmen and the Board of Health will meet jointly on August 15, 1979, to discuss the appointing of a third member of the Board. The position expires next year. The Board is asking for volunteers, especially for persons with executive ability.

JURY DUTY

Margery Antoine of Elm Court and Kevin Leary of Forest Avenue have been selected for October civil and criminal jury duty.

ROCK & ROLL

Selectmen have approved a Town Hall Dance, sponsored by the Swim Center, for Aug. 15 from 7:30 to 11 p.m. Proceeds from the dance will go toward a teenage pool party for all town teenagers at the Center. The rock and roll music will be played by "Naked Truth," a band from Rhode Island. Two police officers and 12 chaperones will supervise the dance both inside and outside the Town Hall.

CIRCUS SIGN

The permit for the Route 3A South Shore Music Circus sign has been renewed for another year. Building Inspector James Litchfield said the sign is in conformity with town bylaws.

SAND DUNE

Safety Officer James Rhodes requested that the mound of sand at the entrance of Sandy Beach be removed as it blocks driving vision. Selectmen will have Tree and Park Superintendent Peter Laugelle assess the situation.

STONE BREAKWATER

Engineer Richard Dumas from the Disaster Recovery Team discussed the reconstruction of the stone breakwater on the Bellarmine property last week with Selectman Arthur Clark. Dumes expressed the need for Hickey Associates, the engineers for the reconstruction, to have a hearing with the Conservation Commission because the Jesuit property involved are wetlands.

Preliminary plans have been submitted by Hickey Associates for Selectmen's approval, so that bids for construction can be advertised.

Also needed before repairs can begin is a permit from the Army Corps of Engineers and an easement from the Jesuits for the work to be done on their land.

Construction will probably be underway in the fall, Clark said, and can be continued in the winter.

PAPA GINO'S

Papa Gino's Restaurant in Cushing Plaza opened for business last week. Although the liquor license hadn't been finally approved in time for the opening, a beer and wine license is forthcoming.

TOWN HALL CLOSED

According to Arthur Clark, an old standing policy closes down the Town Hall in the afternoon when the thermometer reaches 90 degrees. "When it's 90 degrees outside, it's 90 degrees inside," Clark commented of the unairconditioned Town Hall.

"People will have to come back," he said, of those who had business to attend to at various offices that were closed. The only air-conditioned room in the building is not for the employees, Clark said, but for the computer. Therefore the computer help stays, as does a skeletal crew.

At the Town Hall last Thursday in the brutal heat were the computer room help, Town Accountant William Signorelli, Clark, and clerk Edwina Migliacco — above and beyonders.

Recreation & Safety

To the Editor:

As one of the two kayakists who were fortunate to have saved a young swimmer from possible drowning in Cohasset's Mill River on Saturday evening August 4, 1979, I feel that it is important to try to save additional lives, while preserving and maintaining the unique recreational values Mill River affords both kayakers and swimmers during the incoming tide.

The accident was approximately as follows: about half a dozen girls in the age 15 range had been enjoying swimming through the Mill River waves on the rising tide. After several runs under the Border Street bridge, they continued "upriver" until they reached a private float. The current was swift, and while holding onto a rowboat upstream of the float, the boat flipped and was carried by the current under the float. It was a classical case of entrapment, with the boat's chain crossing the victim's belly and legs, pinning her against the dock. The boat, upside down under the dock, was applying constant pressure against the victim, with the waves slapping water above her mouth. Girlish shrieks of glee changed subtly to dismay. There were no cries of help — everyone was just hysterical.

The rescue itself was reasonably simple, once the boaters were able to sort out the confusing audible signals and got to the scene. Another bystander sought additional help. The boaters were able to calm everyone down, and while holding the victim's head above water, relieved some of the tension on the chain so, once relaxed, the victim was able to work herself free just as professional assistance arrived at the scene.

Luckily we were at the right place at the right time to have averted serious trouble and the inevitable tragedy; the Cohasset Police and Fire Departments response time was phenomenal; I'm sure that they too were pleased to have been able to have served as back-up, this time.

In trying to constructively evaluate the situation, I am reminded of a brief conversation with a fellow boater on a previous weekend. We were sitting in the eddy by the bridge, awaiting our turns to play the waves amid some 20 other boaters and about 100 swimmers. My companion asked, "who is looking after these kids?" and my reply was, "I'm afraid that we are!" I am frightened by the profundity of this discussion.

For serious boaters, the Mill River affords a unique opportunity for learning and improving paddling skills in moving water during the summer when water levels elsewhere are too low; the nearest alternative "playing spot" is over 100 miles from Boston.

For young swimmers in summer, the Mill River is a wonderful place to beat the heat and chill the blood in a similarly unique manner.

With some common sense it should be possible to avoid extreme danger if both boaters and swimmers would consider the following points:

—Boaters should realize that their boats are hard and have sharp ends, they are difficult to handle precisely in heavy water, and can be a hazard to swimmers; it is always sensible to look for swimmers before playing the waves.

—Swimmers should let the boaters know before they dive in, so the way will be clear; they should swim in groups both for safety and to give everyone a chance to have fun.

—Swimmers should resist the temptation of diving off the bridge or the high rocks — the risk of injury is too great; they should also swim with feet up to avoid sharp barnacles.

—A sensible boater will never boat alone; swimmers should have friends on the bank, who are responsible and able to render assistance if needed; friends and parents are better than police, life guards or the Harbormaster, since they don't have other duties and don't cost the town money; always be responsible for yourself and be ready to help others — just don't rely too heavily on them for your safety.

—Swimmers and boaters should remember that the rocks south of the bridge are on private land; it is unfair to the landowner if his property is abused; respect other people and pick up any litter while trying not to be overly noisy.

—Remember that Border Street is a public way — be aware of traffic and don't park to create a hazard.

In such a manner, we can all enjoy this unequalled summer oasis together, and hopefully we can continue to avert tragedy.

Very truly yours,
Roger Marshall

Carzis

"He did incredibly philanthropic things, personal things, for people he knew in town," Winters said, relating the too-numerous-to-count occasions when Carzis would send turkeys, hams and roast beefs to families experiencing a loss of a loved one.

Carzis' practice for helping the needy and aged has a history dating back to his first cafeteria in the North End, to another restaurant in Dorchester's Field Corner, and ultimately to Hugo's Lighthouse. Winters noted his practice of treating Boston area senior citizens to Christmas dinner at the restaurant in latter years. "He treated them, the employees, like a family," she said.

He wasn't much of a socializer, he stayed close to his family, said Selectman Arthur Clark. "He was a close friend of mine. He was a temperamental man, but a man with a big heart and a man who helped many people without any publicity about it. He was a humble man who worked hard all his life," Clark attested.

No task was too small or lowly for Carzis to attend to personally, Winter said. He could perform those with as much alacrity as he could the most complex of business dealings. In fact, one of the last times Carzis appeared in the restaurant before his illness absented him, he was seen examining the place settings, the glasses, and the lamps, in particular, with fastidious care. Displeased with the glass covering of a candlelit lamp, he called over an employee, and there, heads bent down intently, they examined the problem.

Resident Doris Golden was closer to Carzis, she said, than words could express. "He was a father to me and to my husband," she said. Emotion prevented her from commenting further.

Carzis had his share of troubles with the community, however, largely over the construction of Kimballs by the Sea Motor Inn on Border Street, another prime location overlooking the harbor. The liquor license was granted for the patrons of the motor inn, but not for the general public a restriction which Carzis felt would be a detriment to his business.

Carzis was a Greek immigrant, who came to this country when he was 15 years old. He lived first in Lynn and then moved to Boston. He was decorated twice by the Greek government for his service to the Greek War Relief during World War II. He was also bestowed the title of Arcon, the highest honor a lay person can receive, by the Greek Orthodox Church.

Carzis leaves two sisters, Anastatsia Catsonis of Maryland and Effie Christodoulou of Athens, Greece. Services were held at 11 a.m. Wednesday in the Greek Orthodox Cathedral of New England on Ruggles Street in Roxbury.

First Parish, Congregational Services

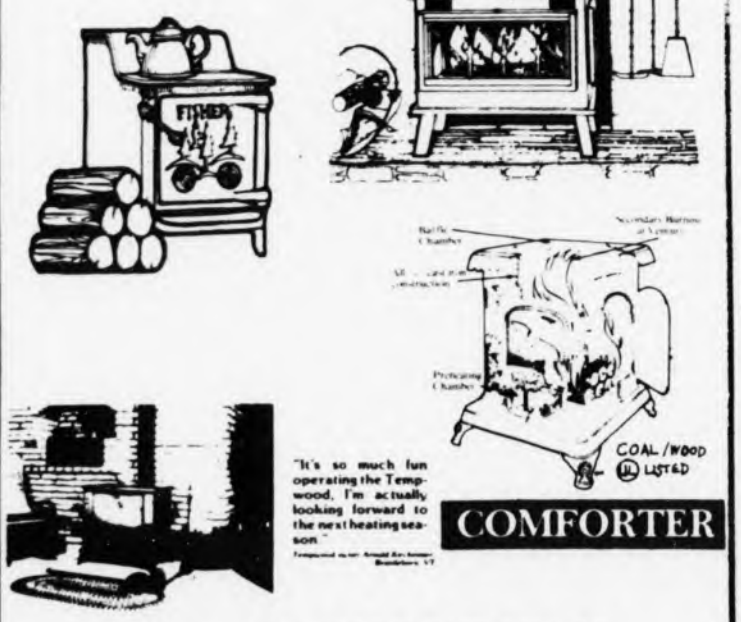
Joint services of First Parish Church and Second Congregational Church will continue through Labor Day weekend, with the remaining services held in the Congregational Church at 10 a.m. each Sunday.

During the Sundays of August special outdoor services will also be held at 8:30 a.m. at Government Island in Cohasset Harbor. The outdoor services will be brief, informal and suitable for families with small children.

Special music for the 10 a.m. services will include the following:

August 5, Edgar White, tenor.

August 12, Theodore Haines, trumpet.



August 19, Sally Saplin and Jeanne Scammell, vocal duet.

August 26, Lori Reynolds, oboe.

September 2, Constance Zweifel and Ellen Fryling, piano and organ.

Nursery service will be available during the 10 a.m. service. The Rev. John Benbow, Minister of Second Congregational Church, will lead the services and preach.

☐Navy Seaman Recruit Michael Palimeri, son of Patrick and Kathleen Palimeri, son of Patrick and Kathleen Palimeri of 3347 N. Main St., has completed recruit training at the Naval Training Center, San Diego. A 1979 graduate of Cohasset High School, he joined the Navy in September 1978.

☐Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Henderson of Jerusalem Road announce the arrival of a daughter, Emily Elizabeth Blehr, July 9. They also have a son, Christopher, 5. Grandparents are Capt. and Mrs. Thor Magnusson of Weymouth, and Mrs. John Henderson of Pittsfield.

☐Mr. John Keane of Black Horse Lane was awarded the Graves Plaque on Sunday for finishing first aboard "Gezgo" in the annual race for the 210 Class held in Scituate. Keane's crew was Steve Bobo, Jr. and Rick White, both of Cohasset.

Usually a three race event, Keane won the prize for Saturday's race since the two on Sunday were fogbound. An open invitational event for all 210's from the East Coast and Mid-West sailing groups, the annual race alternates between the two locations. Out of a total of 33 boats, nine from Cohasset participated.

☐Winners of the Annual Children's Hospital Benefit Mixed Doubles Tennis Tournament, held in Cohasset on Aug. 4 and 5, were Diana and Lowry Bell, of Gammons Road. Runners-up were Tom Wall and Ann Horne of Scituate. Consolation winners were Ann Whelan of Atlantic Avenue and John Florescu, a Romanian-born Cohasset resident. Consolation runners-up were Carol McManus and Jack Simpson, also of Cohasset.

The fund-raising event which has been held for more than 25 years, drew 64 teams, with a waiting list of 16, and 150 spectators. In addition to the $15 entry fee for each team, money was raised through the sale of lunch, drinks, T-shirts, raffle tickets and many donations were received.

Mrs. William C. Cox of Margin Street donated her tennis court for the two-day event. Tournament Chairman, Katie Whelan of Atlantic Avenue, was very pleased with the turnout and gratified by people's generosity.

☐Amy Sylvester Katoh of Tokyo, Japan has been visiting her former hometown with her husband, Yuichi, and children Mia (12), Saya (10), Tai (9), and Toshi (5). The girls, Mia and Saya, are visiting with the Diarmuid O'Connell's of Sohier Street and the Bennett Driscoll's of N. Main Street, respectively. Amy, her husband, and the boys are staying in Weston.

Amy is the proprietor of a shop in Tokyo, named Blue & White, where she sells modern-day clothing items fashioned in the old traditional Asian color combination in newer, imaginative patterns. She also works with Refugees International, a two month old consciousness raising organization started in Tokyo to assist Asian refugees. They work in cooperation with other volunteer agencies to funnel money, medical aid and volunteers to help these displaced people. A side goal of the organization has become the search for a 200 sq. mile homeland for the 'land' and 'boat' people as they are now known.

Shortly before coming to the U.S., Amy visited some of the land camps in Thailand where Laotians, Vietnamese, and Cambodians are sheltered temporarily. Her interest was twofold, as she collected some of the hand-crafted cushions, aprons, and oven gloves that these people are making there with material supplied by a Christian Missionary group. She marveled that out of the general filth of these camps came these gorgeous things full of color and life. She sold them immediately in her Tokyo shop. The money from selling these pieces goes directly into the hands of those who make them. She is looking for a U.S. outlet to sell them through.

The Katoh family spent a week riding horses in Wyoming before their arrival in Mass. and will visit Africa on their return trip to Japan. Mr. Katoh works for the American Express Bank in Tokyo.

☐Navy Commander Tyrone Martin of Pond Street, retired captain of the U.S.S. Constitution, was honored recently at a reception at the gallery of the Constitution Museum in honor of the publication of his book Old Ironsides, a history of that ship.

☐James Carroll, active in Boston politics for over 20 years, was recently elected Chairman of the Cohasset Town Democratic Committee. He supports Gov. Edward King, and also lends active and strong support to John J Moakley, the U.S. Rep. from the 9th District.

☐James Joseph Farren of 40 Stockbridge St., has been named to the Dean's list at Stonehill College in Easton.

☐The latest chain letter multiplying around town is not one of color or four figures, but, phew, a 25 cent postcard circular for kids. It is sanctioned by the U.S. Postal Dept. as "an educational game for kids." Are there any postcards of Minot's Light left in town?

☐Young thrill-seekers have gone from jumping off of Cunningham's Bridge to surfing under it on a home-made board which they attach to the bridge with two tethers. The surfer holds onto a trapeze-like line as he stands on the board, and when the tide surges through the channel the ride is not unlike one on an ocean wave.

☐The Globe's yachting writer John Ahern singled out three Cohasset Yacht Club skippers for recognition: Sam Wakeman of Atlantic Ave., Kingsley Durant of Fairoaks Lane, Cohasset, and Edwin Hills, of Hingham. These three hold high credentials in the field of ocean racing.

Air Conditioning Bowling Boost

With the temperatures soaring into the nineties, and kids wanting to beat the heat, the Cohasset Community Center introduced their latest renovation feature — an air conditioner in the bowling alleys.

Director of Bowling, Bill O'Connell said, "The cooler temperature makes bowling a pleasure at a time when it's too hot outdoors for even just standing around." To make everything even more enjoyable, Bill announced a "Summer special for the month of August — three strings for a dollar, the best deal in town."

The alleys will be open from 3 to 5 p.m. every afternoon and from 7 to 10 p.m. each evening. Of course, the senior citizens keep cool, bowling as a league every Wednesday morning. The Center welcomes any new groups and will open the alleys and the "air" for any special interest group. For information, call Bill O'Connell at 383-0088 or 383-1586.

Asked To Maintain Cemetery

Philip Tye, who recently completed a Boy Scout project by cleaning up Cedar Street Cemetery, wrote to Selectmen and asked that the small cemetery be kept up properly by the town. Tye included a map of unidentified tombstones dating back more than 100 years; the young man was commended for his efforts, which went toward his earning the status of Eagle Scout.

Selectmen agreed to ask Tree and Park Superintendent Peter Laugelle to maintain the cemetery.

Carillon Concert Continues

The music of the 51 cast bronze bells of the Jessie M. Barron Memorial Carillon in the tower of Saint Stephen's Church, Cohasset, continues each Sunday afternoon, from 4 to 5 p.m. until September 30.

The guest artist for the program on August 12 will be Leen 'T Hart, the distinguished composer, performer, and teacher, who is Director of the Royal Dutch Carillon School in Amersfoort, The Netherlands. Mr. 'T Hart has given recitals extensively throughout Europe, and North and South America, and has taught many of the prominent carillonneurs of the United States.

'T Hart's program will consist of a wide range of music of general interest, including works of the classical period, folksong arrangements, and a number of his own compositions. Printed programs will be distributed at no charge at the time of the recital.

Listening is good from the Cohasset Common and adjacent areas, including the courtyard at the base of the carillon tower.

iting me, my apartment, the whole town, is a sort of nastiness, a crankiness occurring when suffering from lack of sleep, a sour stomach from the inability to eat anything from the sweaty refrigerator, or from the inevitable distress of giving up cigarettes because the air quality is so bad.

This awful disease undoes me. I am not the crying kind, but I am crying five times a day now. The letter that didn't come from my girlfriend in New York, the one the mailman obviously saw was for me and ripped up; those phony telephone calls charged to my number by some cruel person; the gas station which shuts down just as I pull in; the squashed chipmunk on the road; the Log and Line not having any more blueberry muffins — occasions all, to cry.

My mother has to start accepting collect calls home again, although I have long since considered myself beyond submitting to this practice. (I find out that my roommate's mother has been accepting similar tearful calls home from her daughter.) Will I finally be grown up when my mother doesn't accept the charges, when I learn to handle the heat in a more civilized fashion? Do those things ever happen? I don't think so.

When winter comes I will be saner, the bad ghosts will be exorcized from me with the first Canadian blast. Then I'll be able to let the Scooter sleep on the bed with me again.

HERPOLOGICAL EXHIBIT

On Tuesday, Aug. 14, at 10 a.m. at the Osgood School Playground there will be a herpological exhibit and lecture presented by Bonnie Main of the Massachusetts Herpological Society. There is no charge for this program and the public is cordially invited. Playground programs will be held as usual.

BAND CONCERT

The fifth in a series of six concerts on the common will be held Tuesday, Aug. 21, at 7:30 p.m. at Town Common, weather permitting. The 30-piece South Shore Concert Band, under the direction of Richard Whitmarsh, will be performing such numbers as Born Free, highlights from Godspell, The Music Man, and Dixieland selections. The public is cordially invited to the free concerts. Please bring blankets or folding chairs.

MOVIE OF THE WEEK

Remember: Thursday, Aug. 9, "A Hard Day's Night", 7:30 p.m., Town Hall Auditorium.

On Thursday, Aug. 16, at 7:30 p.m., Town Hall, another "Beatles" film, "Yellow Submarine," will be shown. A unique and refreshing animation classic, starring the voices of the famous pop singing group "The Beatles". Songs, jokes and puns combine with surreal pop-art drawings forming the background for a story in which "The Beatles" try to save Pepperland from the Blue Meanies. A film for all ages. It remains imperative that younger children be accompanied by an adult or older responsible sibling. This evening movie ends at 8:55 p.m. and all children should be picked up promptly at that time.

Swimmers Sunk Twice In Scituate, Duxbury Meets

Cohasset Swim Team members had little time to notice the heat of the past week — they were busy competing in two separate meets.

In the contest with Scituate, team members who won two first places were Jamie Hoffman, Jonathan DeLima and Michael Abbruzzese. Those who won individual events were Janet Carlson, Julia Sechen, Bob Durkin, Polly Linden, Michael Cunning, Stephanie McAdams, John Jackson, Sean Cunning, Sara Tague, Eric Karcher, Billy McKenna and Ian Knox.

The final score was Scituate, 231 and Cohasset 173.

In the Duxbury contest, Stephanie McAdams took three first places. Swimmers who won two blue ribbons were Steven Camardo, Todd Fitzpatrick, Tina Birman, and Jennifer Ralff.

Team members who came in first in an individual event were Caroline Boonner, Tim Chamberlain, Jill Nedrow, Brends Birmann, Jane DeLima, John Jackson, Debby Andrews, Cathleen Buckley, Nancy Walls, Kimberley Harrington, Matthew Buckley, Emily Tague, Karen Ekberg, Joy Ditmar, Cindy Spooner and Jonathan DeLima.

The final score was Duxbury, 301.5, Cohasset 229.5.

Historical Society Schedules Final Clearance Yard Sale

A final clearance yard sale of all donated items to the Cohasset Historical Society, including some recent gift items, has been scheduled by Mrs. E. Lawrence Parker, Jr., president, for Saturday morning, August 11, 9 a.m. to noon, at the Lothrop House, 14 Summer Street, Cohasset.

"We have interior work on the Lothrop House planned for the immediate future and we must clear out all the items that have been donated to us for flea markets and yard sales," Mrs. Parker said. "All items have been especially marked down to go and there will be exceptional opportunities for bargains in very desirable articles. No reasonable offers on anything will be refused."

Articles for sale will include tools, draperies, furniture, collectibles, books, kitchenware and small appliances.

Story Hours Continue At Pratt

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library will continue its series of family story hours on Monday, August 13 at 7:30 p.m. in the children's room. School-aged children and their parents are invited to attend.

Ms. Anne Hayden, Children's Librarian from Ventress Public Library in Marshfield, will tell various Appalachian tales from collections of Jack Chase. Ms. Hayden has conducted and participated in story hour series of her own in Ventress and is an accomplished teller of tales. The program will end at about 8:30 p.m.

LAST LOOK — This is how St. Anthony's Church looked just before demolition razed the ancient structure . . .

St. Anthony's Of Old Falls To Demolition This Week

Old St. Anthony's Church on South Main Street is being demolished this week. Razed and filled to grade — those are the official terms that attempt to sterilize a condemned and unused building, yet they fail to do so this time.

The church will be remembered for its century-old history, its lovely gables and spire, and its extraordinary stained-glass windows which had been donated to the church by parishioners. The windows, statues, and wooden pews were dismantled before the Duane Company of Quincy moved in its demolition equipment. Only the carcass of the church remained early this week — after the solemn dismemberment — but the building's life and spirit will go on.

The church was used until 1963, said Rev. John Keohane, pastor of St. Anthony's, when the new church was built down the street on the corner of South Main and Summer Streets. After sharing its shelter with people from Cohasset and surrounding towns for almost 100 years, the church's history deserves an historical remembrance.

According to Bertram Pratt's "History of Cohasset," the beginnings of the Roman Catholic Church in Cohasset is tied closely to one of the most tragic happenings in town history — the destruction of the Irish immigrant ship "Sant John" off the coast. A Father Roddan of Quincy read prayers for the deceased of the vessel; Father Roddan returned to Cohasset again to celebrate Mass in the Town Hall for the Catholics of Cohasset.

"The account of Catholic parochial progress in Cohasset shows that Rev. Hugh P. Smyth, pastor of the Hingham Parish, celebrated Mass and conducted devotions in the Brennock home at the Cove, for several years.

Father Smyth was aided in his efforts by Catholics of Irish descent, as well as those of Portuguese origin," Pratt states. Their combined efforts finally resulted in the erection of the church in 1875. The church was under the patronage of Saint Anthony of Padua, the patron saint of lost articles.

"In 1886 Saint Anthony's Parish was set off from Saint Paul's Parish in Hingham. The parish lines were to embrace the towns of Cohasset, Marshfield, and Scituate. Rev. Michael J. Phelan was appointed parish priest in 1886, and was succeeded the following year by Rev. Ignatius Egan. During Father Egan's pastorate the church was enlarged and a rectory across the street from the church was purchased," Pratt's account read.

A chapel for the summer residents was erected in 1903 at Minot by Rev. William McDonough, Father Egan's successor. Father McDonough also saw three young men from his parish ordained to the priesthood.

EMTs At The Ready For Any Emergencies

Have you ever worried what would happen if you or someone in your family fell ill or had a terrible accident?

How soon would help arrive? What kind of treatment would be administered on the way to the hospital? These may be questions everyone wonders about, but dismisses as things that happen to other people.

Whether they happen to you or not, townspeople of Cohasset can rest assured that the Emergency Medical Technicians (EMTs) of the Fire Department, will assist at the scene of any physical distress, no matter the nature, within three minutes of a call to the station and continue support procedures until further medical treatment can be reached.

Ambulance Coordinator Richard Connolly of the Fire Department said that 12 of the 28 full-time firefighters in Cohasset are trained as EMTs. The EMT status, though distinct, is not separate from the position of firefighter. "We are firefighters first, going with a mission in mind to fight fires," Connolly said, but noted that an ambulance and engine responds to all calls. This practice provides a minimum of four men — two of these EMT — at any scene.

The modular ambulance acquired in 1977 with money appropriated by Town Meeting, established the Fire Department as the headquarters for the EMT service. Previously an ambulance had been shared between the Fire and Police Departments. The new ambulance arrives first before engines when calls come in to the fire station, while radio communication is kept with the Police Department, and with all neighboring Fire Departments. Connolly hopes for close hospital communication with the ambulance in the future.

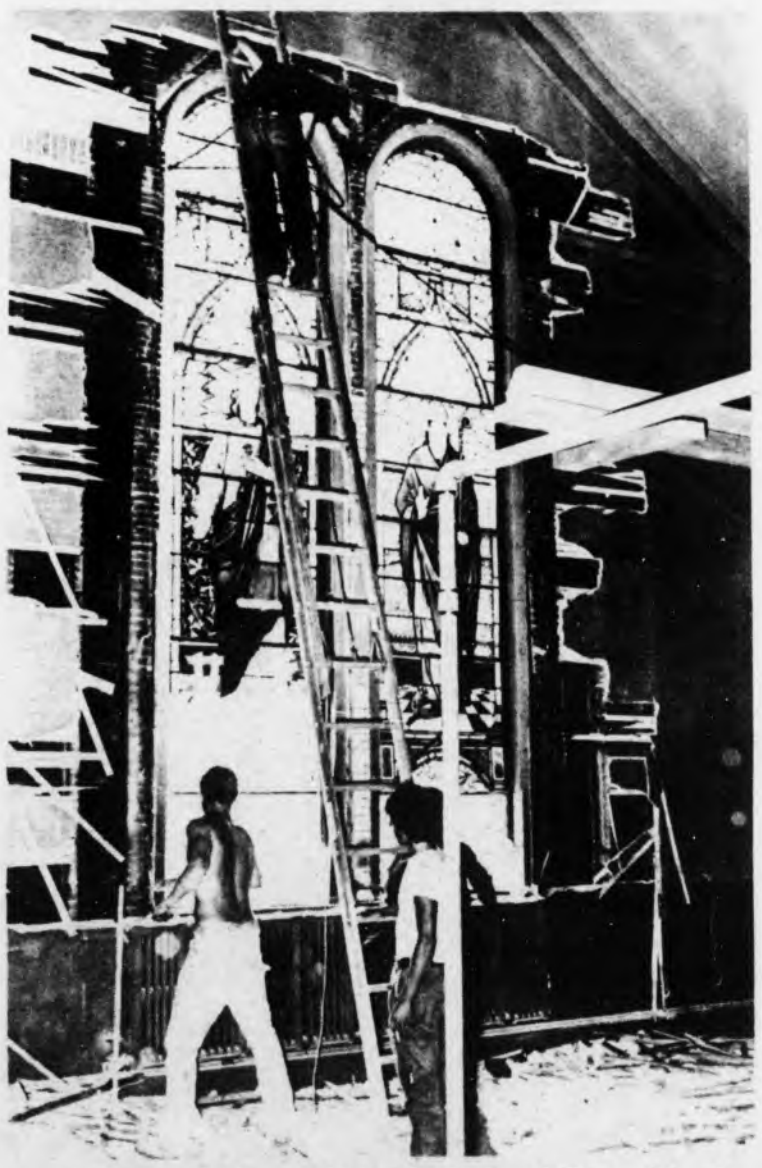
Drama Workshop Presents "Knock, Knock"

The Summer Company of the Cohasset Drama Workshop under the direction of Ron Emmons will present Jules Feiffer's successful Broadway comedy "Knock, Knock" on August 17 and 18 at Cohasset High School.



This is the second production of the season for the group, which earlier presented Feiffer's "Hold Me!" in conjunction with the South Shore Art Festival. The Summer Company was organized to give Drama Workshop members still in high school a chance to work with and learn from graduates who have continued work in theatre and also to offer these alumni the opportunity to continue to sharpen their skills and gain more experience.

Written with the inspired lunacy of the inimitable Jules Feiffer, "Knock, Knock" is a comic fairy tale gone wild, rocketing with bizaare happenings and impudent wordplay.

In a seedy cabin in the woods, Cohn and Abe have shared a secluded bachelor existence for more than 20

EMTs

The EMT service in Cohasset is used almost daily, Connolly said, which necessitates as many as three EMTs assigned to each work shift. The calls responded to are equally balanced between illnesses and accidents. Last year 250 people were transported to either the South Shore or Quincy City Hospitals (the only two hospitals where the Cohasset ambulance may transport patients without specific direction from a doctor or hospital).

Connolly stressed that the notion of saving lives via the mad dash to the hospital is not the credo of the EMTs. In fact, the opposite is more the case. "What we basically hope for is to take care of patients at the scene and keep them from getting worse, so that they can return to the community that much quicker," Connolly said.

Stabilizing the patient from his injuries at the scene is what being an EMT is all about. For instance, Connolly said, a heart attack victim would be calmed, assured of further medical assistance, and possibly administered oxygen. At the scene of an auto accident, EMTs would control bleeding, splint broken bones, and again assure the patient that the hospital would soon be reached.

"The big thing is getting their confidence," Connolly said. As for the saving of lives, Connolly and his men declined to say that EMTs intervention actually staved off the grim reaper, although they indicated that checking severe bleeding, or that comforting patients on the ambulance ride, for instance, were life supporting measures. "But who are we?" EMT Thomas Finnegan queried. "We're not God, and we're not doctors," he reminded.

An EMT title isn't easy to come by. Eighty-one classroom hours in a hospital program, plus practical training, a CPR course, and a written exam all have to be successfully passed. "It's an ongoing education," Connolly said. "EMTs have to be recertified every two years, and CPR certification has to be renewed every year." Refresher courses, in-service training, number of runs responded to, and attendance to lectures and programs count toward EMT re-certification. Connolly can instruct personnel at the Department in first aid and CPR, as he has an instructor's certification in those areas.

In the past year EMTs have been involved in a number of traumatic incidents — the shootings of the Forest Notch family, the garage door accident that claimed the life of a small child, the nine-year old heart failure victim — all of which have had a tremendous psychological effect on the men. "It takes time for it to go away," Connolly said, once the incident is over, but noted that at the moment of involvement automatic response takes over. "You go home and appreciate your own family more," he said. There is no stress program Connolly knows of for EMTs and he has witnessed EMTs from other towns drop out of the program because they couldn't handle the emotional aftermaths of their work.

"We take pride in doing the job, and I think we have the confidence of the community," Connolly said. This year's Town Meeting appropriated money for more men to take EMT courses in the fall. EMTs receive $300 a year above their regular salaries. Connolly also stressed the unpredictable nature of the job. "We never know what the incident will be. We can cover any accident on land, the harbor or the ponds," he said.

The equipment necessary in attending to accidents is found both in the ambulance and the fire engine. Aside from usual firefighting instruments, the engine contains forcible entry tools, such as power saws, air chisels, and the "Jaws of Life," an hydraulic tool that can open any part of an automobile. Cohasset's "Jaws" was bought last year. "We use it more often than we'd like to," Connolly said.

The ambulance keeps a first aid kit up front, for starters, the rest of the vehicle containing sophisticated support equipment. Both a portable and build-in oxygen system are contained in the ambulance. Three compartments within the vehicle hold a pulse meter, blood pressure cuff, equipment for airway related problems, wound dressings and splints.

Although the ambulance may carry drugs prescribed by local doctors, such as morphine, valium and adrenaline, EMTs can't administer any of these. They are kept in case a doctor is at the scene or rides with a patient to the hospital.

EMTs offer a backup system in the event that something goes wrong. Connolly stressed that when accidents occur, people should provide relevant medical information concerning their illnesses or medications taken, to facilitate care and recovery. He noted the Social Service League's efforts to have the residents at the Housing Authority provide a medical history on the front of their refrigerators.

EMTs in the Fire Department are J. Thomas Baswell, Richard Connolly, Linwood David, Thomas Finnegan, Capt. James Lee Gurry, Paul McCaffigan, Matthew Marr, Arthur Pompeo, James Runey, James Sheerin, Edward Struzik and Mark Trask.

They deserve a big hand, folks.

years, never venturing "outside." Cohn, an ex-musician, and Abe, a former stockbroker, lead lives of endless quibbling with their crotchety arguments over food and philosophy punctuated by Abe's occasional single tap on the typewriter.

Exasperated during a squabble, Cohn petulantly wishes for intelligent company, and gets more than he asked for with the appearance of a mad magus named Wiseman, a cross between Mephistopheles and Groucho. Wiseman thereafter appears in several incarnations...as a riverboat gambler, an octogenerian mailman, a doddering judge.

Cohn and Abe's isolated lives are further jolted when a knock at their door announces Joan of Arc, clad in blazing armor with sword and pennant at the ready. She informs them that her mission is to recruit two of every species, including them, for a spaceship trip to heaven.

With helium-light hilarity, intelligence and a sharp eye for satire, "Knock, Knock" audaciously explores the prickly realm of fantasy. It is a play of comic invention for those who like their theatre with a touch of tenderness, a dash of wry observation, a large helping of humanity.

Appearing as Joan of Arc is Meredith Fink, a senior at Cohasset High who has appeared in every Drama Workshop production since she entered high school and who was named one of only 15 members of the prestigious All-New England Cast. In the fall, she will appear in the title role in "The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie."

A second member of the All-New England Cast is James Vivian, who will play the ubiquitous Wiseman, a mixture of Satan and Groucho Marx. Vivian plans to study theatre at Boston University in the fall.

Abe will be portrayed by Eric Joseph, a 1977 graduate of Cohasset High School and student in the School of Visual and Performing Arts at Syracuse University. This will be Joseph's farewell performance before leaving for a year of study abroad. With the Drama Workshop he has appeared in "Godspell," "The Fantasticks," "Hold Me!," and as Conrad Birdie in "Bye Bye Birdie."

Kurt Rever, who is a teacher of social studies at Cohasset High and a graduate of Clark University, will appear as Cohn. This is the second summer that Rever has worked with the Drama Workshop. Last year he was featured as one of the fathers in "The Fantasticks" and most recently appeared in "Hold Me!"

Stage Manager for "Knock, Knock" is Caroline Wampole, a recent transfer to Cohasset High School who has had a great deal of theatre experience. She and Susanna Mastrobuono will also "appear" as Joan's voices.

Elderly Woman's Death Causes Concern Among Residents And Officials

The Board of Health and concerned residents Monday discussed the recent death of an elderly woman at 254 Beechwood Street and the subsequent cleanup of the house which was called "not fit for human habitation."

A telephone call to the Fire Department by Walter Egan, a man in his seventies and owner of the Beechwood Street home, first alerted officials that his companion, Frances Kent, 84, had died. Medical examiner Dr. Roger Pompeo was called to the scene on August 2 and after an autopsy ascertained that the woman had died of natural causes 12 to 24 hours before. Egan was admitted, voluntarily, to Medfield State Hospital.

Pompeo, as chairman of the Board of Health, explained that the condition of the house was such that he notified Health Agent Kevin O'Brien and Marilyn Sweeney of the board to conduct an inspection. Pompeo's medical reports, which evinced emotional disturbances in the elderly couple, served as the reason to obtain a search warrant from Quincy District Court.

Inspection of the single family house was made on August 7 by O'Brien and Sweeney, accompanied by Patrolman Gerry Doyle and Firefighter Richard Conley. An inspection in accordance with Article II of the state Sanitation Code was difficult to conduct, O'Brien reported, due to the amount of decaying refuse, garbage and filth that piled throughout every room of the house, an accumulation of many years.

"It was very difficult to even walk through the house: every room, porch, bath and garage were full of rubbish and old clothes," O'Brien's report reads. "I could not use the stove, the second floor bath, see the floors or try electrical outlets; rodent presence could not be determined," O'Brien continued.

"This dwelling is unfit for human habitation and is a public nuisance by reason of being a fire hazard," he concluded.

"O'Brien said at the meeting that four dump truck loads of garbage have already been removed from the home as a part of the cleanup which will continue the rest of the week. O'Brien found one working toilet downstairs. The dwelling will have to be fumigated, he said.

Two oxygen cylinders found at the residence had been prescribed for Miss Kent and were delivered to the house around the time of her death. The cylinders, regulator and stand were removed by an employee of South Shore Medical Supply.

Pompeo questioned the Beechwood Street neighbors in attendance why the matter had never been brought to the board's attention. "From the exterior of the house, it looks as though something had gone wrong," he said, noting that anyone can notify a Board of Health if unhealthful conditions are suspected.

One resident responded. "It's very difficult to assess. We weren't seeing these people regularly. They were living behind closed blinds. Do you call the Board of Health?" she asked.

Board member Sweeney suggested that the Coastal Community Counseling Services support a group of concerned neighbors concerning the future of the residence.

The Police Department has been and will provide security for valuables that remain in the house. Attorney Joan Fisher is handling Egan's personal and financial matters.

When To Help

The recently discovered death of an elderly woman in a Beechwood Street home amidst an accumulation of years of decaying refuse has shocked the town, particularly close neighbors.

We are all reacting to an abnormal situation. It is abhorrent and foreign to us — we are faced with a delicate dilemna. Foremost, the surviving member of the household must be protected from the ravages of sensationalism; we must respect his rights, his property and his certain grief. Yet somehow a thought remains that this sad case could have been prevented, without violation of privacy.

Dr. Roger Pompeo, Health Board Chairman, questioned the lack of inquiry about the house considering its advanced state of external decay. He informed those concerned residents attending Monday's Board of Health meeting that whenever the suspicion of a serious health problem exists in town, that office can be notified anonymously.

It is difficult, one resident replied, to get to know or help people when they are living behind closed blinds, when they have eccentric habits and when they are seldom seen.

We understand both stances and find them quite natural and true. However, that elusive fine line between neglect and ignorance of aberration is perhaps in need of definition. Perhaps, too, there are no tenable answers, that loneliness will always exist. That when those who are vulnerable and most in need of attention shut themselves in, they succeed only in further repulsing friends and neighbors.

Health Board member Marilyn Sweeney suggested that the Coastal Community Counselling Services aid a neighborhood group concerned about the future of the Beechwood home. We, too, find this a good approach — and possibly one that could generate intervention programs to prevent this from happening again.

Allegations Unfounded

To the Editor:

It continues to astound me, that, when writing on subjects concerning the Town, a ninety year old gentleman can go out and gather the facts in a truthful, unbiased manner, arrive at logical conclusions, free of unfounded allegations and insinuations, and present them for publication as newsworthy informative thoughts for us to share without maligning any public sevant, (ref. letter 8/9/79 Gilbert Tower); while the Cohasset Mirror's own news reporter writes untruths, poorly researched subjects, overtly biased opinions, making unfounded inferences and allegations while maligning people who have served the Town unselfishly for years on a subject which he knows fully well is still being heard by the Courts, (it is therefore unwise for past or present Town Officials to make public comment on these subjects), (ref: Surrey Drive Article, 8/9/79, by John Kinchla).

The Cohasset Mariner has recently published articles which were similarly poorly researched, and similarly made unfounded allegations or inferences about Town Officials. In both newspapers, these articles are clearly inflammatory, perhaps in order to create sensationalism by arousing suspicion of Town Officials conspiring behind closed doors for personal gain at the expense of the betterment of the Town.

Are these two journals witch-hunting? Are they intentionally creating sensationalism?

I submit that both are in need of more subscribers in order that they might both survive. I suspect that both are trying to create news, rather than report it.

The Board of Health meets every second and fourth Monday at 8 p.m. at its offices on Elm Street. We welcome any citizen to any meeting, (they are all open). We prefer any questions or allegations be voiced publicly at our meetings, so as to be answered completely and honestly.

Mr. Kinchla is especially invited.

Recreational Opportunities

By John Worley
Recreation Director

Superficially, it would appear to be a relatively simple task to determine the types of recreational activities that one would like to become involved with.

However, many individuals short-change themsleves in identifying and selecting those programs and activities which are best suited to their needs and fulfill basic requirements for the creative use of leisure time. Much thought and planning is required to properly accomplish this.

Often individuals make program choices based on three basic criteria: 1) interest, 2) ability, 3) familiarity. While these factors are important, they are also somewhat restrictive. We all, perhaps, have a tendency to engage in those activities that we know and perform best, ultimately restricting our exposure to new, or less familiar forms of recreational activities. Individual preferences too often fall in line with interests gained from past experiences and exposures. While it is fine to continue with the more familiar activities, we should also be aware that we are severely limiting our opportunities to expand our leisure time pursuits.

All too often we disregard a particular program based on the name of the program. Not unlike a book, recreational activities should not be judged by title alone. (This attitude has been demonstrated by simply changing the name of a program from a less familiar one, which generated minimal response, to a more familiar one which illicited an overwhelming response — the program format and content remained the same.)

It is important to inquire what the program content specifically is. Interest is, of course, an essential factor, and based on knowledge of the program content we should be able to determine whether or not the program would be of interest. Familiarity and ability, in most cases, should not enter in our decision at all. Rather, other criteria should be employed. It should be determined as to why we are seeking a recreation program.

There are as many reasons for becoming involved as there are participants. Many join programs for socialization alone. Others join to broaden horizons, to stay physically fit, while still others become involved to learn new skills or brush-up on old ones. If we understand why we are seeking recreation we will be more apt to choose the right program and be less apt to be disappointed by the program, (or ourselves). Recreational involvement should be the one facet of our lives where we are willing to expose ourselves to new experiences, experiment with new ideas, and accept new adventures without any inhibitions or worries of failing or not performing well.

There are many other factors that enter into choosing recreational activities. We should ask ourselves a few key questions before deciding on any activity. 1) Do we have the necessary leisure time to become involved? 2) Have we the motivation (interest), based on information at hand to follow through with the program? 3) Do we have the financial resourses to become involved? 4) Does our health permit us to participate fully in the program? 5) What do we hope to gain by participating in the program? 6) Is there anything else that I would rather be doing with my leisure time?

Before we make a commitment, we should at least think a bit about all of these questions. Also, we should not be restricted to only those questions, but rather use them as a matrix of our guidelines. It is not a bad idea to determine objectives and/or goals that you wish to reach via program participation. It is far easier to evaluate the program and your individual accomplishments or enjoyment if you have pre-determined, basic objectives.

Recreation programs vary in content, format, duration, and degree of physical/mental activity. Some are essentially instructional while others are basically entertaining. Recreation, per se, has no real boundaries and while the classic definition "is the creative use of leisure time," it is probably doubtful that leisure time use be "creative." Perhaps the one most influential factor relative to a successful recreation program is the quality of the instructor.

This is particularly true in the case of instructional recreation programs. One, therefore, must be careful when evaluating a program to distinguish between the quality of instruction and the content of the program. Do not disregard the form of activity as being something you do not like until you have made sure that it was not the way the activity was presented that turned you off.

In summary, do not be hesitant to try new types of recreational activities while still being involved with the ones you are familiar with. Pre-determine, in your own mind, what it is you are seeking, and why you are seeking it. Gather information in regard to program content, and do not be too concerned with names. Often it helps to involve a friend or spouse in a new venture — after all — recreation is one of our most gregarious forms of socialization and one of the best outlets for daily pressures.

PAPA GINO'S

Papa Gino's restaurant, opened recently in Cushing Plaza, has been issued a wine and malt license.

SWAIN DECK

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Swain of 371 North Main Street was notified for the second time by Building Inspector James Litchfield that the sundeck constructed at the rear of their dwelling is in violation of the state building code and the town bylaws.

The Swain's application for a building permit was denied for lack of the following information: structural drawings, site plan and Special Permit from the Zoning Board of Appeals.

The Swains were notified to remove all parts of the structure.

POTHOLES FILLED

The parking area and access entrance to Cushing Plaza has recently been repaired, reported Selectman Arthur Clark. The potholes, which if left unfilled would have required the withholding of occupancy permits, were filled with a durable and dustless material to conform with the zoning bylaws.

HARMONY HILL

Building Inspector James Litchfield has notified the Mass. Special Education Association that Camp Harmony Hill at 39 Beechwood Street will not conform to state Building Code requirements for a certificate of inspection.

Until corrections have been made to conform to the code of every sleeping room, Litchfield said, occupance of the structure is in violation of another section of the code which requires the posting of a valid certificate.

FEOLA PRE-TRIAL

Patrolman Randolph Feola, Jr. appeared in Hingham District Court August 10, at which time a pre-conference trial date was set, for the latest of motor vehicle charges issued against him by Hull Police. Feola said he was disturbed that the trial date wasn't set last week and noted that no Hull police accident reports were ready for the court appearance, although the violations were charged three weeks ago.

The Man Behind The Treatment Plant

By Judith Epstein

Manuel ("Manny") Salvador has a tough job in more ways than one. He is the chief operator of Cohasset's wastewater treatment plant and a strong proponent of a new facility at Whale Meadow off Atlantic Avenue.

Several serious factors lead Salvador to believe that Cohasset is in dire need of a new treatment plant. These include: Cohasset's effluent discharge permit to James issued by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) is valid only until Dec. 31, 1981; the current plant is beyond capacity outflow of 72,000 gallons per day; areas of the hillside, Veterans' Project and portions of Route 3A have sewerage difficulties; and state and federal citations for pollution counts upstream of the plant have come in for the past two months.

The current plant located off Elm Street sewers the high school, the harbor, and the business district. "One line comes down the Mill River Bridge and Howard Gleason Road, then another comes across the marsh from the high school, and a third comes from the Savings Bank, by the Gown Museum, left by the hardware store, and picks up the back buildings," Salvador said, putting the whole system into a nutshell. "It all flows by gravity," he said, "except for the high school which gets pumped from the top of Pond Street."

As the person most intimately aware of the daily quality of the water flowing back into James Brook at the end of its treatment of the plant, adhering to a strict hour-by-hour laboratory and maintenance schedule to meet the requirements of state and federal health agencies, Salvador feels more than justified in his fight to see a good part of the town sewered. Yet he didn't vote for the proposed Metcalf and Eddy site or treatment plant at this year's Town Meeting.

Those articles recommended the next phase of planning for a new sewage treatment plant, and the assignation of a site on a portion of School Facilities land, comprised of 79 acres of land between Smith Place and Sohier Street at the bottom of Deer Hill with access from the intersection of Smith Place and Cushing Road. The first article was defeated, which prohibited a vote from being taken on the site. Salvador feels particularly that the latter issue is one that Cohasset residents will have to come to grips with.

Before Metcalf and Eddy was engaged to prepare the studies, Salvador said, several engineering firms were interviewed and shown all possible locations for a new facility. Whale Meadow and Jacob Meadow were the only two sites they all chose, he said. "We are lucky to have a section of land near the water which fits our needs," Salvador said, of the Whale Meadow site.

"There is a hill 75 feet high. The marsh land was filled with a dredge material in 1932, so it is no longer a virgin marsh. The proposed drawings show a building facing the Yacht Club, or a building against this high hill which will not be seen. The tanks would be low, so no one's view to the ocean will be blocked. Only one house would look over the facility and see shrubs and trees," Salvador said.

"Atlantic Avenue has only the Yacht Club to contend with," he said, referring to the proposed site which he feels may come in the way of Deer Hill School. "People sit back and say nothing, yet they are the people that need sewage treatment. We must act now for the EPA funds for plants are being cut by Congress. Instead of a 10 percent cost to Cohasset, it could be 35 percent," he said.

At the time of the articles' defeat, Water and Sewer Commissioner John Hobbs concurred. Cohasset's share of the $12.7 Metcalf and Eddy project would have been $3.9, but now faced with the sewer alternative the state recommends, the town may have to bear more of the brunt of the cost, Hobbs said.

A tour of the current system elucidated the conventional activated sludge system employed in Cohasset. Salvador explained that the raw sewerage collects into a grinder which separates the sewerage. The liquid is then pumped into three large holding tanks where large vanes agitate the water. The first tank contains old and new sewerage which undergo an aeration process. The residue from that tank is piped into a settling tank

Town Potential Site Residence Program

Cohasset, as part of the coastal area of the Department of Mental Health, may potentially become involved in a community residence program to de-institutionalize the psychiatrically disabled and mentally retarded.

According to Ted Lang, Associate Area Director of the Coastal Area Office, the Department is seeking to de-institutionalize the mentally retarded and psychiatrically disabled clients into community residences established in the service area. These towns — Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Scituate, Norwell and Cohasset — are generally the original home town of the patients. There are currently no community residences staffed or supported by the Department of Mental Health in Cohasset.

In an information-sharing meeting with Selectmen last week, Lang focused on the psychiatrically disabled adult clients presently living at Medfield State Hospital, and who are deemed ready for placement in a community residential setting.

All of these clients, Lang said, have been in an institutional setting for a year or more; the average length of stay is 10 to 15 years. However, the length of their stay is due more to the unavailability of community-based alternatives, including support programs, than it is to the severity of their disabilities, he said.

Lang stressed that these people are not unpredictable, assaultive or dangerous. The great majority of them are depressed and lethargic and lacking social and work skills. The clients chosen for community residences are to be carefully screened and re-screened for their adaptability to live in a community setting.

The residents chosen for community placement will have 24 hour staffing in the residence, in addition to supervised support programs that they will attend throughout the normal work day. Weekend activities and recreation will also be planned and supervised.

Lang said the failed attempts to de-institutionalize mental health and mental retardation services in other states were caused by a failure to plan well and provide on-going support programs in the community. He emphasized the Department's intention to provide the necessary support programs to these clients.

Lang said the great majority of community-based programs are less expensive than institutionalization, but they don't provide immediate, percept-

Camp Harmony Hill Has 25 Year History

Camp Harmony Hill at 38 Beechwood St., a summer recreational camp for mentally retarded adults, has been operating for 25 years.

This summer the 15 adults living in the large, converted house that is also used at Halloween time for the Jaycees Haunted House, are from East and South Boston, Quincy, Dorchester, Westwood, Canton, and Medford. They represent a wide spectrum of mental illness, ranging from Downs-Syndrome to emotionally disturbed.

They come to the Camp to get out into the country and go to the park to play ball, or spend the afternoon at Sandy Beach. They also do arts and crafts, and visit puppet shows and the Music Circus. This year's staff consists of five young adults, three men and two women.

Director Kevin Gilligan explains that the staff are caretakers, not teachers or rehabilitators. "Retarded adults are very difficult to teach. We can only work with what they know," he says.

His campers are fortunate to come to Cohasset for eight weeks in the summer. Their families pay $100/week towards the cost of their stay; the rest is subsidized by the Massachusetts Special Education Association, which is supported by the Massachusetts Teachers Association. There is one visiting day per week when parents come to see their children. Some will take them out for the day. Some don't come.

The staff is dedicated and caring and each day they put in is a long one. Gilligan says that once the campers are in bed, the staff can relax. They listen to records and talk. He finds the local townspeople "very supportive" of the Camp. Some campers are known around town since they have been coming here for ten years.

Camp Harmony Hill is, in a sense, a de-institutionalized community residence, although it is strictly a recreational, seasonal facility. It's 25 year existence, one suspects, has hardly been noticed by most people in town.

☐Congratulations to Hannah Clinton, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Clinton of 6 Parker Ave., who placed second in the Sunfish Class Championships held on Sunday in Springfield, Ill. Hannah raced in the regular singles competition, and is not qualified for the World Class Competition to be held in Aruba next year. She sails locally with the Hingham Sunfish Club.

☐The "Cohasset Rec'ers", a two-team club in the Harris-Wightman League of the NELTA (New England Lawn Tennis Association), will play Abington Thursday, August 16 at 3 p.m. on the Cohasset High School courts for the South Eastern Championship. Winners of the meet will go onto the quarter-finals of the League, facing Metro-Boston. The teams consist of 10 girls and eight boys in the 14-and-under group; Helen Pratt as the non-playing coach; and 12 girls in the 18-and-under group. John Roy, tennis coach for the Recreation Department, is the non-playing coach. The public is encouraged to come out and root for these hard-working young players!

☐Navy Machinist's Mate Fireman Guy Ricketts recently returned from a tour of duty in the Mediterranean aboard the frigate USS Donald R. Beary, based in Norfolk, Va.

☐Mr. and Mrs. George Baird of Lantern Lane will be moving in late September to Tokyo, Japan where he will establish a new office of Hay Associates, a world-wide management consulting firm. They plan to live there for two or three years. Their children will visit them at Christmas, but will otherwise be stateside in school: Julie, at Smith College in her junior year, and Bob, a freshman at Haverford College in Pennsylvania. The family will reunite in Cohasset during the month of August. Sayonara, and lots of luck!

☐Dr. and Mrs. Robert Sceery of 95 Atlantic Ave., hosted a party Saturday in honor of the marriage of their son, Michael, to Helene Petit, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edouard Petit of Paris, France. Mr. and Mrs. Michael Sceery were married July 7 in Normandy, France. They will live in Essex, Conn. next year while Michael completes his last year at Wesleyan. The bride's parents have been guests of the Sceery's.

☐Melissa Huntwork of 50 Elm Court donned some authentic 1860's dresses, handmade for the occasion in the style of Scarlet O'Hara, last Saturday at Fort Warren on George's Island as part of a re-enactment of one of the many Civil War battles. She was among many men and women there in costumes and uniforms of the times who admit they are Civil War "nuts."

☐Mr. and Mrs. Byron Tosi of Beach Island Street as cochairmen, will be assisted by Mr. and Mrs. John Larkin Thompson of 268 Jerusalem Rd. in helping to plan a concert benefit on September 20 for the Metropolitan Opera Company's annual spring visit to Boston. The benefit evening will include dinner at the Copley Plaza Hotel for patrons and friends and a performance by four members of La Scala Opera Company, with orchestra and chorus, of a concert version of Verdi's "Requiem." It will end with a reception in the Cabot-Cahners Room at Symphony Hall. The benefit is sponsored by the Boston Opera Association.

☐Quincy Bay Race Week '79 ended, unfortunately, with two canceled days out of five, due to foul weather. Local sailors were represented in the Laser Class with Steve Smalzel placing second in Saturday's race and Tim Naimi finishing with the best overall score. Other Cohasset racers were: Diarmuid O'Connell, Lee Vowvitch, Richard Tibbetts, Doug Mitman, and Paul Riley.

John Buckley, son of Raymond and Patricia Buckley of 247 Forest Ave., is participating in two weeks of aviation indoctrination training at Miramar Naval Air Station San Diego. He is a midshipman from the Naval Reserve Officer Training Corps (NROTC) unit at Maine Maritime Academy, Castine, Maine. Buckley is a 1977 graduate of Cohasset High School.

"Pool Day" At The Swim Center

The Cohasset Swim Center will hold a "Pool Day" Sunday, Aug. 19, beginning at 2 p.m. It's open to the public.

There will be swimming relays, games for the kids, and a demonstration of some of the Center's programs. The recipient of this year's Bancroft Award will be announced. This honor is given each year to the youth who has shown exemplary behavior in his or her involvement with the Center and it's programs.

Later on Sunday evening (the exact time will be posted at the Swim Center), the Swim Team will wrap up it's season with the presentation of their trophies to team members who have earned the most point totals and the coach's award. The public is invited.

The Center also announces that on Tuesday, Aug. 21, from 7-10 p.m. it will hold a town-wide "Teen Night Pool Party".

There will be swimming, music, as well as pool, billards, ping pong, and lots of other fun activities for teens.

There is no admission charge for this event. Soft drinks will be sold.

Super Switcher For Cohasset

A new Super Switcher — capable of routing huge volumes of long distance calls at velocities approaching the speed of light — is now serving telephone users in the Cohasset area as well as throughout eastern and cencentral Massachusetts.

The new equipment, which recently went into service, also has the potential for providing a variety of dramatic new communications services, while holding down costs.

Known as the Number 4 Electronic Switching System, the equipment is located at 250 Bent St., Cambridge. Owned by AT&T Long Lines, the Bell System unit for interstate and international communications, is the first such system to be installed in Massachusetts.

Salvador

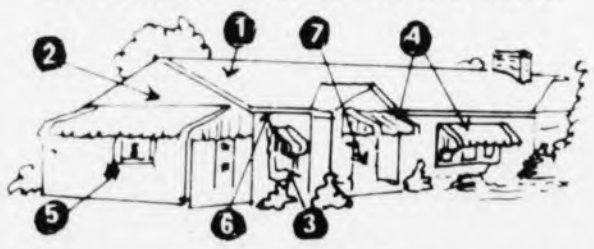
where it remains for 24 hours while the sludge separates from the water. A chlorine tank then kills off remaining bacteria and effluent is finally discharged to James Brook until it eventually reaches the harbor outfall.

The process kills bacteria," Salvador said, "but not viruses of people who had serious diseases such as hepatitis and were on the sewer lines." Salvador recently received a citation from EPA which showed that the water leaving the plant was not polluted, but that upstream a fecal coliform count was double what it should have been.

"The weather has a lot to do with it," Salvador said, referring to the three weeks of steamy weather bacteria love to breed in. "It's not the sewer plant's problem. Contamination occurred in the stream from some source," he said.

At the other end of town at the water treatment plant, Superintendent Edwin Pratt has noted that failure to meet effluent characteristics are a matter of past record in 1978, as well. "The water treatment plant shouldn't have to clean contaminated water. It shouldn't be there," he said. "Even though our drinking water has zero bacteria — it has to — there is always the chance that there might be some," he added.

Apparently, if the effluent characteristics at the sewer treatment plant meet regulations, and if the water leaving the water treatment plant contains zero bacteria, pollution sources point toward groundwater, ponds and streams. A new sewer treatment plant would cover six sites that lie in the watershed area and that are probably contaminating water supplies, Pratt said.



Salvador is highly suspicious of alternative measures to alleviate Cohasset's pollution problems, as he is of widespread septic tank system use. Salvador pointed to a recent EPA policy finding on sewage treatments other than the gravity sewer/centralized treatment systems. The report concluded that since only 32 percent of the land in the United States is suitable for a septic tank system, the most cost-effective and technically feasible system in poor soils becomes the gravity sewer/centralized facility.

"We've been lucky Cohasset hasn't had any dangerous outbreaks of disease," Salvador said. "Even if anything happened it would be hard to trace it back to the Sewer Department. We're trying to get away from the stigma of sewers stinking and smelling. Sewers can be beautiful," he said.

A former fisherman, and Navy veteran, Salvador has been Chief Operator of the plant for nine years. He attended Syracuse University in 1968 and earned a New York State sewer plant operator license; in 1972 he became a grade 6 Massachusetts licensed operator. He was awarded the E. Sherman Chase Award by the New England Water Pollution Control Association in 1976.

Two team members, Greg Raffa and Stephen Camardo, took four first places in their team's competition with the Hanover Swim Club.

Swimmers who won three first places were Geoff Thayer and Chris Hebert. Two blue ribbons were won by J.T. Price and Caitlin Staunton.

Those who came in first in an individual event were Jill Nedrow, Matthew Buckley, Jane DeLima, John Jackson, Todd Fitzpatrick, James Dillon, Stephen Bowen, Sean Cunning, John Santini, Michael Cunning and Tim Libby.

The final score was Hanover 293.5 and Cohasset 235.5.

Community Center News

JOHN ROY ELECTED TO BOARD

Jack Doherty, president of the Board of Directors of the Community Center, announced the election of John Roy to the board this week.

Roy, an attorney, is a long time resident of Cohasset and is recognized for his support of community activities.

MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

The center's membership drive, which began June 1, will continue throughout the summer. Notices of dues due July 1 have been sent to all members of the center. Ed Jacome and Martha Gjesteby, co-chairmen of the committee, have asked everyone to be sure to send in dues, even if they are late. The current membership totals 786.

RENOVATIONS

This summer's "progress reports" would astound anyone involved in structural renovations.

The summer's accomplishments include air-conditioned bowling alleys, newly paved school yards, a new roof, a finished function room, acoustic ceilings, new lighting fixtures, and a fresh coat of paint. A grand opening is planned.

St. Anthony's

Another summer chapel was erected for those living in the extremities of the parish in the Sand Hills section of Scituate. A night school was also established for Italian immigrants to learn how to read and write English.

The parish continued to grow, so that assistants were assigned to the Scituate chapels. In May 1921, the late Cardinal Richard Cushing was assigned to Cohasset until the summer assistants were appointed. Cardinal Cushing returned in 1949 to offer a Solemn Pontifical Mass on his first parish grounds, to commemorate the first Mass said in Cohasset 100 years earlier.

Pratt recalled the episode of the small statue of St. Anthony, a carved wooden statue made in the Azores for Mrs. Ignatia Concepcion Frates to bring to America. The statue became lost during the journey, and after many prayers the statue was discovered and returned to serve as the first statue in the first St. Anthony's Church.

A patron saint of lost articles can't remain lost for very long.

Carillon Concerts Continue At St. Stephens

The music of the 51 cast bronze bells of the Jessie M. Barron Memorial Carillon in the tower of Saint Stephen's Church, Cohasset, continues Sunday afternoons from 4 to 5 o'clock until Sept. 30.

The guest artist for the recital on August 19 will be Milford Myhre, carillonneur and Associate Director of the Mountain Lake Sanctuary in Lake Wales, Florida.

My. Myhre is a past president of the Guild of Carillonneurs in North America, and is associated with the Netherlands Carilion Society, the Belgian Guild of Carillonneurs and is an honorary member of the "Guilde des Carillonneurs de France."

Milford Myhre

Milford Myhre has distinguished himself internationally through his recital playing, his recordings, and his lectures. His published compositions and many arrangements of folksongs have been a major contribution to the repertory of music for the instrument. His program on this occasion includes many of these works.

The bells are heard to good advantage from the Cohasset Common and adjacent areas, including the courtyard at the base of the carillon tower.

Post Cookout

The George H. Mealy Post #118 American Legion assisted by members of the Auxiliary will hold its annual cookout for the exceptional children at Harmony Hill, Beechwood Street, Thursday, Aug. 23 at 5 p.m.

In addition to the cookout, there will be bands, dancing, fire engines, clowns, prizes and gifts for each child.

Obituaries

Grace Reddy

Mrs. Grace R. (Grassie) Reddy, 72, a lifelong resident of Cohasset and a retired telephone operator in the town, died Thursday in Quincy City Hospital following a long illness.

She was a charter member of the Cohasset American Legion Auxiliary and was a member of St. Anthony's Church. She had formerly done volunteer work for the Red Cross.

Wife of the late Clarence S. Reddy Sr., she leaves two daughters, Mrs. Grace M. Berens of Hingham and Helen C. Beal of Scituate; two sisters, Mrs. Louise E. Conroy of Cohasset and Mrs. Muriel Trapp of Hull; and two grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated Saturday in St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Woodside Cemetary.

Murray Leads TAX - AX Drive

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) will serve as one of the Plymouth County Co-ordinators for the "Tax Ax" petition signature drive which would place House Republican Floor Leader William G. Robinson's (R-Melrose) income tax cut plan on the 1980 ballot.

On Aug. 1, Rep. Robinson filed the initiative petition for the income tax cut plan in the state Attorney General's office. By December 5, 1979, Robinson will need to gather 62,000 registered voters' signatures to introduce the petition in the House of Representatives for the 1980 legislative session. If the legislature fails to pass the proposal, Robinson, with the help of House Republican members such as Rep. Murray and community volunteers interested in seeing an income tax cut on the 1980 ballot as a binding question will have to gather additional signatures to insure that the income tax cut proposal is placed on the 1980 ballot.

Said Murray, "Reducing the state income tax is a far better way to bring tax relief to the already overburdened taxpayers of this Commonwealth. It is a pleasure for me to work for this proposal since I believe that state spending must be reduced.

"Governor King promised a $500 million property tax rollback this year. He failed to deliver it. But, taxpayers would feel the effects of a $318 million tax cut, as this plan promises, immediately."

The income tax cut plan Robinson is proposing would return $318 million to taxpayers' pockets over a period of two years. Depending on an individual's income and tax factor, each taxpayer will save between seven and sixty percent — and perhaps more — of what he or she is scheduled to pay on 1979 income.

The proposal would repeal the 7 1/2 percent surtax, reducing withholding deductions on July 1, 1980 and thereafter.

A variety of changes in the income tax laws would benefit almost every taxpayer through increased exemptions and other forms of tax relief.

Rep. Murray will coordinate the TAX AX petition signature drive for Plymouth County. Volunteers may call her at her State House office at 727-2400 or at her home at 429-1347.

Rival Weighs Ton, Barn-Beamed But...

Sailor's Widow Loses To Siren Of Deep

By Nina Belsan

The sailor's widow, like golf and poker widows, shares a complaint common to all. The only difference being, instead of calling Harry's or the golf course to find her wandering husband, she searches the windy shore like a siren beckoning her sailor home.

But she might as well save her breath because the temptress in her man's life is too much competition for the loveliest landlubber.

The rival is really nothing to look at. She weighs a ton, and has a beam like the side of a barn. She moves with all the grace of Jackie Gleason at a smorgasbord and drinks more than a Trojan horse. Her sagging bottom is trussed with fiberglass and her hull has soaked up four coats of cosmetic varnish.Her turgid blue color required hours of surgical scraping and sanding before she was changed to a clean classic white.

She was christened the Nina. The Pinta and Santa Maria didn't have to claim kinship, her age revealed the secret. But to the mariner who was her faithful lover and companior, she was beautiful.

His fascination for the sea probably began during his first voyage when the prenatal Odysseus lay floating in the womb. By adulthood, he learned a more sophisiticated means of passage in a craft more complex in design — one that moves and goes "put putt" and occasionally "I think I can, I think I can."

Before long the mariner's mania for the sea and his floating mistress become so obsessive that he wears his captain's hat and Docksiders at all times, just in case she calls.

It doesn't take much for him to get the urge to visit her at her private berth. He gets itchy fins brushing his teeth and gargling, or floating his little rubber ducky on a bar of soap.

Tubby III...

...But Tantalizing

When she was seaworthy (an expression I've never fully understood but hoped meant fit to travel), she was outfitted and rigged for her first voyage. It was to be a family fishing trip.

A lunch, towels and extra cloths were packed and fishing gear and bait awaited the eager anglers' first nibble. The captain's mate took the precaution to include salt water pills, emergency flares, a deflated raft and an extra large beach towel marked "SOS."

The children were well into the bologna sandwiches before we'd left our snug harbor. I knoshed on my Dramamine. By the time we stopped to fish, I was wondering what land cost in the Sahara Desert.

The crew, each one secured with a life preserver and a safety line attached to the first mate's belt, dropped their lines and proceeded to fish.

Unfortunately I couldn't fish due to the fact that I had somehow snagged a sailboat on our way out of the harbor. What was left of my 100-pound test line I used to tie myself to the mast.

But I enjoyed the day in spite of myself. I actually took a swim overboard and became an expert in removing fish hooks — a necessity since three were stuck in my person.

From that time on, I became a contented sailor's widow. They stayed out all day covorting on the briny and left me high and dry on the shore.

And that's just the way I like it.

ANGLERS CORNER

By Roger Hare

We had a terrible weekend for fishing last week. The rain on Saturday kept the small boats ashore and the wind and rain on Sunday kept everyone in the harbor.

Even before the bad weather though, the cod and flounder fishing slowed down. There are still some fish off the entrance to Scituate Harbor and off the black bell at the entrance to the North River but they are not there in any great numbers. Richard and Fran Nalwalker found some flounder and cod in the Green Harbor area recently. Fran says she is the perfect fisherman's wife, as she lets Dick do all the work of baiting the hook and taking off the fish. She likes to cook and eat it though.

Lon Estabrook of Norwell has the season's largest bluefish so far. It is a 19 pound 7 ounce blue caught on a parachute jig off the rips at Nantucket while fishing with Ronnie Braun of Marshfield. Ronnie has had some great fishing trips this season catching many cod, bluefish and striped bass. On one trip Ronnie and Lon caught over 20 bass some of which weighed over 50 pounds each.

A school of bluefish showed up last week off Third Cliff in Scituate but they moved on rather quickly. There will be more from now on as we hit the height of the bluefishing season. There are lots of big blues this year, and it will be welcome news to many anglers to be able to catch those choppers close to our shores. One of the reasons the blues do not stay in any one spot off our area is because bluefish must swim continually in order to pass water over their gills for oxygen so they can breathe. When the water moves rapidly as in a tidal rip, the blues can hang in and just let the water flow over their gills. This is why the blues stay off Provincetown in one area, and the abundance of sand eels and other bait fish keep them there.

The lobstermen are having a pretty good season. Now that these big crayfish have stopped shedding, more of them are showing up in the lobster pots. Many are soft shelled now and are easy to break apart.

The fresh water fishing has also slowed down with the very hot weather. Ray Dubois, who manages the sporting goods at Woolworth's in Hanover Mall recently caught a 7 pound and a 6½ pound large mouth bass in our area ponds. The black plastic worm is a killer for these fish.

The giant bluefin tuna fishing has been slower than last year so far but is gradually picking up. The next couple of weeks should show a marked increase in the number of these fish that are caught. Kevin Scolar has caught a number of these tuna so far and leads the area with the most fish to date. Bill Drury caught his first tuna in thirteen trips last week, then went the next day and caught another. Each bluefin weighed between 700 and 800 pounds. Paul Hanky helped him hold the hand line and this was a big thrill for this young lad.

I'm busy moving so my fishing is curtailed, but call me with any fishing reports at 834-9337.

Clamdigger A Symbol Of Serenity

By Lois Martin

Behind your plate of clams is a VIP, a specialist, the clamdigger. And it worries me as our clam flats have given way to pollution, the red tide or other afflictions, that the unique breed of clamdiggers will dwindle with the supply of clams.

That would be a loss. As fond as I am of clams, I'd miss the digger if he were to become extinct more than I would miss the diggee.

It's true my perspicacity about the trade of clam digging has decreased as I've spent less time near the flats. But I remember them well. Some of the most intriguing people I've known had a tendency to dig clams. Some did it professionally while others did it because it somehow gave them more than a peck or bushel of clams to steam. There must be a personal esteem found on the flats.

These tradesmen have character. A few of them are characters. Last month while on vacation in Brooksville, Maine I'd find myself outside the cottage early watching the bay and its natural creatures begin the day. It was always a quiet, even-tempered beginning with an occasional loon sounding and several families of ducks having breakfast. That week was also a time of an early morning low tide.

So as I sat on the shore I'd look to my right where the flats are and see the clamdigger at work. He has a uniform of sorts, his boots, his pant legs tucked into them, and a sweatshirt affair open at the neck. I've never seen a barebacked or barelegged digger. He wouldn't be interested in swatting while he was digging.

From the distance I could see the man had kept the same position a long while. Indeed for more than 15 minutes he stayed bent over at work in the flats. And I sincerely believed that if I kept that same position so long without breaking the bent back posture, I'd moan when I stood up straight. And you know I've never known a clamdigger with a bad back. I don't know if that means that digging's good for the back or that only people with good backs dig.

I've been meaning to ask to be sure, but I'd bet the diggers like the early morning work. There's a serenity there, an unimposed upon dedication to the hoe and hod that must be appealing. Come to think of it all clamdiggers I've known were gentle. They weren't the type to run for political office. They were not raucous talking but low-toned conversationalists.

The good ones are fussy about their clams. There's the matter of finding a good place to dig, the squirting spots to stake out, before the creel is set down and the clam fork carefully pulls away the flats to expose the delicious victims of the diggings. Good clamdiggers don't break the shells. And they're determined to get them as free of sand as possible. They slosh the basket affair up and down out of the water to insure your fried clams won't be crunchy.

His life is determined by the tides. And he's nearly as reliable as they are. He, too, is steady, predictable, constant in his appearance at the flats.

I don't know many clamdiggers now. I wish I did. I'd be the better for it and it would be a good sign, an insurance, for society's stock of clams and clean flats.

The men I've known who dig clams are unhurried. Though they tend to business on the flats, the meter of their efforts is a calm, sure rhythm. There is no sign of pressure, simply one of purpose.

And being an environmentalist of people, I'd hope the art of clamdigging can be maintained. Preserving the character of the clamdigger is ecologically sound.

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

"The family that cooks together, stays together," is the variation I read on the old saw, "The family that prays together", etc. It does make sense though, for a shared interest in food can make one's kitchen a popular gathering place. Learning to cook is a must for children and even boys should learn to prepare a simple meal to stave off starvation pangs. Any youngster could serve this dish with pride, for it goes together easily and simmers fragrantly in one large skillet. Here is Clara Hathaway's recipe for what she calls her:

PORK CHOP DISH

Place 4 good-sized chops in an iron frying pan. Cut 2 or 3 large onions in thick slices and lay around chops (not any on top). Next, add 1 tsp. uncooked dry rice on each chop. Salt and pepper to taste. Add 1 can tomato soup and rinse can out with ½ can water. Cover closely and simmer two hours, or until rice and chops are done.

* * * *

Another old adage promises that for every cloud there's a silver lining. This being so, let's just say that the fuel shortage could help us learn that tending our backyard potato patch produces a potato far superior to those spuds processed, packaged and frozen in some far-away plant. Food tastes so much better when home-grown; certainly when it comes to tomatoes that are fresh off the vine. Hamburgers or pizza from a fast food stand is temptingly easy, but costly when the price of gas hovers at the dollar mark. A better way to spend one's buck would be to stop on the way home and pick up a few lobsters served in this special way of Doris Gould's.

BAKED STUFFED LOBSTERS

6 lobsters
Stick of butter
1 c. of cracker crumbs [Ritz]
¼ c. fine bread crumbs
1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce

Cook lobsters in a kettle with 2" of water and 2 to 3T of salt for 20 min. Split down back and clean, saving tamale. Prepare stuffing and mix with meat from claws and tamale. Stuff cavity, leaving meat in tails and cover with lettuce leaves while in refrigerator to prevent stuffing from drying out. Bake 12 min. at 400 degrees.

* * * *

To be a true New Englander, a love of clams is a must. Long ago, one of Marshfield's settlers, Israel Hatch, wrote an ode to the clam. He went on at great length about simmering pots of clams, local officials who should have a care of "our North River clams" and ended his lengthy poem by saying: "Let others seek the marsh to drain — And build their dykes and dams — This, evermore, shall be our strain — "We clamor for the clams!" The Arabs may have their oil, but we have our tasty clams as a natural resource and, armed with the proper license, can scour the mud flats for the evening meal. Lillian Hampton's recipe would put a costly steak to shame.

CLAM FRITTERS

1 egg
½ c. milk or ½c. clam water
1 c. flour
1 tsp. sugar
pinch of salt
1 tsp. baking powder
1 c. ground clams

Beat egg. Add milk or clam water, sifted flour, sugar, salt, baking powder and ground clams. Drop by spoonful into hot fat.

4H Exchange

The Plymouth County Extension Service 4-H Department announces that four Japanese exchange students have arrived to spend several weeks in the area with host families. Under the direction of the UMass and LABO International Exchange Foundation, the students will be living with 4-H families to take back with them an understanding of family life, culture and appreciation of American society. In turn, the host families will be introduced to Japanese customs, language and lifestyles.

Families involved include: Mr. & Mrs. William Hersey of Pine St. who are hosting Noboku Maruyama, age 12.

Musings...

By John Cutler

— Bennett Cerf made a lot of money writing inspired tragedies and perspired pot-boilers.

The largest candle ever made was set up as a memorial to Enrico Caruso. It cost $5.000, was 18 feet high, 7 feet around and weighed 3 tons...lit annually for 24 hours on All Saint's Day, it's expected to last 1800 years.

— A politician who said Henry Wallace was his second choice as FDR's running mate for VP was asked who his first choice was: "Any son of bitch-red, black, white or yellow - who can get the nomination."

— I don't know what that Greek philosopher meant when he said, "No man can look at his feet without laughing."

— Winston Churchill: "I cannot help relecting that if my father had been an American and my mother British, instead of the other way around, I might have gotten here on my own."

— Is your watch lost if you know where it is at the bottom of the ocean?

Does a skunk have a sense of smell?

— Where do butterflies go when it rains? Incidentally, I have observed that butterflies prefer phlox to most other flowers. In our garden bees like rhododendron.

— Carlyle said it: "Gunpowder makes all men the same height." Does the H-bomb make all nations the same size?

— When he was on the U.S. Supreme Court bench, Felix Frankfurter admitted that he had never read the Constitution.

— Boston is said to be the place where the tide goes out but never comes in.

— Sometimes things are not so bad as they seem. They're worse.

— If a capenter is devised, is a reweaver dispatched?

— If you don't want to lose money in Las Vegas, don't take any with you.

— Have you heard of the tobacco tycoon whose bankroll went up in smoke?

— Job's turkey was so poor t had to lean aga nst a fence o gobble.

— If you owe a bore a dinner, send it to nim.

Kuhns Battle Board Of Health Over Lot 24

By Judith Epstein

Mr. and Mrs. John Kuhn of 25 Surrey Drive appeared before Selectmen last week to make public their case against the Board of Health, concerning a variance which would allow building on land which abuts their property. Selectmen have referred the matter to Town Counsel.

The Kuhns want the variance allowing a septic system to be installed in fill on lot 24, to be revoked, as they believe it is an unbuildable lot. They said that their 12 days of testimony in a court battle — and for which a decision is forthcoming — to restrain building on the lot provided adequate evidence for the Board of Health to revoke the variance. They were at first granted a hearing, they said, but subsequent meetings were cancelled and finally the hearing was cancelled altogether on the advice of Town Counsel.

"We want to make this public," John Kuhn said as he retold the complex tale of his land's septic problems, their land's unclear real estate history, and the long, expensive court case to restrain building on lot 24 which abuts their house within nine feet of their front foundation.

Kuhn said the variance under Title V granted last November was for what he understood to be ecomomic hardship. "We researched this, and found it was not the case," he said. The new hearing would elucidate additional evidence alleging that conditions were different than those set forth in the application for a Disposal Works Construction Permit, he said.

The variance was granted Kuhn said, because the board claimed they had received a successful perc test on the lot in October and that they found no septic problems in the area. Later testimony disclosed at least five failures on Surry Drive and Old Coach Road, Kuhn said.

The November meeting, was granted, was attended by then Board members, O'Brien, Civil Engineer Brian McSweeney, John Bradley (vice-chairman of the Planning Board, but then acting as Pinkerson's attorney), the Kuhns and two of their abutting neighbors.

Kuhn said he objected at

Cohasset Art Treasures Recovered

Almost a year to the day, art treasures worth up to $3 million, which were stolen from Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Herrington's Whitehead estate on Atlantic Avenue, were returned to their owners.

Six paintings, including a Rembrandt and a Van Gogh, and two Chinese Ming jars were found last week by Boston Police detectives John Carter and Alan Crisp in an undisclosed section of Dorchester. Garter said the art objects were returned to the Herrington's Friday, but declined to say whether they were removed to the Cohasset residence.

Police had been acting on information from an informant, but the actual break in the art thefts generated from the seizure of $200,000 worth of stolen goods in a Jamaica Plain garage the week before. According to Carter, the art thefts were not related to the other incident, although the source of information was the same.

Carter refused to reveal the identity of the informant, who has been charged with seven counts of receiving stolen property in another case. Suspects in the Herrington case are being held in Boston, he said, and a grand jury investigation is pending.

Last August 18, Cohasset police were called to the Herrington home where they found six empty spaces on the walls of the living room and adjacent room. Police reported that the wires of the small lamps attached to the paintings had been cut.

Mrs. Herrington told police that she had gone to bed at 11 p.m. the evening before, but had neglected to turn on the alarm system and lock the door where police presumed entry and exit were made. Sgt. John Rhodes reported that apparently two suspects had entered the home, with a vehicle parked on the side of the road. Rhodes notified Dedham District Attorney William Delahunt and the Worcester FBI office of the case.

FBI agent John Holroyd investigated the case initially, James Dunn, Jr., FBI Boston agent said, but received only sporadic information. Dunn said the FBI had nothing to do with the recovery and were not presently investigating the case. He explained that the

Who Should Hand Out Moorings?

Chairman of the Harbor Study Committee Charles Fink recommended that a transfer of authority of the mooring list be removed from the Harbormaster's duties and assumed by the Study Committee. The matter was taken under advisement.

"It's no longer fair to make the Harbormaster solely responsible." Fink remarked. Selectmen Henry Ainslie questioned whether the switch in delegation of additions and assignments to the harbor mooring list were Harbormaster Harry Ritter's responsibilities as a part of his job.

Fink explained that the changing nature of the commercial fishing fleet and the

Caseys Challenged To Boat Race

By Bucky Yardume

"Nobody ever challenged the Caseys before!"

You could tell the audacity of the idea rather tickled Steve Casey.

The Cohasset resident and former heavyweight wrestling and rowing champion plainly relished having the gauntlet flung before him.

Actually, the challenge to a sculling setto, wasn't directly to Steve.

Rather, it was to the 67-year-old Casey's son, Mike.

But a challenge to one Casey is a challenge to the entire clan.

And, like the man said, "Nobody ever challenged any of the Caseys before. We did the challenging!"

Steve hastened to add that his statement didn't include his years in the professional mat wars when challenges flew thick and fast, only to his amateur days in both rowing and rasslin'.

So who dared dare a Casey at the bat, or in this instance, at oarsmanship?

A rowing pupil of Steve's is — one Ron Reese, a 20-year-old from Hingham who is one of the young men regu-that meeting, stating that he didn't want variance for a septic system to be installed in what amounted to his front yard. One neighbor agreed with the Kuhn's, the other neighbor abstained from comment.

The subsequent granting of the variance then awaited Department of Quality Engineering (DEQE) approval or disapproval. "We heard it through the grapevine," Kuhn said,"that DEQE had turned down the granting of the variance." Mrs. Kuhn called O'Brien, she said, who said that via telephone conversations with him, the state had turned it down for many reasons. Mrs. Kuhn said that O'Brien indicated that to appeal the state's decision would be very difficult and would wind up in court and which was not likely to happen.

Kuhn also claimed that Bradley had intimidated the Board of Health "from day one." He read from portions of O'Briens daily log, which enumerated several phone calls from Bradley desiring to know the status of the land after the perc test was done. One entry which Kuhn read aloud stated, "Mr. Bradley called — angrily — I explained the situation — he feels that I am giving him the run around."

Kuhn showed the letter which finally arrived from the DEQE's Tewksbury Office, to the Board of Health on January 26, despite the phone calls disapproving the variance, listing nine reasons lot 24 did not comply with various sections of Title V. He pointed out that although the letter admits that the Department failed to issue written comments with the required 30 day period, and which therefore presumes DEQE approval, the concluding remarks of the letter were, "It is the opinion of the Department that the proposed disposal system is not in compliance with the minimum requirements of Title V of the State Environmental Code and a disposal works construction permit should not be issued by the Cohasset Board of Health for subject site."

Considering this and other evidence, Kuhn said, he feels that the Board of Health could revoke the variance immediately, to halt possible further court action, should they lose the case and have to appeal to a higher court. "We have incurred thousands of dollars to show the Board of Health how to do their job," Mrs. Kuhn said.

"Right now we have a septic system that has completely failed. The pumps in our pump system are five years old and have to be replaced for $1000," she said. She said that electricians, plumbers and engineers had been working at her home for the past two weeks, attempting to fix another of a series of problems that have been plaguing them since they moved into the house.

Selectmen agreed that further actions or hearing on the case should wait until a court disposition from the trial expected in September. They intended to abide by Town Counsel J. Blake Thaxter's opinion to cancel the hearing because of Pinkerson's attorney's objections. The Kuhn's said they had a right to know what those objections were.

Thaxter said last week that there was no case law which prohibited a hearing of this nature before a court determination. "In my judgment, I don't think they have a legal basis to hold another hearing. This issue will probably wind up in court. The only way Golden (the Kuhn's attorney) can get a hearing is to have a court order him,"she said.

Attorney Golden was unavailable for comment.

THE PITS of the problem at Kuhn residence on Surrey Drive is this septic system.

Controls Needed On Strait's Pond

Resident Susan Weil warned Selectmen last week of a potential emergency situation if Straits Pond's water levels can't be controlled by the tidal gate. The gate is now inoperable and money is needed by the towns of Hull and Cohasset to have it repaired.

Hull Selectmen had asked Cohasset for contributions for the gate's repairs in July. Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark said he believes no money is available for the project in reserve funds.

Clark has discussed the matter with Hull Selectman Simmy Hartstone, who suggested that money might be available from Hingham, as a culvert from the pond runs through that town. The control gate doesn't affect Hingham, Clark pointed out, and town officials there aren't expected to show enthusiasm in spending money on the tidal gate. Hingham Selectmen will, however, be asked to contribute, and Hull Selectmen will continue their efforts for the gate's repairs.

Clark also suggested that a definite figure for the repairs be affixed to adequately apprise the Advisory Board of the amount needed should they decide to allow a transfer of funds.

Weil was anxious costs be estimated quickly, as bids for construction can't go out until town funds are available, she said. She said it would be better to remove the gate altogether than to leave it up and constraining the water in Straits Pond to dangerously high levels.

Gown Museum Getting A Facelift

Painters' ladders were jutting up the front and side of the Gown Museum on Elm Street last week. Courtesy of contributions given to the Cohasset Historical Society, the cleanup of the museum's exterior was possible.

Larry Fone, owner of Cookworks, has been sponsoring the drive for contributions to the project. Fone said that the painting job will probably total several hundred dollars, and that contributions from merchants and individuals have only yielded $130 thus far.

Fone has considered erecting a fund raising thermometer sign to inspire gifts, and intends to ask Selectmen for help from the Tree and Park Department to plant new shrubbery around the edifice. Fone also expects that volunteers will finish painting the remaining side and back.

"It's an old historical building in the center of town," Fone said "It was blighted, it needed sprucing up." Fone has long been an advocate of beautifying Cohasset; his shop sports two planters out front, a decorative effort he wishes more merchants and the town would adopt.

The exterior of the Gown Museum will be renewed for the time being, but another concern of the Historical Society, Fone said, is preservation of the artifacts contained within. "The interior needs humidity control among other things," he noted. "It should be treated as a real museum."

Commentary—Sewer System Review

By Gilbert Tower

Cohasset is confronted with the problem of disposing of its wastewater. We have a public water supply system which delivers clean water to points all over the town. A wastewater disposal system would be opposite to the supply system.

It may be said that in most towns wastewater from bathrooms, together with rainfall, soaks into the ground and is no problem. In Cohasset, however, the ground is not absorbent in some areas. The soil has somewhat the character of clay. Groundwater is encountered a few feet below the surface and below that there is much ledge. The result is that wastewater in septic tanks and cesspools does not percolate. Conditions vary from house to house. Some houseowners report that they have no trouble with their septic tanks and cesspools. Others say that they require pumping out several times a year. If not pumped out the wastewater would overflow to neighbors yards and cause pollution. There are several districts which now cause serious trouble.

One is the Veteran's development on the east side of Rte. 3A. That area is drained by a little brook called Peppermint Brook which flows into Lilly Pond and contaminates the town's water supply. The condition is not alarming because Lilly Pond water is frequently tested and treated with chlorine.

But the Veteran's district definitely needs a sewer pipe. When the town subdivided the land area to provide house lots for veterans it was not realized that the soil would not percolate. So, permits were issued and houses were built before it was realized that there would be a problem.

Lincoln Hillside is another area where septic tanks and cesspools overflow. If the house lots were 40,000 sq. ft. or more in area it might be possible to enlarge the leaching areas to eventually dispose of the effluent from the septic tanks. When house lots are small nothing can be done. The difficulty is in proportion to the number of people who flush the water closet.

Many Cohasset houses on the rocky shore of the ocean and Little Harbor and the Gulf now discharge their septic tank effluent or wastewater into the ocean. A determination will be made to see whether that practice is permissible or whether those houses will have to connect

Officials Meet About New Board Of Health Member

Health board members Dr. Roger Pompeo and Marilyn Sweeney met with Selectmen last week to discuss the appointment of a new health board member. Agreement on the appointment was not made, but a special Selectmen's meeting will be held this week to interview all candidates.

Five applicants — Charlotte Leland, Elizabeth Van Slyck, John Ridge, Lynne Buckley, Pamela Johnson — have applied for the nine month vacancy.

Health board Chairman Pompeo explained that rigorous enforcement of Title V, which has hit Cohasset particularly hard, has made a board seat a time-consuming job. "Title V is restrictive. We spend two to 10 hours reviewing plans. All easily percable land in Cohasset is used up. We're down to half acre lots, in land with a lot of ledge," he said.

He said that a majority of plans that come to his board for installation of septic systems require variances. "Most plans do not meet Title V," he said.

"Other areas are being hurt," Pompeo continued, "because the Health Agent doesn't have time to carry out other inspections."

Time and work constraints, he said, have led the board to believe that an applicant who is in Cohasset daily would be an advantage. Sweeney said that her part-time secretarial job in the Sewer Department helps her in her health duties, because it introduces her to the town's issues.

"We need a person with time and we need help as quickly as possible. Any candidate would be suitable to me," she said.

Check the Mariner Service Directory and maybe we can help solve the problem!

AUDOBON AUCTION

Selectmen approved the auctioning of first edition Audobon books in New York, as they weren't being used at the Cohasset Public Library, nor were they properly housed.

CZM CONSULTANT

Selectmen voted unanimously to name Anderson-Nichols Corporation as the consultant for a Coastal Zone Management (CZM) grant to study the harbor. The selectmen will be the grantee for the $17,950 grant but will delegate authority to the Study Committee.

MANAGEMENT CHANGED

A change in management of Hugo's Lighthouse Restaurant and Kimball's By the Sea has been made to Theodore Vallas from the late John Carzas.

AUXILIARY APPOINTED

Bruce Collins of Cohasset has been appointed to the Auxiliary Police force. Collins will be joining seven Auxiliary Officers already serving the Police Department.

RESIGNATION

Selectmen accepted with regret the resignation of Francis Johnston from the Fire Station Study Committee.

CONTRIBUTION

Recreation Department Director Jack Worley recently received a $100 contribution from parents for arts and crafts materials used in summer playground activities.

CIVIL SERVICE LIST

Selectmen will request a list of six additional permanent intermittent police be handed down from Civil Service.

BEACH TRAFFIC

Due to concern about a sand dune that blocks driving vision when exiting from the parking lot at Sandy Beach, Selectmen approved the reversal of traffic in the lot. Beach visitors will now use the exit that had been used in the past.

SPECIAL TM

Selectmen decided that the police and fire associations can petition to have a Special Town Meeting, for a more immediate vote on their contracts. A petition for the meeting requires 200 voters signatures.

larly coached in sculling by Casey.

No date has been set yet for the race between Reese and Casey's son Mike.

But it's imminent. One doesn't let a challenge collect dust.

"I like to live dangerously," chuckled Reese, who's been rowing now for a bit over two years and took up sculling through Steve's influence.

"I'm still only a beginner by rowing standards," admitted Reese, a 6-1, 170-pounder who is almost as tall as Mike but gives away over 20 pounds to his opponent.

"I remember when I started," reflects Ron. "I fell out of everything."

But he's come a long way since then and days as a youngster when his sports tastes ran more to hockey and biking.

Long enough, figures Reese, who went to UMass Amherst and has worked as a carpenter for Bob Burns of the Greenhouse Restaurant in Cohasset, to take on the more experienced and bigger Mike Casey.

Reese has been rowing 10 to 15 miles a day since competition in the Cromwell Cup races in Philadelphia when he and the Casey-coached eight-oared shell turned the tables on a Coast Guard entry in the 2,000 meter race and won the gold medal in the national competition.

Before that, they competed in the New Englands on Worcester's Lake Quinsigamond and finished second. Who finished first? The Coast Guard eight they beat in Philly.

There's a big difference between rowing in multi-sculls and singles.

Steve, who's rowed them all, including five matches with Diamond Sculls champion Bob Pierce knows.

"A really good single sculler can beat an eight," declares Steve. "But only if he's really good."

Yeah, but can Ron beat son Mike is the question?

"He has a real good chance," concedes Steve, who isn't about to rule against son Mike. "Ron has a good chance to be a great sculler if he really works at it. He's tall and rangy and not too heavy. He has stamina from his cross country running."

In his competitive sculling days, Casey, who stands 6-3 and weighs 190 now, scaled about 203-205.

"They all thought wrestlers couldn't row because we were muscle-bound," Steve chuckles, but he proved different.

As tutor of both the principles, Casey isn't making any pre-race predictions.

Ron, though, says, "I really think I can beat Mike."

He's rowed eight-oared, double and single sculls. He complains that there isn't enough competitive racing. He'd like to see at least two races a week. But he's rowed enough to believe he's in good enough shape to take Mike.

The race will be on Straits Pond where Casey regularly tutors Ron and others.

But at the moment, Casey's fresh out of boats.

"We may have to borrow one from Riverside or Cambridge Boat Club," says Steve.

But a race there'll be.

Nobody's about to challenge the Caseys and have the challenge go unanswered.

with a sewer.

A few years ago, Congress enacted the Clean Water Act. The federal government is determined that pollution of the country must be prevented. One thing is certain and sure. It is that Cohasset is going to have a sewage system and wastewater treatment plant. The sewer commissioners acting for the town contracted with Metcalf and Eddy Engineers to perform Step 1 which would be the selection of a site for a treatment plant. No site has been decided upon because abutters have vetoed every suggestion. Step 2 would be to prepare plans for the treatment plant and main sewer pipe. But Step 2 cannot be taken until a site is chosen. Therefore the situation is stuck. If a few abutters are obstructive, their lands will have to be taken by eminent domain because a highly important town project must not be prevented.

The preparation of plans for a treatment plant and sewer pipes will depend upon how many streets will be sewered and what will be the capacity of the treatment plant. So far as possible the disposal of wastewater should be accomplished by the septic tanks and cesspools of individual houses. Some are now inadequate or can not be made to work so that a connection to a sewer pipe is unavoidable.

To find the answer to the problem it is necessary to know about the sewage disposal arrangements of every house in town. A complete survey should be made and a report prepared to determine what streets require sewer pipes or "laterals" and what streets do not need to be sewered. The cost to the town will depend upon such a report. It will be the function of the Board of Health to prepare such a comprehensive report. At present the Board of Health has a health agent who is Kevin O'Brien. he investigates the operation of septic tanks of existing houses and makes perk tests of house lots where new houses are proposed.

The job of preparing a report to cover the whole town will be more than one man can handle. Another person is needed besides Kevin O'Brien. More money for the Board of Health will be needed so that an article will have to be prepared for the warrant at next town Meeting, or the Advisory Board will have to authorize increased expenditure. Another member is needed for the Board of Health to handle the situation. The Board of Health has jurisdiction over septic tanks, cesspools and pipes located more than 10 feet from a house. Drain piping inside of houses and within 10 feet outside of houses is the province of the plumbing inspector, who is associated with the town's building inspector.

The quantity of wastewater to be disposed of by septic tanks and leaching beds could be reduced by providing dry wells into which to conduct water from shower baths and bathtubs, which is called grey water because it is only very slightly polluted. Drain from washing machines could also be piped to dry wells from which it could gradually soak into the ground. The detergents in the water from washing machines are easily handled by the sewage treatment process, but sludge from detergents would have to be removed from a dry well occasionally.

Naturally Cohasset would like to avoid as much expense as possible in the cost and operation of its sewage treatment plant. Some study will be needed to determine how many Cohasset streets should be sewered. It is understood that Scituate intends to sewer all its streets.

The net cost to the town of the wastewater disposal system will be reduced by a large contribution by the Federal Government represented in Massachusetts by the Department of Water Pollution Control, 110 Tremont St., Boston. It is understood that the Federal Government will pay for the treatment plant and main pipes, but not the laterals and not operating costs. It is also understood that the federal contribution will be 75 percent of the cost. The Commonwealth of Massachusetts will contribute 15 percent. That will leave 10 percent to be paid by the town. An attempt has been made to calculate how much money will be paid by the town but the attempt has not succeeded. The state's share in the cost will be determined by the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering of which Mr. Thomas McLaughlin is acting commissioner.

The terms of some of the sewer commissioners will soon expire so that more people are needed to take an interest in the problem of wastewater disposal and to cooperate with Metcalf and Eddy. The project must go forward.

Cohasset has an immediate need for a third member of its Board of Health. This article is being written hoping that someone will volunteer ☐Kerry Crehan recently spent three weeks on the Wellesley College campus participating in the "Exploration '79" Program which allows young people to study academic subjects of interest in a college-like setting. Most of the 200 students, half boarders and half day students, are entering their sophomore or junior year of high school. They were from all across the U.S. and several foreign countries. Kerry will be a sophomore next year at Cohasset High School. She is the daughter of Herbert and Karen Crehan of 41 Sohier St.

Kerry concentrated her studies in French and Communications Psychology. Letters of credit may be forwarded to the student's school, but the Program encourages kids to study out of their interest in the subject and desire to learn, and not for the grade. Afternoons were spent participating in mini-courses and workshops of one's choice (T-shirt making, women's self-defense, Barbershop Quarter singing, French cooking) and groups went into Boston for a Red Sox game, an Esplanade concert and a Summerthing jazz concert. They even went to Somerville to visit Steve's Ice Cream (an establishment of reputed renown!).

☐Ellen Gainor, a 1976 graduate of Cohasset High School is in her second summer with the "Exploration" Program where she teaches drama and directs theatre. She is an English major entering her senior year at Harvard University, and while there is no theatre department at Harvard, she is very much involved in drama through the Arts Society of Leverett House, the Harvard-Radcliff Club and the Boston Children's Theatre. She is planning a career in an arts-related area.

HAND IN HAND Rebecca and Billy Jordan, 6 and 4, respectively, enjoy a stroll along Ripley Road.

☐Our Sad Story, says a poster in the Cohasset News Co. window, is that we need a new home for our three year old, half-Siamese cat, since she can't go with us when we move to Saudi Arabia! "She" is a lovely, affectionate cat who belongs to the Johnston family, and no one has called to take her yet.

Mrs. Marie Johnston of 120 Fairoaks Lane, and 12 year-old twins, Susan and Jeffrey, will join Francis Johnston in Saudi Arabia Aug. 30. He is already at work developing a new seaport for the brand new city of Rasahram on the Persian Gulf. He is with the Todd Warehousing and Distributing Co., N.J. and until June, worked for the Massachusetts Port Authority for nine years.

The Johnstons will live in a community of mostly Americans and Europeans and will be provided with private tutoring for the children, a completely furnished house, a car, all medical care (in England), and two round trips to England each year. Mrs. Johnston says that foreigners aren't particularly welcome in Saudi Arabia, so the 'package' is made as attractive as possible.

Foreigners find it most difficult to assimilate in the cities and she thinks that all too often they fail to honor local custom. Women, who aren't allowed to do too much, still dress in the long-sleeve, long dress when going out. Mr. Johnston has reported, via satellite telephone, that the women look very attractive dressed that way, and Mrs. Johnston plans to respect the dress codes.

"Cohasset is our home," she said, and while they are sad to leave, they are looking to the future and are ready to learn from the new experience ahead of them in Saudi Arabia.

☐The Gaston family will be renting their house for two years. John and Linda Gaston have two children.

☐Ooop! Last week we said 16 year-old Hannah Clinto was not qualified to sail in the Sunfish World Class Competition. We should have said she is NOW qualified and will compete in Aruba next year.

☐Navy Seaman Recruit, Michael Palimeri of 347 N. Main St., has completed re--cruit training at the Naval Training Center in San Diego, Calif. He is the oldest of five children of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Palimeri and a 1979 graduate of Cohasset High School. He signed on with the Navy for four years last September, in a late entry program.

☐The Boston Opera Association has announced, unfortunately, that the benefit performance on Sept. 20 of Verdi's Requiem by members of Milan's LaScala Opera Company, will not take place due to LaScala's last minute cancellation of its entire U.S. tour. The September performance was to have been their only one in Boston, and a fund-raiser for the Metropolitan Opera Company's annual spring visit. Co-chairmen of the benefit, Mr. and Mrs. Byron Tosi of Beach Island Street, and assistants, Mr. and Mrs. John Larkin Thompson of Jerusalem Road, have the unfortunate task of refunding ticket money, as all patrons' tickets had been sold out.

☐Kris Bobo, a Junior at Tufts University and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Bobo of Beach Island Street, attained an "A" rating at a riding testing held Sunday, July 29 in Old Lyme, Ct. She is an active Dressage competitor with the Ponkapoag Pony Club of Milton.

Scituate Selectmen Rap Murray Harbor Legislation

Scituate Selectmen recently took issue with legislation introduced by state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, R-Cohasset, which would change the formula for excercise taxes on boats in harbor-river areas shared by two communities.

The bill calls for the taxes and mooring fees to go to the community that expends money on maintenance and repair of the harbor area.

Selectman Gerald Dwight raised the issue, noting the bill would create problems for other communities and wouldn't be applicable just to the Scituate-Cohasset harbor issue.

Cohasset and Scituate have had some differences over the issue of which town will collect and keep the excise taxes and fees for boats moored in Scituate waters that are in Cohasset Harbor.

The harbormaster sticks by his estimate of being able to moor more than 100 boats in the harbor, said Dwight. That represents $3,000 to $4,000 a year in income the first year, he said.

Dwight pointed to the cooperation between Marshfield and Scituate involving the North River, and noted he felt a similar arrangement could be worked out with Cohasset.

Selectman Carl Pipes expressed doubt over the income quoted for moorings in Cohasset Harbor. Having another area to patrol may mean another man on duty which doesn't mean the town will clear $3,000 or $4,000, he said.

In addition, he noted other towns mentioned by Dwight weren't in the same situation, since Cohasset Harbor has an invisible town boundary; with Cohasset patrolling and maintaining the harbor.

Scituate hasn't had anything to do with maintenance or patrol before, said Pipes. "I don't know if it (the bill) is ill conceived, and don't see how it adversely affects us; I think we're better off leaving Cohasset Harbor alone."

The bill is too nebulous, said Chairman Rose Zoob. Who is to determine what "expends" means, she said.

Although a vote wasn't taken, a majority of Selectmen favored writing Sen. Allan McKinnon, D-Weymouth, and Rep. Philip Johnston, D-Marshfield, expressing concern with the bill and asking for their support in defeating it.

The bill has already been passed in the House and has been forwarded to a Senate committee.

Mooring

accompanying problem of lack of mooring space for those boats have put Ritter in an unfair position. "It puts one individual in a position of emotional strain. It's not only unfair, but it puts him in a spot where people think he's playing favorites," Fink said.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle felt that control of the mooring list should be retained as Ritter's responsibility. "He should make decisions. Over and above what he can do, he can bring to the Board of Selectmen." he said.

Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark was sympathetic to Fink's suggestion and Ritter's position. "I know what Harry's been going through these last few years," he said, noting the mounting number of mooring complaints that have been filed.

Ainslie also felt that control by the Study Committee would afford too lengthy a time in which to make additions and alterations to the list.

Art Theft

case had been handled by local and Boston police, as the FBI's jurisdiction in these matters involves interstate transport or flight. "We were initially involved because we didn't know where we stood," Dunn said. He indicated, however, that investigation would resume if an interstate connection is suspected.

The paintings, recovered undamaged and in their frames, are: "Portrait of a lady" by Rembrandt, an oil painting dated to 1635; "St. Matthew" by El Greco, an oil on canvas; "River Scene with Sailing Boats" by Van Goyen, an oil on a panel; "The Harvest" by Breughel, an oil on a panel; "The Courtship" by Netscher, an oil on canvas and "Salute on a Calm Sea" by Van DeVelde.

Free Open Skating Competition

The Silver Blades Skating Club hosted its 14th Annual Cohasset Open Free Skating Competition Aug. 4 and 5 at its home, Cohasset Winter Gardens. Over 280 competitors participated, some from as far away as Atlanta, Georgia.

Among the Silver Blades members receiving gold medals were: Cheryl Adams from Cohasset in the Special Juvenile category.

Recreation Awards

Inclement weather forced the Swim Center to postpone it's "Pool Day", planned for Sunday, Aug. 19. It has been re-scheduled for Sunday, Sept. 2, at 1 p.m. and is open to the public. It will include fun, games, relays, and demonstrations for all ages.

SWIM AWARDS

Brenda Birmann, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerhard Birmann of 107 Atlantic Ave., was the recipient of this year's Bancroft Award, given Sunday night at the Swim Center's annual awards night. Brenda has been a member of the Cohasset Swim Team for three years and in her first year, was chosen as the Most Improved Swimmer.

She has participated in the Red Cross program through the advanced life saving designation. She is an assistant instructor in the Red Cross program this year, and was top scorer in her class of 16-and-under on the Swim Team. She will enter her junior year at Cohasset High School in September.

The Bancroft Award is an honor given each year to the youth who has shown exemplary behavior in his or her involvement with the Swim Center and it s programs.

Drama Workshop Does Itself Proud

Once again the Cohasset Drama Workshop Summer Company has performed a difficult play with elan. Under the direction of Ron Emmons, the cast can be proud of last weekend's performances of Jules Feiffer's comedy "Knock, Knock".

The play was difficult in that it required the audience's (as well as the characters') disassociation, a separation from the belief that events would occur as normal consciousness dictates. We and they were thrown into a chaotic fairy tale where nothing and everything seemed real.

Cohn and Abe are two old geisers who have lived a secluded existence for over 20 years in a cabin in the woods. One night their quibbling but otherwise safe and peaceful lives are interupted by the granting of one of three wishes afforded Cohn. With the subsequent visits of a Wiseman who punctuates the play's action with his reappearances as a gambler, mainman and judge, and of Joan or Arc who later metamorphoses into a shrewish hausfrau, we were left wondering where the difference between life and death, right and wrong, could be found if they could be found at all.

Perhaps the play doesn't remain in what we know as reality, because realism is likened to despair by the characters. At one point Cohn believes he has shot and killed Abe, only to find that Abe has come back to life again — reincarnated, as it were. What Abe himself seems to find a worse fate than death, though not so terrible, after all, is the "eternal sameness" that has been foisted upon him.

KNOCK KNOCK and who's there in the play by the same name are Drama Workshop members Meredith Fink and Kurt Rever.

Although Joan's first mission was to recruit Cohn and Abe on a spaceship to heaven, she succeeds by having herself lifted to that elusive lofty place, and more importantly by finally removing the crotchety pair from the cabin, into the "outside" once again. Cohn's blase response to this emergence, "You know, it's not so bad," implies that the pair will go on to bigger and better things, that their reapperance in the world will not be a horrible and debilitating experience.

This second production of the season, which earlier presented Feiffer's "Hold Me!" has given Drama Workshop members still in high school a chance to work with and learn from graduates who have continued work in the theatre.

Appearing as Joan of Arc was Meredith Fink, a senior at Cohasset High who has appeared in every Drama Workshop production since she entered high school and who was named one of 15 members of the All New England Cast this year.

Another member of the All New England Cast was James Vivian, who played Wiseman. He plans to study theatre at Boston University in the fall.

Abe was portrayed by Eric Joseph a 1977 graduate of Cohasset High School and a student in the School of Visual and Performing Arts at Syracuse University. He plans a year of study abroad.

Kurt Reever, a teacher of social studies at Cohasset High and a graduate of Clark University, appeared as Cohn. This is the second summer Rever has worked with the Drama Workshop.

Stage Manager for "Knock, Knock" was Caroline Wampole, a transfer student to Cohasset High School. She and Susanna Mastrobuono played Joan's "voices."

Ronald Barnes Guest Artist At Recital

RONALD BARNES

The music of the fifty-one cast bronze bells of the Jessie M. Barron Memorial Carillon in the tower of Saint Stephen's Church, Cohasset, continues each Sunday afternoon, from 4:00 to 5:00 o'clock, until Sept. 30.

The guest artist for the recital Aug. 26 will be Ronald Barnes, a native of Lincoln, Nebraska, who received his Bachelor of Music degree from the University of Nebraska, and the Master of Arts degree from Stanford University. He held positions as carillonist in Nebraska, at Stanford University, and at the University of Kansas before his appointment to the position at the National Cathedral in Washington, D.C. in 1963.

In addition to his carillon playing at the Washington Cathedral, he has taught many prominent students, served as consultant for important carillon installations, and has been active as a composer, arranger, and researcher of music for the carillon.

Among his many published works is his edition of the complete collection of the "Preludios" of Mathias van den Gheyn, the eighteenth century Belgian composer whose works are to the carillon what Bach's are to the organ. It has become standard repertory for American carillon players, and is probably the greatest single contribution to the literature of original music for the instrument. His program in Cohasset will include many of his own pieces.

The bells are heard to good advantage from the Cohasset Common and adjacent areas, including the courtyard at the base of the carillon tower. Printed programs are provided at the time of the recital.

There is no charge.

Obituaries

Mary I. Peterson

Mary I. (Bryan) Peterson, 69, a former Scituate and Springfield resident, died Sunday, Aug. 19, in her home.

Mrs. Peterson was born in Belfast, Ireland. She worked, until her retirement, as a hairdresser at Mr. John's in Scituate. She was a member of the Second Congregational Church.

She leaves her husband, Cholly D. Peterson; a son, Bryan Peterson of Halfway, Ore.; a daughter, Mrs. Ina Hastie of Scituate; a brother, James Bryan of San Francisco; a sister, Mrs. Sadie Hachadourian of Springfield; and seven grandchildren.

The Rev. Steven Weaver conducted funeral services Wednesday at Byron's Funeral Home, 1858 Allen St., Springfield. Burial was in Hillcrest Park Cemetery, Springfield.

Donations may be made in her memory to the American Cancer Society.

Doll Museum Little Girls Delight

The heart of every little girl or lover of dolls would be swelled by a visit to the Little Women Doll Museum on South Main Street recently opened by Marian Beal.

Mrs. Beal's collection of dolls, hundreds of them, was inspired by her mother's and grandmother's affection for the lovely feminine creatures. In fact, the collection features the doll that perhaps started it all, the doll Mrs. Beal played with as a child, now three generations old.

"I thought it would be wonderful to have people see the dolls instead of having them packed away," Mrs. Beal said. "I've been looking for a place for four years," she said and added that she loves her new location, with its charming small rooms conducive to browsing and display.

Mrs. Beal explained that she lived in Europe for many years, allowing her to collect dolls from many countries but largely from France and Germany. Although not all the nations of the world are represented at the Doll Museum, the variety and beauty of the dolls there offer study in doll history and construction.

For instance, many of the dolls are made of bisque, paper mache, and celluloid; a few are made of wax, wood and porcelain. Their faces and time — which may date back as far as the 1700's. Most have synthetic and human hair; one boasts a head full of blonde lambs wool hair.

The dolls sit serenely in their glass cases, although we suspect that they enjoy a private night life, during the hours when all things inanimate come alive. But Mrs. Beal pointed out that some of the dolls do have purposes aside from the decorative. There is a walker, a waltzer, a mechanical music box doll, and a special personage of three faces, with a revolving laughing, sleeping and crying head.

Mrs. Beal feels that preservation is important for her dolls now but remarked, "I always played with my dolls. I think they should be played with. My granddaughter will just sit with them on her lap for hours and hold them."

The little Women Doll Museum offers more than a doll exhibition, the shop sells doll houses, furniture, and doll-related articles. They will have antique replica dolls for sale in the future and no, they don't make repairs.

Jn Netsers Win Wightman Play Title

By Karin Bartow

The "Cohasset Rec'ers", two junior teams in the Harris-Wightman League of the NELTA (New England Lawn Tennis Association), beat Abington last week, making them the South East Champions.

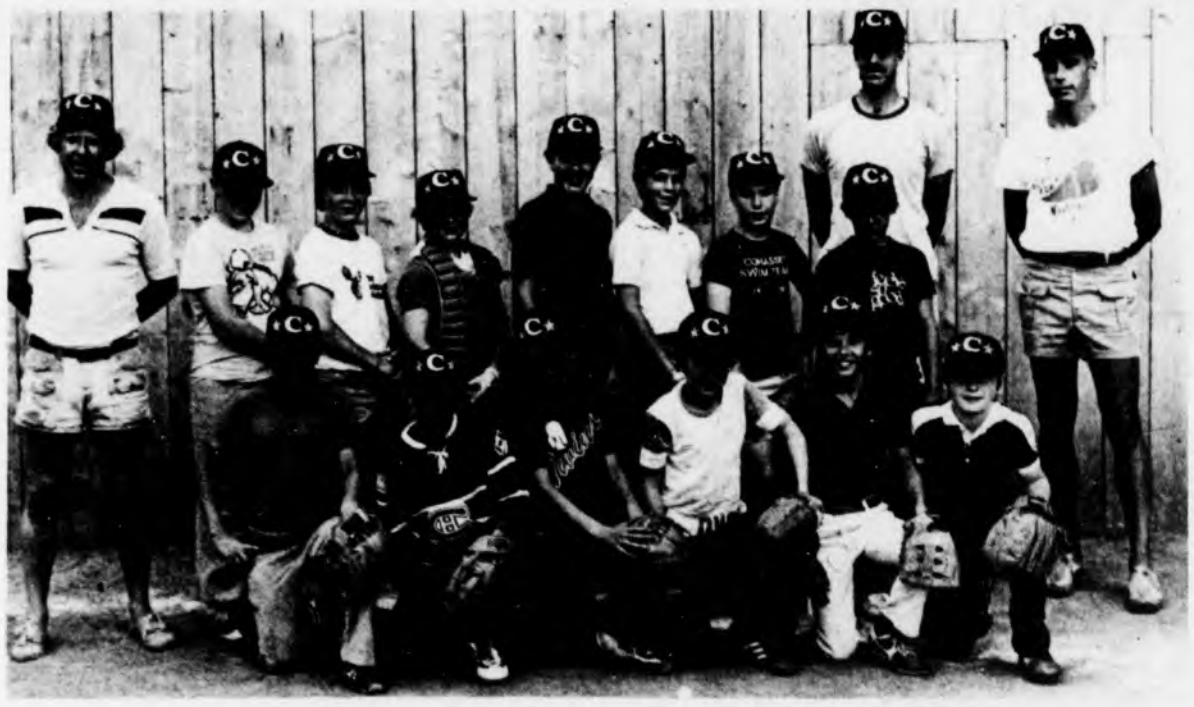
The 14-and-under team played Thursday taking a full sweep, 8-0; the 18-and-under team won 5-1 Saturday.

The 14-and-under's will play The Sportsman Tennis Team, representing Metro Boston, Aug. 27 at the Sportsman's Club, Boston, in the quarter-finals round. The date of the 18-and-under's match has not been announced.

The Harris-Wightman League is being promoted by the NELTA to establish a "major junior grassroots program in New England." The conviction that kids who are introduced to organized tennis programs will develop positive and enthusiastic feelings about the sport, is shared by the 35 players and their parents. Mrs. Helen Pratt, physical education teacher at the Osgood School and a person who many times before has helped coach and advise community sports activities, was instrumental in forming the teams. Like the other parents, Mrs. Pratt wanted to see the kids involved in structured activity in tennis on a community team.

Getting themselves organized and into the League was the first step of team play. They have come under the wing of the Recreation Department and have received much support from them. John Roy, who coaches tennis for the department, has worked with the 18-and-under team and helped wherever he can. "The enthusiasm and extra time John has given has meant a great deal," Mrs. Pratt says. She coaches the 14-and-under team.

Most teams that Cohasset plays aren't members of the NELTA, so "it's been just fun between towns," says Mrs. Pratt. "The morale is terrific; they learn so much in team play," she adds. Her team won all eight games in their match with Hingham, the other NELTA member team in the South East area. None of the kids are ranked within the League; however there are now three who are strong enough to play in a few B Level matches. They aren't eligible to qualify for ranking until next year.



The format differs somewhat from match to match, but the teams usually play two singles, one doubles, and sometimes a mixed doubles game.

The parents are the greatest cheerleaders, says Mrs. Pratt, and their help in driving to and from matches and practices has been an indispensable part of the spirit of these two young, talented and successful teams.

The players in the 14-and-under team include: (listed according to ranking) Mia Graham, Joy Pratt, Krissie Ralff, Justine Hoffman, Elaine Mullen, Diane Mullen, Alison Broeffle, and Ann O'Connell; Shannon Collins, John Ryan, Michael O'Donnell, John Colocousis, Paul Riley, Skipper Besse, Jeb Bradley, Lee Wilson and Bill Riley.

The players in the 18-and-under team include: Lisa McAdams, Sue Dalrymple, David Schliecher, Jerry White, Karen Murphy, Ronnie White, Bob Tis, Janel England and Lauren Murphy.

In addition, Sandy Dalrymple, Mike Brady, Mike Nellon, Jack Antoin, Sue Murphy, and Madeline Roy have played several matches with some of the other team players, as a 16-and-under group.

□Cheryl Adams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Adams of Reservoir Rd., took a gold medal at the 14th Annual Cohasset Open Free Skating Competition held Aug. 4 and 5 at the Cohasset Winter Gardens. Executing a strong, smooth program, Cheryl was placed first by all five judges winning the Special Juvenile Category. She was one of three members of the Silver Blades Skating Club to win a gold medal.

Prior to this U.S.F.S.A. competition, Cheryl has won other gold medals in many I.S.I.A. competitions locally as well as a Mid-Atlantic I.S.I.A. competition in Lake Placid in January of this year. She is also a member of the Silver Blades Eaglettes Precision team which recently placed second to take the silver medal in the Worcester Open Freestyle and Precision competition.

Among other things, summer spells outdoor parties. Those first weeks of August were ideal for beach parties, picnics, barbecues and back yard pool parties. Steamy, hot days would never end it seemed and a rash of invitations went out just in advance of two weekends of foul weather. Many a garage was hurriedly swept, many a menu changed to accomodate a drop of 40 degrees in temperature. Typical New England weather we've had, that makes it seem like tempting fate to plan anything outdoors. Well, no matter what the weather, blueberries are always part of the summer scene. This cake of Martha Collins is made in a 10-inch tube pan, ample for a party, or you can do what Martha does, store half in the freezer until some stormy winter night when blueberries are scarce.

BLUEBERRY CAKE

2 c. sugar
2 eggs
3 c. flour
1 c. milk
½ c. shortening
½ tsp. salt
4 tsp. double acting baking powder
1 pt. blueberries

Cream sugar, shortening and eggs for 2 min. Add dry ingredients alternately with milk, saving ¼ c. flour to sprinkle on berries before adding. Sprinkle granulated sugar on top of batter before baking for 50 min. at 375 degrees.

Not one to sit around, James Sherwin has a busy retirement schedule, one which includes gardening and beach combing. He has been kind enough to share with us his recipe for Rose Hip Jam and, just about now, if you, too, like to walk the beaches, you'll find the wild roses fading and rose hips ripe for the picking. Chock full of vitamins, rose hips provide the makings of healthful, sumptuous jams or jellys (even wine) and other liquid forms of cordial and tea.

ROSE HIP JAM

6 c. ripe rose hips
1 orange
1 lemon
2 c. water
3 c. sugar

Scrape out seeds, using only rind of rose hips. Cut peel of orange and lemon in slivers. Add to water. Boil 5 min. Add sugar until dissolved. Add juice of lemon and orange and rose hips. Cover and simmer 15 min. Uncover and cook until hips are clear and transparent and syrup is thick. Pour into hot, sterilized jars. Seal. Makes 4 half pint jars.

Several weeks ago we asked for your favorite summertime recipes and, thanks to all who responded, I now have recipes for cold soups (one for a pumpkin soup), quick breads, cucumber boats and scalloped scallops. Having them on file, is like money in the bank for me and in weeks to come, we'll print them, for surely more hot weather will be along. For now, here is Amy Gibson's easy summer treat called:

CHOCO-NUT ICE CREAM SHELLS

2 c. semi-sweet chocolate bits
¼ c. butter or margarine
¼ c. cream or canned milk
½ c. cocoa krispies cereal

Combine all but the cereal in top of double boiler and stir over hot water until melted and well mixed. Remove, add cereal and mix. Quickly press mixture around sides and bottom of muffin papers. Fill with ice cream.

North Shore Jibes Continue

• PATCHES

By Lois Martin

My stars and garters, when will it cease. This wearing, worrisome namecalling of folks on the South Shore by our neighbors gracing the North Shore continues.

Once again Tony Chamberlain of Duxbury has been constrained, like a weapon that self-destructs, to bring forward the high-nosed opinions of the northerners. This time the Globe carried his story about our yacht clubs as viewed by Marbleheaders. And in that solid coastal niche, more rocky than beachy, a woman referred to our yacht clubs as being "legion halls without liquor."

Who told? Who started that lusterless rumor? When was that woman included in a South Shore event? Did someone forget to offer her a drink or did they feel she'd had plenty?

We know there are differences between the two shores. That's why we're here. But to be taken to task for lack of quality in our yachts, our clubs and our sailors is upsetting.

Let's get to it right off. We do indeed have yacht clubs on the South Shore. They do have liquor available. And it's not consumed out of a bottle shielded in a paper bag. Our yachtsmen have handsome crafts as well as navigational skills that help them skirt treacherous northern shores.

And for heaven's sake. What did the legion ever do to deserve inclusion in the insult? Isn't it enough they're blemished with the tag of Legionaires disease? Our American Legion is a proud organization, halls of its own and with trophies that'll match what they've got hanging in the swell environs of the elite.

The disheartening piece was included on the recreation page, making it lighter substance than the obituary section to be sure. And Chamberlain gently chides, as best a South Shore resident is able, the prestigious for its purist views in sailing.

But the dagger of message is still there, couched with further jabs at our restaurants, our entertainment, even our which Lord knows is not fill trucked in from Revere.

I've wracked my brain to remember class up north where I've been an occasional guest.

Anyway I know they've got nice girlie shows on the Saugus thoroughfare. And if I remember correctly the numerous health spas are available to keep North Shoresmen in shape with on request massages.

Still, between the lines of the recurring indictments, I get the feeling the South Sh is seen as inferior because we don't have the snobs they do. That's the heart of the matter. Somehow in reproducing down here we've had a genetic loss of snobs.

We have people who are distinguishing, discerning, even excluding. But, I've come up with too few to satisfy what's called the purist requirement. Town meeting dress, for example, tends to be casual in some of our communities. But, women have removed hair curlers before the gavel sounds.

There's an eclectic air to the South Shore. We have a broad spectrum of humanity contributing to a culture that embraces the masses even from Marblehead as it works to establish a fit gateway to the Cape.

But don't misunderstand me. We've got people down here who won't speak to you. There are some who so cherish their element they won't be bothered with yours.

Rather than leave any stone unturned, however, I struck out on a snob search, gleaning various opinions from people, none of whom believed they were snobs.

It was generally conceded that Duxbury has enough snobs and Cohasset has at least a few. However, Rockland and Abington are viewed as being snob free. It is suspected there are snobs in Marshfield but since they wouldn't speak with us I wasn't able to verify it.

Studies show some people long to be snobs, seeing that as an end in itself to superiority. But there's an element of would be snobs who can't quite get the hang of it and lapse into an acceptance of people no true snob would abide.

Snobs are defined as people who make other people uncomfortable, by sheer determination. And one woman said they have a "maddening to the point of being laughable" impact on society. This same woman conceded she has among her friends one snob. But that's because the woman wasn't always a snob and their friendship has somehow managed to ride out the unsettling waves of one person being superior to the other. There's a speech pattern, she said, prerequisite to being an authentic snob as opposed to a phoney one. "Have you been to that charming little restaurant on the far side of Bermuda," I'm told is the way to do it.

This theory, though, is in direct contrast to the opinion of another interviewee who maintains snobbery is congenital. She bases that on her acquaintanceship with a snob "who was born that way."

At any rate, it is agreed the South Shore has plenty of snobs. We're not inclined to import them apparently. And strangely enough while the snob is known as someone making someone else uncomfortable, the concensus says class makes others comfortable.

But snobs can be appealing, especially when they live on the North Shore.

And we're disposed to have them visit as they will, meandering the gentler Rte 3 as a repose from Rte. 1. We take everybody here and we politely overlook superiority wherever necessary.

SS Chamber Group Plans Auditions

On Wednesday, Sept. 19. the south Shore String Chamber Orchestra will hold auditions for the second season for violin, viola, cello, and bass for students age 12 - 18, at the Martinson Middle School on Forest St. in Marshfield, 6:30 - 8:30 p.m.

Students may apply from any South Shore communities. Auditioners should prepare a solo and scales and be prepared to sight-read. Rehearsals will be every Wednesday, 6:30 - 8:30 p.m. at Martinson School, starting Sept. 26.

The Orchestra was established in 1978 by co-directors Candace Kniffen and Susan C. Sylvester to meet the needs of advanced string players on the South Shore. Anyone interested in auditioning should contact Mrs. Sylvester at 837-2307 or Mrs. Kniffen at 293-3147 before Sept. 14.

ANGLER'S CORNER

By Roger Hare

The bluefish moved in along our shores last week and you can catch them now off Minot Light, Humarock Beach or between the Bug Light and the Gurnet at the entrance to Duxbury Bay. You will have to look for them along the beaches but a good sized school is hanging in the channels at Duxbury Bay.

It's not necessary to go all the way to Provincetown looking for bluefish. A lot of mackerel were chopped up last week off Scituate by these blues as they tore into the tiger striped fish off the beaches of Scituate. You can take blues in the surf at any beach, and a very hot spot is off Duxbury Beach between High Pines and the Gurnet Light. Use a popper like Stan Gibbs' mackerel colored popper. I prefer the ounce and a quarter size, but others like the two ounce size colored white.

Another good plug to catch blues in the surf is the blue and white Atom swimmer with the white buck tail trailing hook and others are the Rebel and Rapala swimmers. Just about any plug will catch blues now, and it is not necessary to cast it out very far. I have just heard that blues were caught last week off the jetties at Scituate and off the beach at the entrance to Quincy Bay.

There was a school of striped bass early last week off the beaches at Manomet and at Plymouth beach and surf casters caught several 15 pound sized fish. Two larger 30 pound bass were caught in Quincy Bay on live pogies.

Lou Civitarese of Marshfield fished with Paul Atkinson just outside Green Harbor and caught a mixed bucket of fish including several small cod, some pollock and one nice tautog or black fish. He also caught one sea robin.

The Giant Bluefish Tuna fishing slowed considerably last week, and there were a couple of days when no fish were caught at all. This is a sharp contrast to last year's fishing when the weekly catch averaged about a hundred fish. The quota of 1750 tuna was reached last year just after Labor Day. This year's quota will not be reached. Killer whales are the reason. They are eating the tuna in the Southeast corner of Stellwagen Bank.

Mike Gaetano called me last week and reported that he thought he had seen a Manta Ray jumping out of the water at the entrance to Green Harbor. I have never heard of a Manta Ray this far north and have never heard of one jumping from the water. Perhaps it was a large skate, but I have never heard of one of them jumping either.

I have been busy moving all week from our big home on Forest Street, Marshfield to 245 Webster Street. It is a smaller house and I am having a problem fitting all of my fishing gear in. Before moving I got out bluefishing one day with Robert Milardo and Wayne Thomas, Marshfield's Eames Way principal. We caught 30 large blues off Provincetown using hoochys, rebels and rigs. I caught several on top with a Stan Gibbs mackerel popper.

My phone will be connected again today, so call me with those fishing reports at 834-9337.

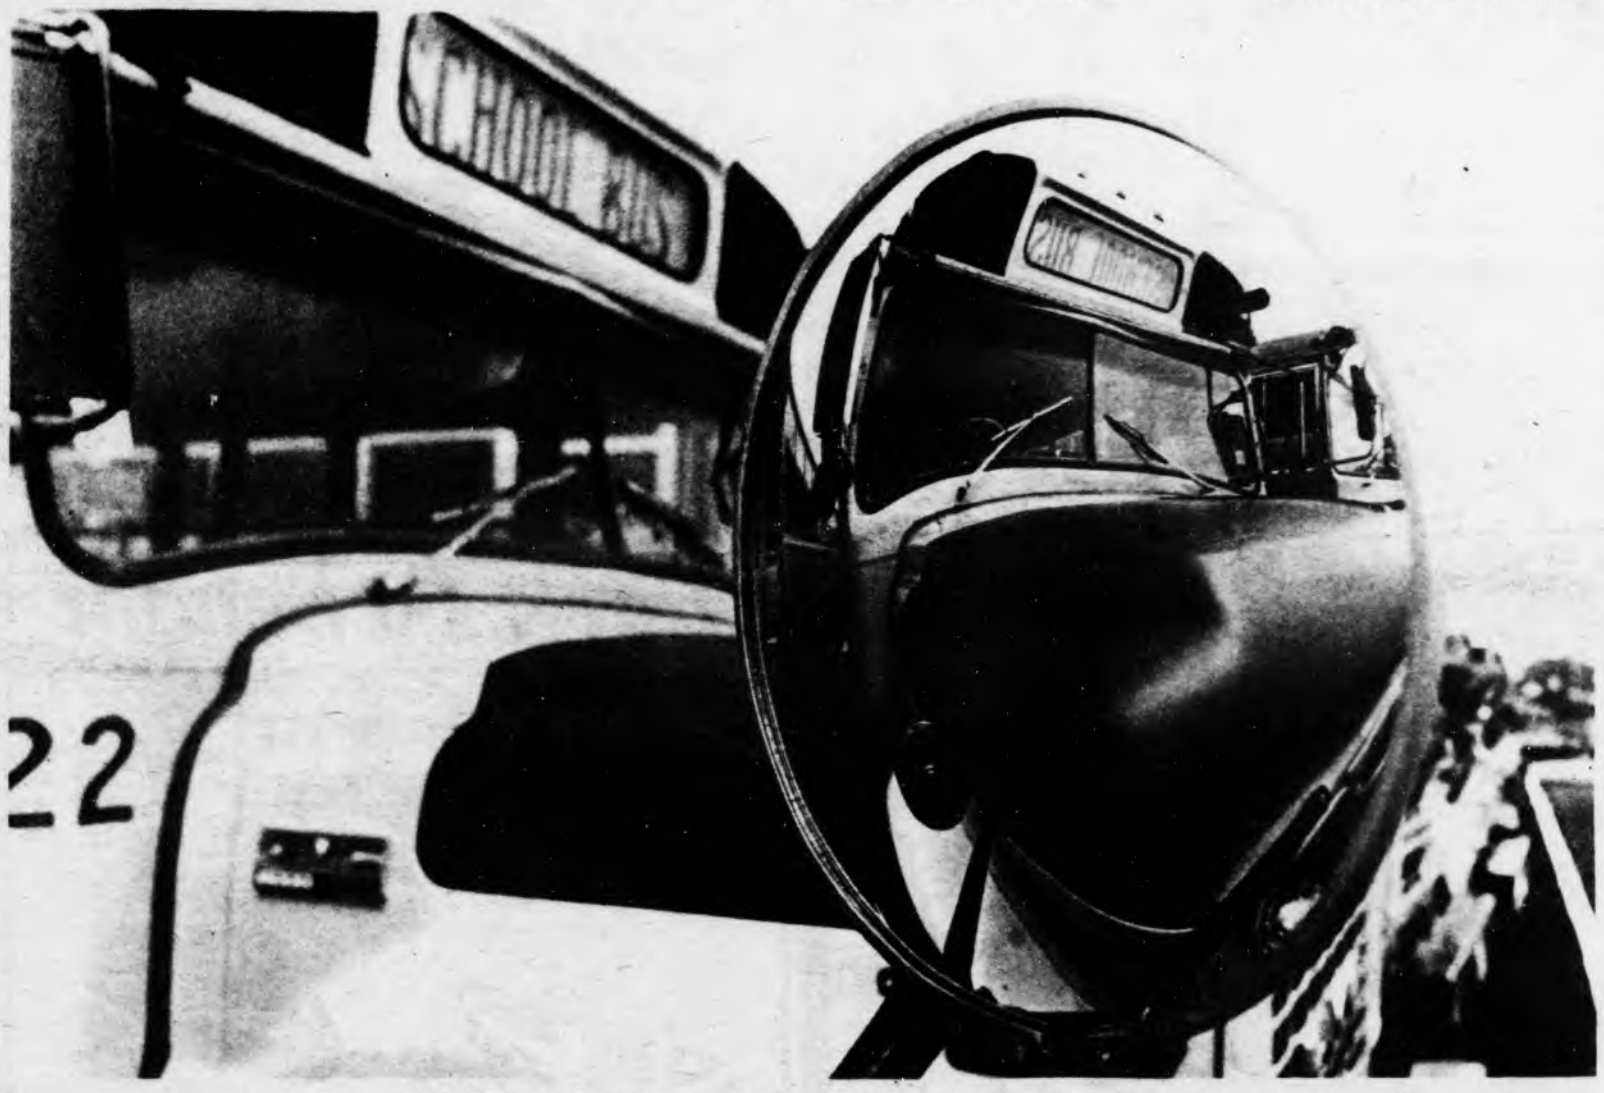
Slight Reduction Of Tax Rate Forecast

New Cherry Sheets Bring In More Green

The cherry sheet returns designating state reimbursements to the town are in, revealing a total of $1,098,682, reflecting an increase of $82,306 over last year. There are strings attached, though. Assessors have not completed computations of the final impact on the tax rate, either up or down.

Town accountant William Signorelli explained that the impact of increased state and county assessments has increased by $24,523, thereby reducing the town's cherry sheet increases to about $58,000.

If the entire $58,000 were applied to the tax rate it represents only a reduction of 58 cents from the current per thousand rate of $49.60.



The valuation figure for all real and personal property for fiscal 1979 was $99,823,340. If that valuation increases by a million dollars, Signorelli said, then the tax rate should stay about the same.

Thus it is clear that the $166 million more in cherry sheet reimbursement from the state that Governor King sees reducing property taxes across the state will have little if any benefit on the Cohasset rate.

Assessors are expected to have the tax rate established by Sept. 1. A 1978 Town Meeting resolution by the Town Government Structure Study Committee instructed the Board of Assessors to set the tax rate within 30 days of the adjournment of the annual Town Meeting, assuming receipt of the Cherry Sheet, or not later than Sept. 1.

Signorelli explained that the Assessors needn't comply with the resolution. Town Meeting did not vote to apply any amount from free cash to help lower the tax rate.

A unanimous vote by the Advisory Board and Board of Selectmen elected to retain the certified July 1, 1979 free cash balance of $84,722 and not to use the sum to reduce the tax rate.

Schools, Students At The Ready

Back to school preparations are being made all over town: kids are having haircuts and physicals, teachers are honing their plan books, and the administration is mapping out bus routes and class schedules. But perhaps the most dramatic measures for readying the start of a new school year can be seen in the schools themselves.

With the aid of a $132,998 CETA grant, the school department was able to employ 10 people to serve as custodians-in-training with and as an adjunct to regular janitorial staff. This assistance combined with individual contracted projects have afforded the schools an annual thorough summer cleaning as well as some major renovations — particularly at the Jr./Sr. High and Deer Hill Schools.

These changes, elucidated in a tour by Superintendent John Maloney, earmark the department's desire for more esthetic, energy-conserving, and vandal-proof school years to come. Maloney stressed the contributions of the CETA help; they learned a trade on-the-job, while allowing the continuance of regular maintenance and repairs, especially during the summer months when vacation absences would have meant interruptions in the work flow.

At the Jr./Sr. High School every pair of solid doors, 20 sets, in the corridors had rectangular windows with wire mesh inserted on both sides. They will serve as peep holes through which to see oncoming traffic, as it were. Maloney said he had soon many students getting bumped by the doors, because they were simply not able to see who was coming on the other way. Many of the doors were cleaned, sanded down and

Some had gained weight judging by their senior year book pictures, some had already realized their expectations, and some had taken the road less travelled by. Individual histories of the past five years unravelled Saturday evening, as 75 Cohasset High School graduates of 1974 reunited with their old classmates.

Although the sky was menacing, three-quarters of that graduating class turned out for a backyard buffet at the Golden residence on Bound Brook Lane. The location seemed only fitting, because according to class member and hostess Karen Golden, "The graduation party was here, but it was a much more crowded situation then," she laughed.

Had the 23-year olds become staid since graduation? A look at Senior Superlatives didn't evince too much of a change.

Shirley (Snyder) Powell said she was "still holding true" to her vote of Most Easy Going. Her big smile and immediate friendliness made it easy to understand how she earned her title then and now.

Peter Anderson has put on 45 pounds. But as 9174's Best Athlete, he can still see his way around a softball diamond well enough to aid the Cohasset Independents Softball Team win the Scituate Men's Softball League Championship last week. Still living in Cohasset, Peter is a house painter.

Why Teachers Go Mad was the infamous superlative that went to Sue Kelly. When asked what that meant exactly, Sue replied, "I was just a wise kid." We think the title was the result of an overdemanding, inquisitive and sensitive mind. Sue has been working in Boston, living in Scituate and driving everyone mad. Just kidding, Sue.

One of the class ravers was still raving. Terry England, the former class treasurer and organizer of the gala, graduated this year from UMass, Amherst, with both sociology and elementary education degrees. No one escapes UMass without raving. Terry spent a year student teaching in England, and plans to return there shortly to teach primary school.

Barry and Brian Hines, twin brothers who served as class president and vice-president, respectively, are on their predictable roads to success. Barry just completed his studies in economics at Harvard and plans a career in Washington, D.C., with a management consulting firm. Brian graduated last year from Holy Cross and has been employed as a sales representative for Xerox Corporation in Lexington.

Pierce Cray, voted Most Likely to Succeed in 1974, would also receive that prestigious honor today. Pierce graduated from Harvard in 1978, took a year to work as political fund raiser, and will start studies at Harvard Law School in the fall.

Other responses to the questions of the day, "What have you been doing and what are you going to do?" came in sporadically: The only class officer who wasn't present was former Secretary Megan Lynch — she is believed to be working in Boston at an advertising agency. Word had it that Ernie Wright has been doing very well with his own import-export business in China. Mary Jane Trettis said that although she has graduated from Boston University and is employed at a personnel agency in Boston, she still hasn't any real idea of what she wants to do.

Hostess Karen surmised that many of the graduates have settled in the Boston area, and that only 15 or so have gotten married. Karen, herself, graduated from Parson's School of Design in 1978, and has been working for an Italian firm, Gipetto, in New York City. Her work will soon take her to Italy . . . what a tough break!

Well, the class couple broke up, but the pair votest Cutest, Greg Hoffman and Kay Martin, were still endowed with their good looks.

John Cadaou didn't graduate with the class, but obviously felt enough of it to drive up from Virginia for the reunion to see the old gang. And after only finding out about it the Thursday night before. Disy Bloomfield flew in from Colorado, to combine a week's visit with her folks with the chance to see her friends.

Most would agree they would travel any distance to be together again.

CLASS OF '74 at High School held reunion in Summer of '79 and enjoying occasion were, from left, Terry England, Carla Grace, Karen Gordon and Joe Dooley.

Library Story Hours Continue

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library will continue its series of family story hours on Monday, Aug. 20 at 7:30 p.m. in the children's room. School-aged children and their parents are invited to attend.

Diane Farrell, Children's Services Librarian for the Eastern Massachusetts Region, will tell American tall tales. Ms. Farrell is highly knowledgable in the field of children's literature and has been a guest story-teller in libraries throughout eastern Massachusetts. This will be the final program in the series and it will end at about 8:30 p.m.

Editorial

The Surrey Drive Horror

John and Winnie Kuhn of 25 Surrey Drive questioned Selectmen two weeks ago on why they were unable to obtain a hearing with the Board of Health.

After a long and expensive court battle to restrain the installation of a septic system on lot 24, owned by William Pinkerson, the Kuhns decided they wanted another hearing, to have the variance allowed for the lot revoked. A portion of Lot 24, the portion that would be used as a leeching field, extends nine feet from the Kuhns front door stoop, they have discovered.

Now, with the elucidation of a few facts and with copies of correspondence —all of which were public documents — we, too, wonder why the Kuhns weren't granted a Board of Health hearing.

It is all very neat and legitimate to receive an opinion from Town Counsel declaring that there was merit to the objections against the hearing levelled by Pinkerson's attorney, Larry Kenna of Choate, Hall and Stewart. That July 30 letter put a tidy cap on the issue. Selectmen felt they should abide by the opinion, unless otherwise advised by Town Counsel, and until the court ruling is handed down sometime in September.

The Kuhns, however, were asked to accept this opinion, after being led to believe that they were to receive a hearing with the Board of Health for weeks before the July 30 letter from J. Blake Thaxter.

After court testimony was completed, the Kuhns requested that another hearing be held. A June 19 letter from Health Agent Kevin O'Brien informed the Kuhns that a hearing would be held before the Board of Health. "The purpose of this hearing is to consider a request for the invalidation of the Disposal Works Construction Permit for Lot 24 Surrey Drive which the Board issued on February 16, 1979," the letter read.

Then another letter was sent the Kuhns July 5, which informed them that the hearing was re-scheduled for July 23, "Due to a request from Attorney Larry Kenna (Pinkerson's attorney)." Subsequently, on July 18, O'Brien sent out yet a third letter informing the Kuhns that "due to an injury to one of the interested parties" the Board of Health hearing had to be postponed until August 13. It was in anticipation of that hearing when the Kuhn's attorney, William Golden, received a copyof Thaxter's letter and apprised them of the cancellation.

The Kuhn's, to this day,never found out what objections to the hearing were, reasons which they should have known since they had been granted the hearing on more than one occasion. Meanwhile, during the last month, while still wondering why, they suffered a total breakdown of their septic system.

Plumbers, electricians, septic system installers, reporters and photographers all flocked to their home — now affectionately termed by the Kuhns as "The Surrey Drive Horror" — to learn what was going on.

Most recent news from the Kuhns has it that a compromise has been established. If they remember to go down to their basement several times a day to switch on a manual pump, they may be rewarded with not having a total back up, while awaiting two new pump units for the system. The price tag for these repairs? Approximately $1500.

It is no wonder that neighbors wouldn't allow their children to play at the Kuhn's while the septic pit outside the garage lay exposed. It had to remain open it seems so that they could see how high the water was rising. (Winnie Kuhn said this week that the "septic stink" which ha pervaded their home off and on ever since they bought the house three years ago, got too tough to take. A collaborative effort from a bunch of kids got the heavy cover back on the pit.)

It is small wonder that John Kuhn, who recently underwent orthopedic surgery, dared to return to a household where it was never known when the sewage would back up into the

To the Editor:

Places where more people can live economically in Cohasset are practically nonexistent. It is distressing to learn that some single people have given up the struggle of maintaining their homes and have left Cohasset to live in the townhouses in the Beal Cove development in Hingham located in the former ammunition depot.

The group of approximately 30 apartment buildings can be inspected by entering from Beal Street in the rear of the Red Coach Grill restaurant, opposite the former Hingham Shipyard. The builders were Spaulding and Slye Corporation, 15 New England Executive Park, Burlington, Mass. The rents range from $355 to $490 per month for one and two bedrooms, and now all are rented. There are about 39 buildings and it appears there are at least six apartments to a building, sometimes more, making about 180 to 200 units of one, or two bedrooms.

Why doesn't some enterprising Cohasset realtor build some apartment buildings like those at Beal Cove? There are some excellent sites on Chief Justice Cushing Highway between Beechwood Street and Pond Street. When the wastewater disposal system is put in there will have to be a sewer pipe installed on Rte. 3A between Beechwood and Pond Streets. That pipe will pick up the wastewater from the Veteran's district and prevent it from discharging into Peppermint Brook and Lily Pond.

That area on Chief Justice Cushing Highway will be the best site in town for some one, and two bedroom apartment buildings. They will be well removed from the shore area of the town where the country estates have high valuations and where people do not want to see apartment-type buildings. The cost must be as low as possible to permit the lowest possible rents. Even if the architecture has no features to make it look attractive, the rents will probably be high.

Unfortunately Cohasset is a rather expensive town to live in because it is attractive and the population consists largely of affluent people with comfortable incomes. People with small incomes have to move to towns like Pembroke. We would not want Cohasset to grow rapidly and get out of balance, but it would be advantageous for Cohasset to continue to grow gradually as it has in the past. more nice people coming into town means more sociability, better retail stores and more amenities. At any rate whether we like it, or not, Cohasset is going to grow gradually due to the natural pressure of population.

Our school buildings will be adequate and our water supply will be more than ample. With smoke detectors installed in every house, the cost of fire protection can be cut in half. Police protection is unavoidably expensive. Facilities for recreation are being improved by the new head of the Recreation Department, John Worley. Cohasset Harbor needs to be enlarged to provide more boat moorings.

The town line between Cohasset and Scituate should be changed so that the entire harbor will be in Cohasset. The important project now is the proposed wastewater disposal system and treatment plant. Cohasset's streets are well maintained by new pavings but the town has not built any new streets for years.

The town's system of main streets needs to be studied and some new arterial streets planned. Such new streets will follow contour lines instead of going up the hill and going down the hill as do our present main streets. Some problems of drainage require special engineering studies.

The above may explain to the Planning Board what the writer has in mind in connection with town planning. There would be no advantage in having a comprehensive town planning report like the 1961 Benjamin Report, which would be a big mouthful to swallow at one time. It will be better to give attention individually to numerous aspects of town growth and development. We need to do more thinking about the town, in addition to thinking about house lots and the subdivision of large estates into house lots.

It is unfortunate and very sad that young people who belong in Cohasset and who now work at medium income jobs cannot afford to live in their own town. Cohasset needs those young people to balance the population. It also needs to retain the widows who cannot afford the high cost of maintaining their homes.

POND STUDY

The lake management firm chosen to conduct the Straits Pond Coastal Zone Management (CZM) grant study has notified Cohasset and Hull that the scope of the work will cost an additional $1,000.

According to Hull Health Agent Chris McCabe, CZM is requiring additional water samples which will bring Cohasset and Hull's share of the $11,000 project to $1,500 each. Both towns contributed $1,000 to the study and CZM paid the matching $8,000.

The agreement must be returned to CZM by Aug. 31, McCabe reported.

NEW NEGOTIATOR

The Personnel Committee has recently asked whether Attorney Charles Humphreys will serve as the town's legal representative for police and fire contract negotiations. The answer to that question is no, as Humphreys has left the office of Thaxter, Beckwith & Henderson. Thaxter said his office will assume that responsibility.

School Board Chairman Wants More Unity

School Committee discussion this week on the accuracy of press accounts and minutes of board meetings prompted Chairman John Langmaid to request a depersonalization of minutes and more board unity.

Board members Patricia Walsh and Martha Gjesteby had requested clarification of points which they found to be inaccurately reported in the Cohasset Mirror and Cohasset Mariner. Superintendent John Maloney suggested a reading of the minutes to elucidate these points, but Langmaid declared further discussion of the matter out of order.

After changes in minutes continued for almost an hour, a practice which has been the rule of most of the board's meetings, Maloney was compelled to go the blackboard and diagram the dilemma. He outlined the difficulties reporters and the recording secretary face when trying to accurately recount a meeting after the ebb and flow of hours of discussion and individual comments.

Maloney suggested that to conduct meetings more expeditiously, less time should be spent changing minutes. He proposed that one way to do this was to note the committee's actions rather than discussion.

"Too much time is being spent at the beginning of meetings trying to resolve what was said last week. Rehashing the minutes only brings out antagonisms," he said.

Gjesteby recommended that the secretary send rough drafts of the minutes to the board members for appraisal, so that they might return their comments and corrections. Secretary Margaret Sullivan balked at this suggestion, feeling that this practice wouldn't necessarily aid in a better minute consensus.

Langmaid said he had been noticing a trend toward the specific and personal in the minutes, which are often four or five pages long. He stressed the working of the committee as a whole and the inadvisability of lengthy personal comment in the minutes.

The Surrey Drive Horror

John and Winnie Kuhn of 25 Surrey Drive questioned Selectmen two weeks ago on why they were unable to obtain a hearing with the Board of Health.

After a long and expensive court battle to restrain the installation of a septic system on lot 24, owned by William Pinkerson, the Kuhns decided they wanted another hearing, to have the variance allowed for the lot revoked. A portion of Lot 24, the portion that would be used as a leeching field, extends nine feet from the Kuhns front door stoop, they have discovered.

Now, with the elucidation of a few facts and with copies of correspondence —all of which were public documents — we, too, wonder why the Kuhns weren't granted a Board of Health hearing.

It is all very neat and legitimate to receive an opinion from Town Counsel declaring that there was merit to the objections against the hearing levelled by Pinkerson's attorney, Larry Kenna of Choate, Hall and Stewart. That July 30 letter put a tidy cap on the issue. Selectmen felt they should abide by the opinion, unless otherwise advised by Town Counsel, and until the court ruling is handed down sometime in September.

The Kuhns, however, were asked to accept this opinion, after being led to believe that they were to receive a hearing with the Board of Health for weeks before the July 30 letter from J. Blake Thaxter.

ENROLLMENT ESTIMATES

Enrollment estimates reported by Supt. John Maloney as being reasonably accurate are as follows: Jr./Sr. High School, 940; Deer Hill School, 390; and Joseph Osgood School including Kindergarten, 335. Last year's official enrollment figure was 1721. This year's 1665 represents a decline in 56 students, although Maloney said that enrollment may creep as high as 1680.

RAFTERY MEMBER

Business Manager John Raftery has been appointed a member of the state Special Energy Advisory Committee. He offered to carry energy conservation ideas and suggestions of the school board and others to these meetings.

The Cohasset schools are currently undergoing an energy survey, he reminded the board. Possible lowered thermostat temperatures will require warmer dress for students, committee members noted.

TOUR POSTPONED

The annual tour of school facilities has been postponed until the evening of the next school committee on Sept. 10.

Presentation of the Teacher Evaluation Committee recommendations will be heard Sept. 17.

METCO APPROVED AGAIN

The amount of $102,591, the same level of funding as last year to Cohasset Schools for their METCO program and transportation, was approved unanimously by the committee this week. "We will be able to carry on with exactly the same number of personnel and the same number of aides as last year," Maloney said.

The State Board of Education has to vote later on the favorable board vote. Maloney anticipated that all will go well with the program. "We are looking forward to continuing in a similar manner, starting the first day of school," he said.

USE OF BUILDINGS

While the Superintendent applauded the excellent use of school facilities by the Recreation Department, he also noted the amount of lighting and heating those activities were expending. A suggestion that 50 cents to a dollar be added to each person's recreation fee be charged to pay for the extra expense was discussed, but no decisions were made on the matter.

NIX ON INCREASE

A request for a rate increase by the Scituate Auto Driving School was denied by the committee this week, as the contract with the school will be up the end of 1979. The driving school wanted an increase from $59 to $69 per student.

2ND GRADE TEACHERS

A discussion on whether to retain four second grade teachers brought out the present fluctuating situation in enrollment in that grade. Currently there are 76 children in the second grade, but that total may rise as high as 80, Joseph Osgood Principal Jack Craemer said.

Maloney said that the cut-off point for reduction to three teachers was close, but that he would rather err on the side of small class size for a year. Craemer concurred with Maloney.

TEACHERS NEEDED

So far the Cohasset School Department is shy one elementary grade teacher, one math aide, one one-fifth time Spanish teacher, one reading aide, and a health education specialist. These are all budgeted positions which have not yet been filled.

"We can open school," Maloney said, "Certified aides can teach. They will be considered along with outside applicants for positions in some cases," he said.

NEW POSITION

The committee voted a new position of Kindergarten instructional aide to go to Susan Sadler. The money for the job will be taken from the former half-time Kindergarten teacher salary funds. There will be two sessions of Kindergarten with one teacher each, which will now be buoyed by the assistance of the full time aide.

☐Bourke and Merlyn Corcoran of 301 King St. are parents of a son, Bourke Lewis, born Aug. 15 at South Shore Hospital. The Corcorans also have a daughter, Elizabeth, 2. Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Godfrey Moll of Missouri and Mr. and Mrs. William Corcoran of New Jersey. Great Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Waters, also of New Jersey.

☐Kerry Crehan, a Cohasset High School sophomore, played two roles in Exploration '79's production of "Feiffer's People" directed by Ellen Gainor, a Harvard senior and a 1976 graduate of CHS, on the Wellesley College campus where the summer study program recently was held.

☐The "Cohasset Rec'ers" 18-and-under team met some tough competition last Thursday in the Sportsman Tennis Team which represented Metro Boston against Cohasset in the quarter-finals round of the Harris-Wightman League of the NELTA. The "Rec'ers" lost their match 5-1.

Lisa McAdams and Sue Dalrymple won the girls' doubles match. The team has been coached by John Roy, Jr. of 53 Old Coach Road, a sophomore at Trinity College, who worked for the Recreation Department this summer. Kudos to the coach and team, and a good first year.

The 14-and-under team was to face the same stiff competition Monday when they played their quarter-finals match with the Sportsman Tennis Team.

☐Although the summer weather hasn't been kind to weekend pleasure sailors, there seems to have been plenty of wind for the racers, who are in the news again.

The 32nd Annual 210 National Championship Regatta held last week in Hingham was won for the first time by a Hingham Yacht Club crew in home waters, Doug MacGregor, Bill Clark, and Jack Foley. The trio also won the title last year. Fourth and fifth place finishers in the best 5 out of 6 race series, were Cohasset Yacht Club skippers Dick Sullivan and Ken Cook, respectively. Bob James, a member of Sullivan's crew, sailed in the first 210 National in 1946, has skippered six times, and overall, has participated in 29 out of the 32 Nationals held!

Gregg Bemis of Hobart Lane, served as a judge for the week long event.

Other Cohasset Yacht Club skippers and their final standings are: John Keane, 10th, Steve Sprole (of Scituate), 14th, Tom Hamilton, 20th, and George Littlejohn, 22nd.

☐A Cohasset man, Paul D'Onofrio, and a former resident, Emmett Holt IV now of Stonington, Conn., were fortunate to have sailed safely through the recent, tragic Fastnet Race in England. D'Onofrio sailed aboard the U.S. Naval entry, "Alliance" and Holt was a member of the crew of "Carina," a 48-foot sloop which finished the race in Plymouth, England in 21st place. Holt graduated from Cohasset High School and the University of Mass. at Amherst.

☐The PlayLady Project of the Junior League of Boston Chairman, Letitia Jordan, and co-chairman Jane Russell, both of Cohasset, have been working over the summer in preparation for the second season of this ambitious and worthwhile volunteer undertaking at the South Shore Hospital.

PlayLadies provide hospitalized children with activities, catered to their individual needs and circumstances, to relieve the boredom, fear, and loneliness of being in a hospital. Last year they played games, helped with needlepoint and coloring, and used puppets in the children's rooms, but this year they will be able to "play" with the children in a brand new playroom, just completed.

The volunteers spend a few hours a morning, every other week, on the pediatric floor of the hospital having fun with the kids, while they give them needed support during their confinement away from home. The Project has 15 volunteers for the coming year and could use a few more. Anyone in the community is encouraged to help out. There will be an orientation program on Sept. 12 at the hospital and "playing" will begin in seriousness on Sept. 24.

☐Move over joggers — roller skaters are just around the block. Cheap transportation, nostalgia, fun, and ease are all the qualities of the new transportation/recreation craze.

☐A farewell party for Mr. and Mrs. Peter Mazza, attended by 13 of their closest friends, was held at the lovely Japanese contemporary home of the John Mannings on Little Harbor, Sunday.

While Dinah Mastrobuono and Estrellita Manning put the finishing touches on trays of canelloni, guests reminisced and helped themselves to the splendid antipasto platter assembled by Claire Gavrin Berman, a former New York professional dancer. Dr. Antonio Mastrobuono, sartorially resplendent in an original Louis Batini of Rome suit sparred with Dr. Ubaldo DiBenedetto on the merits of Italian vs. American tailoring.

Mrs. Donald Kennedy, in a tiered gown of peach georgette, accepted praise for her blueberry pies, while Delia DiBenedetto won highest accolades for her secret-recipe creampuffs.

Peter Anderson, roving photographer in red suspenders, toasted the New York-bound couple with verses by Robert Burns in Scottish dialect.

After dinner, party members presented the Mazzas with an artistic group effort, a colorful collage commemorating memorable events of their seven years on Rice Island.

Life-time Cohasset resident, Donald Kennedy, expertly organized the after dinner entertainment which featured David Berman, a Hull Selectman and recent third prize winner of the Mr. New England Contest, who demonstrated the balletic postures used in body-building.

The William Morgans of Bow Street announced plans to promote a Morgan-Mazza financial alliance within the next two decades, and Mrs. Mazza promised to continue on with her part-time shoe distribution business.

But the surprising climaz of the evening occurred when Peter Mazza revealed to delighted guests that only hours before, he and his wife had at last made a final decision to remain "in your beautiful Camelot — Cohasset!" Ciao, Mazzas!

Art Center Announces New Certificate Program

The Education Committee of the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset has announced the addition of a certificate program in drawing and painting as another important step forward in the Center's expansion of cultural services.

Beginning in classes this fall, students may choose to complete requirements for an Art Center Certificate that will represent successful completion of basic courses in drawing, painting, art anatomy, color and design and art appreciation plus elective courses in portrait, landscape, crafts and 3-D. Present students may count four terms of courses taken at South Shore Art Center in the past three years toward their certificate; certificate work should be completed four years from the beginning date but students may petition for extension.

As in the past, all Center courses including courses credited through the Massachusetts College of Art Continuing Education Program can be taken individually without certificate or credit status.

The Center is offering an eight-week term of classes plus Special Workshops and Gallery Tours starting with the Fall Open House on Sunday, Sept. 16 at 4 p.m. with most classes beginning the week of Sept. 24.

The Center is a non-profit educational organization incorporated in 1958 for the purpose of maintaining facilities for conducting artists activities for the communities of the South Shore, offering classes in the arts and planning exhibitions, festivals and lectures to promote interest in the art field. Today the Center is housed in an historic building at 103 Ripley Road with a first floor devoted to gallery showings of professional artists' works and second floor used for studio and classroom space. It is a member of the Metropolitan Cultural Alliance of the Greater Boston Area and is affiliated with the Massachusetts College of Art Continuing Education program. The Center will celebrate its 25th year in the summer of 1980.

For information on the Schedule of Classes, telephone 383-9548 between noon and 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Daniels Piano Students Young, Older Enthused

Students ranging from tiny tots to grandparents are invited to join the enthusiastic group of students of Priscilla D. Daniels, teacher of pianoforte.

Her individual instruction has attracted many students who have had exciting careers in music, while others play just for the pleasure it gives them.

Daniels is a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music, magna cum laude, with several years of teaching experience. She is a member and past president of Alpha Chi Omega, National sorority and Pi Kappa Lambda, honorary professional society. She has taught in Swampscott, Norwood and Lincoln, and is now teaching in the South Shore area, in her Beach Street home in Cohasset.

While encouraging talented students to compose and to perform, she strives to communicate a love and appreciation of the fine arts through the medium of the piano.

refinished.

"It's a small thing, but it makes all the difference in the world," Maloney said, of this and many of the other fix-ups around the school. Industrial Arts teacher Pat Plante, was hired under the CETA funds, as a part-time consultant and teacher to work with two CETA employees to do the work. All told, each set cost $30, Maloney estimated, but considering the amount of carpentry expertise involved, the amount was quite a bargain.

The Jr. High wing's Business Office and Faculty Room, both received carpeting, to cut down on noise to the rooms below and which will act, hopefully, as a type of insulation in the winter. The Faculty Room now sports handsome stained cabinets, courtesy of Dick Ainslie — a member of the regular maintenance crew — and new bulletin boards.

That wing probably received the most extensive paint job, Maloney said, which included all walls and moldings. The department has narrowed down their range of colors to five — blue, green, yellow, beige, and an off-white.

A walk up the stairs of the older part of the building, where the higher grades meet, also evinced some painting of classrooms and even of stairwell landings. "It sure looks good for the youngsters coming back," Maloney said, "though it doesn't stay for long after thousands of little feet are using the stairs."

One major renovation in the high school was in the biology and science labs, where the old lab desk tops were finished with chemical resistant formica. The old and unused sinks that had been present at each desk were sealed off and the smooth, attractive black surfaces now remain. "This is a major improvement, we look forward to a much better year," Maloney said.

One lab underwent an entire facelift, which included the tearing out of all the old floor tiles, fixing the floor beneath, and then the grueling task of retiling and cutting the squares to fit around the permanently-installed desks. Plante installed a vent in this particular room as well to allow better circulation as chemicals are often used there.

On the matter of tile replacement, Maloney noted that several areas in all the schools needed new tiling and that those repairs would be ongoing. One of the problems now, he noted, is to find tiles that approximately match those of old.

CLOSE FIT — Worker sets new tiles getting schools ready for opening day.

Four rooms in the high school have had their ceilings dropped by two feet and the light fixtures changed from incandescent to flourescent as part of a three-year lighting project. The lowered ceiling will afford more warmth and the lower wattage of the new lights will save in electricity costs.

A major "designed effort to curtail vandalism" in the gymnasium areas of the building was the installation of an overhead steel gate, which blocks off the gyms from the main building. Within that area, the boys and girls locker rooms have undergone extensive locker repair. All lockers, hooks, doors, and hinges have been fixed and painted the school's color of bright blue. Maloney stressed that each student participating in gym and athletic activities will be issued his own combination lock to decrease theft and to increase the responsibility of the individual to protect his belongings.

"We are purchasing as reasonably as we can," Maloney said, pointing out the 60 new lockers in the girls' locker room, but also the many damaged lockers that have been repaired and rendered usable again. The locker rooms also had exhaust fans installed and are expecting new shower curtains.

At the Deer Hill School, the purchase of modular cafeteria equipment which can seat approximately 200 students will improve lunchtime activities. Children will assemble in the former fourth and fifth grade open space classroom for lunch, instead of eating in their homerooms. Portable serving equipment will heat the lunches prepared and sent down from the high school. When not in use as a cafeteria, the seats can swivel around to provide seating as a sort of auditorium, Maloney said. Huge blue letters spelling DHS adorn the floor.

Also at the Deer Hill, a wall erected in a remaining open space classroom divided the area to make a special education class room for those students advancing from the Joseph Osgood School. Maloney expects that eight rooms will undergo lighting changes similar to those at the high school soon. The gym floor received a sanding and painting.

These outline some of the more noticeable projects that have been going on this summer, as well as those that are of a continuing nature. Maloney noted the completed projects which lend themselves to safety, such as the switch from two-pronged to three-pronged electrical plugs in the high school typing room and the new fence around the Deer Hill School grounds. They may not seem like much, he said, but they are just as important to the smooth operation of the school department as anything else.

Above all, Maloney wanted a well-deserved hand given to all the maintenance help, including that of the Tree and Park Department which has spruced up the school grounds, for a job well done at all the schools.

basement or whether the water could be turned on or the toilets flushed.

These are only a few of the face value issues currently pending at the Kuhn residence. We won't take the time here to enumerate the nine reasons why the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) found Lot 24 unfit for a disposal works construction permit. We won't question here the nature of the percolation test taken at the site last October, nor the type of fill and impervious soil that comprises Lot 24.

We sympathize with the Kuhns in this, their first home, and we would like to say more. But we suppose we should await the court decision like everyone else.

Summer Readers Kept Library Jumping

The Summer Reading Club has kept the Paul Pratt Memorial Library especially busy this season. As of this writing, over 60 children have earned a free book, courtesy of the Friends of the Cohasset Library, while another 30 children have earned reading certificates.

The Summer Reading Club is an annual tradition, running from June 10 to Sept. 15. Those young people who read 10 books from the library are awarded a Reading Certificate and those who read 20 books are given a free paperback book that they may choose from a special collection purchased especially for the Reading Club.

Reading cards to keep track of titles read at the child's own reading level may be picked up at the library and must be endorsed by a parent.

There is still nearly a month before the Sept. 15 deadline, so let's read kids! The Friends of the Cohasset Library would like to give a free paperback to every child in Cohasset!

Local 4Her Scores At Marshfield Fair

Among the 49 exhibitors who showed 173 sheep at the 112th Marshfield Fair, Heather Fairchild of Cohasset took first place in Fourth Year Showmanship and second in Wool Fitting.

School Days Replace Summer Daze...

Cold Facts To Follow Soon

School days replace summer daze next Wednesday when the yellow buses roll again.

Until students make the transition, the daze may continue for days.

There won't be all that much different from a year ago in the hallowed halls. Not right away, anyhow.

There will be fewer new faculty faces than in other years. Then there'll be fewer faculty faces with inflation inroads cutting the staff some.

That self-same inflation may mean some changes before many weeks go by.

With the advent of colder weather will come heat. Hopefully! How much is the question.

Gas or oil, costs already are way up there and climbing faster than a student can think of reasons for not going to school. Now kids may have a new excuse. It's too cold in class.

Norwell schools already have kept thermostat settings lower the last couple of years. They've reduced lighting to minimum needs. There's another alibi for students. It's too dark in school.

It may be even chillier this time around, though. With oil prices at 78 cents per gallon projected to hit 95 cents and more this winter, the school budget is going to be bent out of shape.

Then there's supply. Early apprehensions there wouldn't be enough oil to go 'round have alleviated. But they haven't disappeared entirely.

It all depends on a variety of factors.

A nice, long Indian Summer would help. Say all the way to March. Especially since this summer wasn't the hottest as summers go. Still, ere long, everybody will wish it was back, bummer or not.

On the other hand, an Eskimo-type winter, and maybe talk about eliminating spring vacations in favor of extending mid-winter recesses to keep schools closed longer may become more than conversation. It may come as news to most students today, and maybe to young parents as well, but they clamped schools shut one winter during the war. World War I, that is. There wasn't enough coal.

Another factor is OPEC. New England weather is more reliable. The Farmer's Almanac far more so. Let the Arabs decide they need more U.S. bucks to buy more U.S. property or a few sheiks hanker for larger harems, and it will be shiver time.

Regarding supply, it does nothing for a sense of security that on top of shipping oil all the way to Japan while importing it all the way from Indonesia we're now returning some to Iran. No way that's what a lot of folks would like to ship the Ayotolla. Maybe there'll be a course at school to explain the process.

The AFS student exchange program may find a lot of kids want to go Florida and the Caribbean instead of Europe and Asia. Trouble will be getting Florida and Carib kids to swap.

This week, of course, will find a lot of last-minute back-to-school shopping with an eye to what may come to pass, there may be changes in purchase priorities.

Heavy, warm sweaters should be in vogue.

If students persist in freezing for fashion and wearing flimsy jeans, long underwear could make a major comeback.

Those down-filled jackets that make one look like two pouter pigeons may be in as indoor wear.

It could come to ski masks.

Kids may have to learn to write all over again wearing gloves.

The day of small classes may be numbered. After all, the more bodies huddled together, the more warmth. And the fewer classrooms to heat.

Gym, should become far and away the most popular class. Jumping up and down helps keep the old blood circulating. And young blood, for that matter.

The current rage that sees folks installing more woodstoves than you found in Maine in the old days may catch on at schools with one in every classroom. There won't be a tree left in Norwell. But what the heck! There are those who'd chop 'em all down anyway if they had their way.

Cafeteria Director John Callahan will probably rise to the occasion with a whole menu of dishes designed to keep everyone warm. Pepperoni pizza with hot Italian peppers. Mexican torrid chili. Steaming soups loaded with pepper.

It's always best to look on the bright side, though.

Students won't keep losing or forgetting rubbers, galoshes and mittens at school.

They won't take 'em off.

Camp Millbrook Hoop Hothouse

By Lois Martin

As the Marshfield Fair is heralding the harvest of summer, about one mile away the seeds are being planted for a winter crop of basketball stars.

Come August, Camp Millbrook is converted into a full training school with but one purpose — good basketball.

The courts are filled with dribblers and shooters, ranging from the high school ages of the Red Auerbach Basketball Camp to the college crowd to the almighty basketballing — the Celtics.

And there's no small thrill in living in the town that's party to the evolution, the evaluation and the constant prognostication of the success of those tall, slim men.

PATCHES

Truth is, I've been in a little town where Celtics trained before. Remember the 50s and Cousy, Easy Ed and Brannum?

Well, years ago they trained in Ellsworth, Maine when and where I was a lot younger. It was during school time and we spent hours peeking through the gym window at the heroes. We made an honest effort to appear unimpressed, nonchalant about their being in our school. We failed.

Occasionally we were thrust into speaking to them directly, on business. I remember answering a phone call in the principal's office, requiring Bob Brannum to come to the phone. I alerted "Mr. Brannum" to his call, all the while desperately pretending I had aplomb and was not vulnerable to schoolgirl flutterings at the very sight of a Celtic.

And I'm not above seeing them now, this year's crop in training. Bob Brannum directs Camp Millbrook, coaches at Brandeis University and is unerringly tied to the Celtics seasonal training.

Red Auerbach's hair's no longer Red, but he still carries the same old cigar. And Howie McHugh, part of the Celtics organization since before Ellsworth, manages to concentrate on some earnest fishing at the pond when the dribbling slows down.

That's not often during training. There on the courts are a stunning array of high basketball sneakers, predominantly Converse All-Stars, with a few Adidas, and Ponys thrown in. High white striped socks, the Bird wears two pairs, are part of the basic uniform where rookies and hopefuls play their hearts out in quest of a membership in the Celtics Club.

I know how they play the game, essentially. In fact I am constrained to say the Ellsworth High School squad won two successive state championships during the same time the Celtics practiced in that town. But what I don't understand is the sophisticated semantics behind the gain and loss of players, the stupifying amounts of money behind the negotiations, the game within the game.

So when I see those men of heights that so capture the attention of Celtics fans, it is with a different eye, based on my naivete in the big sports world.

Lawrence Bird, therefore, appears to me not like a Golden God from Indiana State, but like a very tall young man with a shock of blond hair, blue eyes and a wisp of a moustache that his mother probably condones.

The Bird says he was about 15 when he discovered he could play basketball. That's what he and the Celtics have in common right off the bat, a mutual discovery.

And for every move he made on the court, there were corresponding critiques offered by spectators. He's not necessarily in an enviable position. He got the money and now he's got the pressure. Thousands of season tickets have been purchased on the strength of his presence. And that's a lot of responsibility even for someone who becomes a superstar before he becomes a professional.

Michael Leon Carr (M.L.), from an unapprised point of view, is a good-looking man who bears the countenance of a gentleman. Now that's a weak foundation on which to place championship aspirations. But The Bird says Carr's the fastest thing going on the court in addition to having shooting prowess. Carr matches complimentary phrases with his new teammate.

And every woman knows behind the likes of Rick Robey, there's got to be a proud mother. There is. She, her husband, and three daughters are what Rick calls his "biggest fans."

He's 6 foot 11 inches, a good-looking fellow of 23 years with a wife named Chris. They're newlyweds who've built a home in Hingham, I understan And Rick's enthusiastic about Boston.

He says, in speaking of success, "You can achieve anything you really want to." But he believes the ones who get where they want to go have separated themselves from follow. They are their own leaders, driving themselves with constant practice, working on the little things to make the big time.

At Camp Millbrook last week all the males were working toward that. Wilson balls and damp tee-shirts went up and down the court in a maelstrom of purpose Those who no longer were in training, trained others or offered advice on both.

Basketball's the word in August. Watchers are inspired to place the dream of supremacy back on its green and white shamrock.

There on the sidelines was David Cowens, with boyish face and blue and white flowered shirt at once a star and a spectator reviewing the new beginnings.

And we who are parents of youngsters, who see the stars as immortal, sagely endorse the right of any young man to have unlimited access to his own hoop and his own shower. Hometown youths could do worse than to admire achievement and ability. And heroes have historically been generous about sharing the glow of stardom.

During their time here the Celtics have scrimmaged at Marshfield High School, lending themselves to the adulation and affection of young people. It is for that, the stars' accessibility and graciousness, we can admire them. We need no guarantee they'll be magnificent during the season. They've already been successful in pre-season Marshfield by honoring the heritage of hope only heroes can inspire in our youths.

Many of us flinch at the thought of another Labor Day looming, for on all sides, the standard greeting is: "Where has the summer gone?" Though they'd never admit it, the children are probably happy to get back to school, having done just about all there is to do. To some grown-ups, their favorite time of the year is coming up. To some, it's a sad time, a time of endings when the boat comes out of the water, the pool is abandoned, and summer people being their exodus. Hopefully, this last summer fling will find us all outdoors basking in the sun, and if you're expecting guests, Nancy MacLellan's recipe would be easy and delicious.

STUFFED TURBANS OF FLOUNDER

Coil eight fillets of flounder inside eight muffin rings and place in a buttered pan. In skillet place 3/4 c. chopped mushroom stems, a few drops onion juice and 3 T butter. Cook 1 min., then stir in 4 tsp. flour. Gradually stir in 1/2 c. cream. Stir over heat until mixture boils. Add 1/2 c. crab meat and season with salt, pepper, cayenne and mace. Fill muffin rings with this mixture and cover with foil. Bake 20 min. at 375 degrees. Remove foil and sprinkle with buttered bread crumbs. Bake until crumbs are brown and slip from rings onto a hot platter. This is supposed to serve 8. If you don't have muffin rings, you could bake the fish in muffin tins, or roll them up, secure the end with a toothpick and put them in a baking pan.

The weather can be fickle in the fall with weathermen balefully predicting hurricanes. It seems when the children get back to school, there's usually a heatwave. It's chancy to plan on Mother Nature's cooperation when planning outdoor fun, so when you're dreaming up your holiday menu, why not include foods which can be served indoors or out. I read in the New York Times of two moms who were upset when they discovered that their children are being fed junk snax at a high-priced nursery school. They came up with the neat idea of starting a little business called 'Good Food for Kids.' Now they supply day-care centers and schools with nourishing snacks for children. These cookies come under the heading of 'Healthful Munchies' and are called

OATMEAL CAROB CHEWIES

1/2 c. soft soft butter or oleo
3 T brown sugar
2 T beaten egg
1/2 c. whole-wheat flour
1/2 c. rolled oats
1/4 tsp. baking soda
1/2 tsp. cinnamon
1 T milk
1/4 c. carob dots

Heat oven to 350 degrees and grease cookie sheet. In a large bowl, combine butter or oleo and sugar and blend well. Add the egg and mix. Add the flour, oats, soda and cinnamon. Mix well. Add the milk and mix, then the carob dots and mix again. Drop by spoonfuls onto cookie sheet, spacing about 1" apart. Bake for 15 min. Store in airtight tin. Yield: approx. 3 doz. Carob dots may be purchased in health food stores.

A ten-week course in photography will be held at the South shore Natural Science Center beginning Monday evening, Sept. 10.

John Black will be instructor. He has won awards in many art shows and his work is used by various museums. He has taught a number of courses at the Center.

. The first class will offer a discussion of various cameras being used by the students to be followed by a critique of slides.

In order, the following subjects will be covered in depth: discussion of types of film with slide examples of different films, developing skills with the metering systems of cameras and how to develop your eye to be as accurate as a hand held meter, an in depth session on lenses and the effect of depth of field, lighting, using available light and existing light and how to conquer flares and shadows; electronic flash using many examples on its use in nature photography.

Close-up photography and what is needed to attain a good crisp close up using bellows, extension tubes, normal and macro lenses; filters, film and effect equipment; how to use imagery through diffusion, infra-red and other methods, photographing nature and what to consider when photographing fast moving subjects from impressionistic to documentary in the field and other topics.

Advance registration is required. Fee is $40 for members, $45 for non-members. Call 659-2559 any day until 4 p.m. for registration and information.

Travel Along with

Evie Young

English pipes and chinaware, French perfumes, Irish crystal, cameras, and photographic accessories from Japan, cashmere goods from Scotland and chic Continental fashions are just some of the products from around the world that can be found on a shopping spree on Nassau's Bay Street, or in Freeport's International Bazaar in the Bahamas. The Bazaar is a simulacrum of market streets on countries such as Franch, Spain, Mexico, Japan, and the Scandanavian nations, and displays goods from these countries at bargain prices.

The service of a travel agent represent your best bargain. There is never a charge for availing yourself or their services. At COLPITTS TRAVEL CENTER, you're important to us and we are continually endeavoring to serve your travel needs quickly and accurately without any inconvenience to you. We are easy to reach at 3 Brook St., Scituate. We are open 9-5 Mon.-Fri.; 10-4 Sat. and by appointment. Tel. 545-4500 or 383-1717.

ANGLER'S CORNER

By Roger Hare

Well, here we are in the last week of our summer before the schools reopen and a lot of fishing is curtailed.

The bluefish are still with us, and three of our younger anglers found them last week about a quarter of a mile off Rexhame Beach. David DeCastro, Janet Welch and Greg Wheeler were trolling umbrella rigs and Goo Goo Eyed plugs along Rexhame Beach when they ran into a school of big blues. Janet Walch caught her first blue ever and it turned out to weigh 17 pounds. She wasn't at all prepared for the fight that fish gave. In all they caught nine nice big bluefish.

There are bluefish all along our coast, and the trick is to be there when they come along. As I wrote last week, a school is still holding in at the entrance to Duxbury Bay and you can catch blues around the Bug Light. Most of the sport-fishermen that catch a lot of bluefish are spending their time on the tuna grounds trying to catch one of those giant bluefin tuna. Those killer whales ate or frightened off the tuna from the South West corner of Stellwagon Bank so a lot of the boats have moved up to the North West corner near Gloucester.

There are some tuna being caught in our corner of the bank. One day last week, out of about 18 boats, there were seven hook ups and three giant blue fins were boated. On Saturday, Don Hebert on White Lady caught a 750 pound fish.

The flounder fishing has been rather slow, but cooler weather will bring them back. Recently John and Pat Cooley of Marshfield were fishing with Marshall and Janet Litchfield of Scituate in the North River. Everyone was catching flounder except John, who was using his old fresh water spinning rod and reel. Finally on the very last piece of sea worm, John caught the biggest flounder he had ever seen. It was a door mat size and bent his fresh water rod over double to bring it in.

The striped bass fishing slowed considerably last week, but that too will pick up again as we get cooler weather in September. There are some big stripers around but you will have to work to get them. Live pogies are the best bet, and some good places are off the rocks at Cohasset, Third Cliff in Scituate, and Duxbury Bay in Duxbury. Using live pogies in these areas will probably result in having your bait fish catching a large bluefish, or worse yet just having it chopped up by blues. Use a wire leader and hook the bait fish in the tail, using either a single hook or a treble. Bluefish usually attack the bait fish from the tail, while bass swallow their fish head first. With the pogie hooked in the tail, you will have a good chance to catch either a blue or a bass. Just in case it is a bass that takes the pogie, don't try to set the hook too soon or you will just get back a dead pogie. Give the bass a chance to swallow that whole bait fish so your hook is deep in the striper's mouth.

I finally got moved and went out fishing on Saturday with Rob Milardo and Danny Way. We found bluefish out near the tuna fishermen on our corner of Stellwagen Bank. Hundreds of birds showed us the way to the blues, and they were breaking out of the water all around us. There were several schools that moved rapidly, but each time huge flocks of gulls and terns hovered over the bluefish. We caught 14 in all most of which weighed 12 to 14 pounds each, and we caught them on swimming Rapalas and Rebel plugs.

Call me with those fishing reports, I have my phone connected again, at 834-9337.

Meeting Called As...

Town Faces Suit on Discharge Violation

By Judith Epstein

A joint meeting with Selectmen, the Advisory Board and the Board of Water and Sewer Commissioners will be held Sept. 10 to discuss Cohasset's options for future sewer plans.

Water and Sewer Commissioners Chairman William Montouri requested the joint meeting in response to notification that legal action may be taken against the town for violation of its discharge permit.

A recent letter from Thomas McMahon of the Water Pollution Control Division of the DEQE, has requested that Stephen Leonard of the Environmental Protection Division of the Attorney General's office initiate appropriate legal action against Cohasset for violation of its discharge permit.

According to McMahon the town has failed to submit a complete facilities plan including expanded secondary sewage treatment facilities and has exceeded effluent limits for flow, bio-chemical oxygen demand (BOD), and total suspended solids (TSS) from its existing treatment facilities. Further, the letter continued, the town has failed to vote funds for the necessary sewer expansion.

The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) issued Cohasset an expansion implementation time schedule in conjunction with the permit allowing the continued discharge of effluent to James Brook until Dec. 31, 1981. After that time, the EPA recommended that Cohasset employ additional sewage treatment works, dumping effluent to Cohasset Harbor.

The following implementation schedule was set:

By June 30, 1979, submit complete proposed facilities plan, including expanded secondary sewage treatment facilities to the Massachusetts Division of Water Pollution (MDWPC) for review and approval.

By Sept. 30, 1979, file a complete application with the MDWPC for grant assistance in preparation of final plans and specifications (Step 2) for the approved project.

By Oct. 30, 1980, file a complete application with the MDWPC for grant assistance in the construction (Step 3) of the approved project.

By March 31, 1981, commence construction of the approved treatment works.

TOUGH STRAITS with broken tide gate on Straits Pond have citizens concerned and a study coming up to solve pollution and other problems.

Citizens Protest Straits Pond Condition As Study Launched

Concerned residents lodged more complaints with Selectmen this week about Straits Pond and its broken tide gate at West Corner. At the same meeting, Selectmen signed a Coastal Zone Management (CZM) grant agreement and engineering contract for the study of the polluted pond.

The residents' concern about the broken tide gate was twofold. The inability to raise and lower the gate results in the lack of proper water flow and salinity in the pond. This stagnation, in turn, creates a ripe breeding ground for mosquitoes and midges. A fear that the water level may rise dangerously high during rainy weather was also voiced.

The Town of Hull Appropriated $2500 at their Town Meeting this year to pay for one-third the estimated $7500 cost to repair the tide gate. Hull has subsequently asked that Cohasset and Hingham, the two towns that also share Straits Pond waters, appropriate $2500 each to contribute to the repair work.

Selectmen voted to ask the Advisory Board for a transfer from reserve funds for the project. However, Selectmen Chairman Arthur Clark learned later that in order to use money in conjunction with the other towns, the appropriation must be approved by a vote of Town Meeting.

Hingham Selectmen had indicated, Clark said, that their town would contribute $2500 from reserve funds to highway drainage funds for the job. They, too, will have to be

Trophy Week At Sail Club

From Sandy Beach the little sailboats look well-ordered and behaved, playing ring around-the-markers, casting their brightly-colored spinnakers against the sky.

But out in the ocean it's a contest — and one needs a map, instructions, rules. If you're not an experienced skipper, or not with one, sailing is not unlike the southeast expressway, and just as terrifying. There are also sharks out there. Yes, and cannon fire from the beaches. Read on.

Labor Day weekend was a trophy one for the Sail Club, which wound up its official racing season at a Bassings' Beach chowder Monday. Trophy Day for the Yacht Club is this Saturday (see results in next week's Mariner).

The Flying Scott Fleet #105 (a small but growing independent fleet) held its Captain Cup Race last Saturday, with "Smiling" Peter Chapman taking the cup in the event, and "Rookie" Ray Kasperowicz coming in second for a brass cat food dish. Chet Ellis and Roger Porter, who co-own their boat, placed third and won one size 32" belt; while 15-year old sailor Mike Berman, skippering Peter Goedecke's boat, came in fourth. In spite of a painful raquetball game wound, Terry Young placed fifth.

In Saturday's Yacht Club's 210 competition Ken Cook came in first to no one's surprise; he easily led the competition throughout the course. When Sam Wakeman, Jr. crossed the finish line for a second place, a cannon was fired from Wakeman's Beach, and for a few seconds the race

Don't Sleep With The Lights On

By Tanna Kasperowicz

It will most assuredly relieve the U.S. Energy Task Force and President Carter to know that six-year-old Robby Lawrence is going to start turning the lights out "right after we go to bed, and during naps." Robby agreed that had he taken those measures last year the country might not be in the fix it's in.

A sizable number of other Cohasset residents are planning similar energy-saving measures. A few even threatened to hibernate — "Especially in January."

Jack Langmaid, School Committee Chairman, was the only person we spoke with who had this enviable complaint: "We've done everything to our house we can...there's nothing else 'eft to do!"

Cohasset women are foregoing any light and airy look this year for good old long johns...several pair. Pat Delaney was willing to model one of her typical "everyday" at-home outfits which is comprised of several layers of sweaters, woolly socks, warm boots... but our photographer couldn't catch up with her over the weekend.

In these last of the summer weeks, no one appears to be laying in supplies for any possible shortages, or

Suit Meeting Monday

By Dec. 31, 1981, complete construction of the treatment works.

The town has not met the first step of the schedule, nor will it meet the second, as the articles calling for the final plans and specifications of the Metcalf and Eddy proposed facility and site were voted down at Town Meeting.

"We have to start doing something because they (EPA) can start bringing suit against us," Montouri said. He was concerned that the current "lame duck" Board of Sewer Commissioners may hold up the progress of sewer expansion.

Montouri explained that the Town Meeting vote to separate the boards of Water and Sewer Commissioners automatically renders the current board's action as Sewer Commissioners out of office as of next election, a week after Town Meeting. (The elected board will remain as Water Commissioners.)

Montouri argued that a new board may not agree with the articles that the present board may choose to submit to Town Meeting. Therefore alternatives such as early resignation from the board as Sewer Commissioners is being considered, as is submission of an article for further sewage treatment facilities for consideration at a Special Town Meeting this fall.

What the current board favors proposing at the moment is still not clear. The joint meeting Sept. 10 will help to clarify some of the options available to the town. Montouri noted, however, that the present overloaded sewage treatment system pointed to the necessity to upgrade the existing plant or construction of a new treatment facility as proposed by the Metcalf and Eddy study. He concurred with Commissioner John Hobb's longstanding belief that waiting much longer on this issue may cut down on Cohasset's share of federal funds available for the project.

"People in favor of sewers must come forth in light of pending legal action that may be taken before the town," Montouri said. Although he and Water Superintendent Edwin Pratt didn't feel that the letter was as ominous as it sounded, they noted that the EPA has every right to enforce the recommended time schedule.

Pratt also noted that the final chapters of the Metcalf and Eddy study are expected to be submitted this month.

Straits Pond Study

apprised of the law governing the joint use of town money, Clark said.

Clark said that the Police and Fire Departments are petitioning to have a Special Town Meeting to have their contracts ratified. If a meeting is called, an article for Cohasset's share for the tide gate repair will be submitted in the warrant.

Resident Steve Casey, who coaches youngsters in sculling on the pond, presented Selectmen with a 500 signature petition from residents of Cohasset, Hull and Hingham. The petition asked that steps be taken to correct and improve the water quality and implement whatever necessary weed control or harvesting on Straits Pond is necessary to utilize the pond to its fullest potential.

Casey recounted an incident in which flies covered his boat from stern to bow. He said the pond was the right length for rowing competitions, and although races have been held there in the past, they have been discontinued until the water is cleaned up.

Clark reminded residents of the CZM grant which will afford a study of the pond's problems in one of a series of efforts to unpollute the water. He added that the study may find the type of tide gate that has been used as inappropriate.

Kay Marten is deeply engrossed in book as she sits atop seawall at Sandy Beach. No doubt she's getting ready for reading, writing and arithmetic.

Kingston Suffers Severe Injuries

Christopher Kingston, 27, of Rockland suffered severe head injuries Thursday after falling 20 feet from a ladder outside Woolworth's Department Store.

Kingston and Craig Anderson of Norwell, both employees of Tedeschi Realty Corporation of Rockland, were painting the trim of the Woolworth building when Kingston fell from the top of an aluminum ladder. He had been scraping paint from an area near Brockton Edison wires on the south side of the building, police said.

Fire Department EMTs administered CPR to the young man, who was found unconscious with a large laceration on the back of his head. Medical examiner Dr. Roger Pompeo found a strong heart beat when he arrived at the scene.

Kingston was then transported to South Shore Hospital. His condition is listed as poor.

apprised of the law governing the joint use of town money, Clark said.

Clark said that the Police and Fire Departments are petitioning to have a Special Town Meeting to have their contracts ratified. If a meeting is called, an article for Cohasset's share for the tide gate repair will be submitted in the warrant.

Resident Steve Casey, who coaches youngsters in sculling on the pond, presented Selectmen with a 500 signature petition from residents of Cohasset, Hull and Hingham. The petition asked that steps be taken to correct and improve the water quality and implement whatever necessary weed control or harvesting on Straits Pond is necessary to utilize the pond to its fullest potential.

Casey recounted an incident in which flies covered his boat from stern to bow. He said the pond was the right length for rowing competitions, and although races have been held there in the past, they have been discontinued until the water is cleaned up.

Clark reminded residents of the CZM grant which will afford a study of the pond's problems in one of a series of efforts to unpollute the water. He added that the study may find the type of tide gate that has been used as inappropriate.

Kingston Suffers Severe Injuries

Christopher Kingston, 27, of Rockland suffered severe head injuries Thursday after falling 20 feet from a ladder outside Woolworth's Department Store.

Kingston and Craig Anderson of Norwell, both employees of Tedeschi Realty Corporation of Rockland, were painting the trim of the Woolworth building when Kingston fell from the top of an aluminum ladder. He had been scraping paint from an area near Brockton Edison wires on the south side of the building, police said.

Fire Department EMTs administered CPR to the young man, who was found unconscious with a large laceration on the back of his head. Medical examiner Dr. Roger Pompeo found a strong heart beat when he arrived at the scene.

Kingston was then transported to South Shore Hospital. His condition is listed as poor.

Fare-Thee-Well

By Judith Epstein

A year ago when Mariner publisher David Cutler asked me if I would cover Cohasset as the town's main correspondent, I was wary. I considered the proposition and decided to take the plunge — a year's exposure to town government was just the thing I needed. I promised to set the groundwork for the new paper for a year. That's what I did and now I'm leaving.

Last week I walked down South Main Street, and as I passed the various stores and establishments, owners and merchants waved, called hello or thanked me for a recent article the Mariner might have afforded them. I could scarcely believe that this was the same town I had entered as a stranger a year ago and that I was choosing to leave it after the paper had proven successful. In short, I hate to go.

I wasn't well prepared to be a reporter. I was used to answering, not asking questions, as a reference librarian at the Marshfield Public Library. It took me a year, but I have learned well. If I am not avoided in time now, people are stuck with me asking questions. I wasn't prudent. I'd ask anything and often found out more than I cared to know.

Cohasset is a town of committees, and almost any night of the week could afford an ambitious reporter with a rigorous assignment. I soon became aware of the midnight rides after a meeting adjourned, practically dead asleep at the wheel, back to the office where I would try to compile at the typewriter an accurate account of hours worth of conversation.

I remember especially Wednesday morning's awful empty sick-from-lack-of-sleep feeling from putting the paper to bed all Tuesday night. Then would come the exhilaration from seeing the finished product come off the press, a creation, really, followed by the constant nagging reminder that tomorrow presented more news that would have to be gathered and prepared for the next week. It was like always having to do homework.

Though I grumbled about it, I had a secret love for this complex culling of what really happened from heresay and opinion. We, who roamed Cohasset — the Mariner, Mirror, Ledger, WATD — had become experts at weeding the news. We became competitors too: we'd each bend our head toward our notebooks, greedily ascribing that which would hopefully put the other out of business. The Cohasset press corps also became friends, members of its own secret society, because we shared not only the news but also the stuff that could never get printed.

Although I tried to retain a professional stance, I became friends with the townspeople, as well, and thereafter nervously tread that nebulous thin line which divides the worlds of business and pleasure. I hope I succeeded. Whether or not I should have been seen riding with the Selectmen Chairman on his moped, or goofing around with the Police Chief in the Log and Line, I don't know. I don't regret that I did those things.

Nor do I regret having devoted a year of my life to Cohasset via the newspaper world. It made me do things I never would have done otherwise. I climbed up the inside of the First Parish Church steeple to have a first hand look at the inner workings of the town clock, and also had the vertiginous but never-the-less lovely view of an October afternoon spread out against the Common. I walked the grounds of the newly finished reservoir with its proud superintendent on what must have been the coldest day of the winter to learn how the natural watershed feeds into Bound Brook and then on to Lilly Pond.

The paper perservered beyond the few months life expectancy some people had given it. Praise came in hot and heavy, though unwritten, and I ate it up, the porridge that kept me going. The criticism, also mostly unwritten, was not as plentiful, but when strategically applied, I felt it to the bone. Most of all I discovered that newspapers are like most people, troopers at endurance.

It is hard to think of myself now as being separate from the paper. I was not just some reporter working on a weekly newspaper called the Cohasset Mariner. I was of it, passionately.

Without getting corny and without going into Ecclesiastes and all that, let me conclude by saying that it is time I moved on. Bob Dylan sings that goodbye is too good a word, so he just says fare-thee well. I'll choose fare-thee-well because I'm liable to be back.

Around Town Hall

SEAWALL REPAIRS

Repairs for the Border Street, Margin Street and two Sailing Club seawalls, has been awarded to Eastern Gunite Corp. at a cost of $15,680. As there is $15,000 available for the work, $680 will be transferred to cover the total amount.

SURVEY BOARD

A Massachusetts State Building Code Survey Board has been appointed for Cohasset. The board was formed at the request of Assistant Town Counsel Richard Henderson to cover all legal aspects of the code. Building Inspector James Litchfield appointed Richard Ainslie as a disinterested person; Selectmen appointed Arthur Lehr, Jr., as surveyor; and Fire Chief Charles Peipenbrink was automatically appointed as stipulated in the law.

CONVERSION DESIRED

A public hearing of the Cohasset Zoning Board of Appeals will be held Tuesday, Sept. 18 at 8 p.m. concerning the premises of F.H. and S.P. Wood of 68 Pleasant St. The applicants seek a Special Permit to convert their residence from a one-family dwelling to a three-family dwelling.

PORCH CONSTRUCTION

A public hearing of the Zoning Board of Appeals will be held Tuesday, Sept. 18 at 8 p.m. concerning the premises of Susan Weil, of 619 Jerusalem Road. The applicant seeks a Special Permit to allow the construction of a screened porch on the rear of her residence located in the Watershed Protection District. The applicant is also petitioning the board for a determination as to whether the installation of a so-called French drain surrounding the residence on the south, east and west, so as to carry surface water into Straits Pond, is an allowed use under the town zoning bylaws.

SPORTSMEN'S CLUB

Joseph Rosano, president of the Sportsmen's Club on Rte. 3A, appeared before Selectmen with copies of the minutes from two meetings. Rosano had been asked to return evidence to Selectmen which would show that the club was still ongoing. Rosano also presented a copy of a tax bill.

According to Rosano, four new members joined the club and a vice-president and secretary were elected since he last met with Selectmen. Jane Toomey, the only woman in the club, was allowed associate membership. Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark said a decision on the club's viability hasn't been made.

WINTER SCHEDULE

Selectmen will begin their winter schedule after their Sept. 5 meeting, that is, every Wednesday night at 8 p.m. in the Town Hall.

DISPOSAL STUDY

A committee of five people will be appointed by Selectmen to study the town disposal area and alternatives.

PERMIT GRANTED

The Appeals Board has granted the Hagerty Co. a Special Permit for the addition of an attic office and a dormer at 38 Parker Avenue.

The board found that the slight addition planned would not be substantially more detrimental than the existing non-conforming use to the neighborhood and would not be injurious or dangerous to public health or hazardous because of traffic congestion.

ADDITIONS ALLOWED

The Appeals Board granted Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Tye a Special Permit to attach a small building to the main house with a second story created on the addition, as well as a slight addition to the south side of the kitchen. The board found that the proposed alterations will not be more detrimental to the neighborhood than the existing non-conforming use.

CONVERSION DENIED

The Appeals Board denied Albert and Paula Meallo of 187 South Main Street a Special Permit and Variance for conversion from a two-family to a three-family residence. The board found that the house failed to conform with width, depth and front and side yard requirments. The proposed parking spaces would further violate zoning bylaws, so that a variance would be required. The applicants didn't prove that a hardship existed owing to soil condition, shape or topography of the property.

AUTOHAUS EST. APPROVED

A Special Permit for the construction of a retail and service establishment has been issued to Autohaus for the sale of new and/or used automobiles on Autohaus property located diagonally across Route 3A from their present facility.

The building is subject to the following conditions: A "Stop" sign will be placed to control traffic from the "Right of Way" entering onto Route 3A; a skimming catchbasin will be installed and properly maintained and serviced, which will remove oil and gasoline from surface drainage coming down the "Right of Way" or before it enters the highway drainage system; there will be no final disposal of petroleum products on the property; by the use of evergreens or palisade fencing, parked automobiles on the property will be concealed from the highway.

Purpose Circumvented — Letters

To the Editor:

I read with great interest your article on the donation of eighty acres of land on Forrest Avenue, to the American Legion by my grandfather, August F.B. Petersen. I then read your editorial, and that mandated this letter.

My grandfather came to this country from Denmark, at the age of seventeen, with a few pennies and the clothes on his back. Over the years he worked his way up the ladder and became quite successful. The donation of the 80 acres of land was my grandfather's way of showing his love for America.

We who knew and loved August Petersen could tell you that he would never demand strings when giving a gift, but his wishes were very well thought out, clearly and concisely.

What seems to be involved here is nothing more than plain old-fashioned mercenary gain on three sides; the Legion, the developer, and the town. What seems to have been forgotten is the true spirit in which the gift was given.

The so called hostility could come from those who knew and loved August Petersen and feel that the Legion and town have a moral obligation to carry out what was in my grandfather's heart.

The Brain Teasers Are Coming

House Swap Declared Unanimous Success

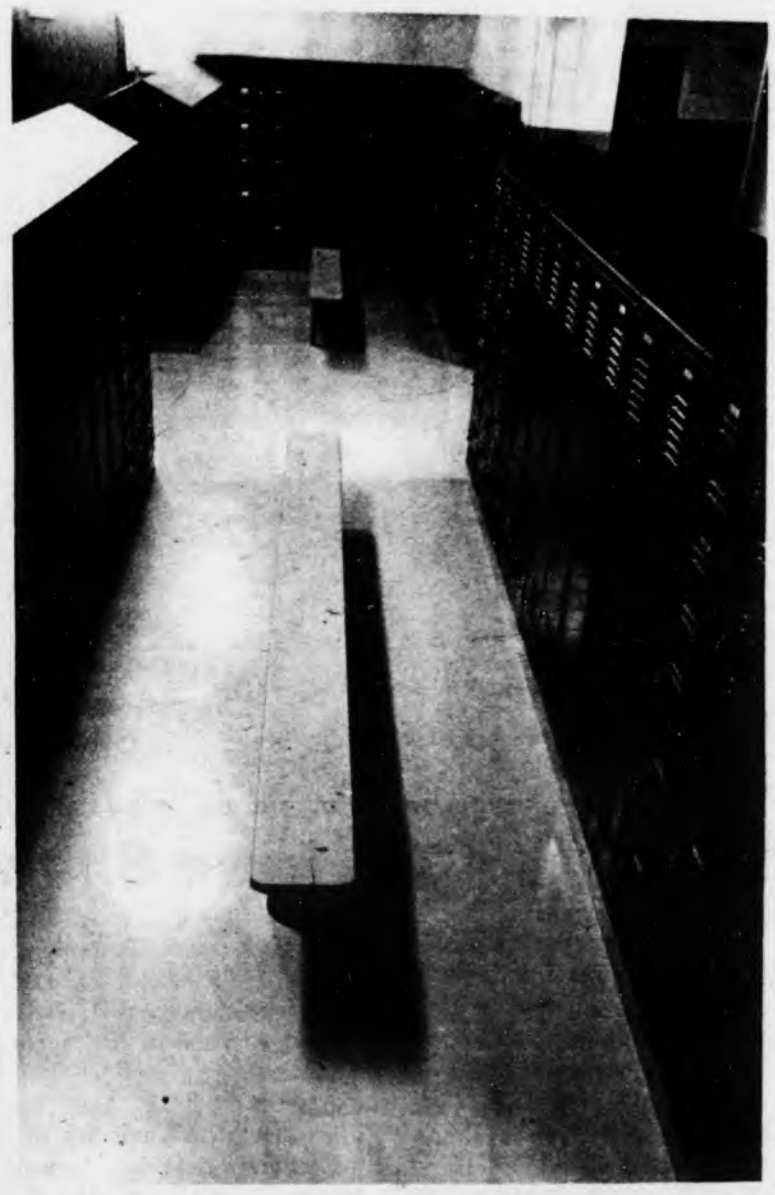
By Karin Bartow

Although vacation house-swapping is not a new idea, it may be today's answer to inflation's prescribed stay-at-home medicine.

It may also be a better, and more comfortable, way to see another country. The Meacham's, Kay, Kirby, and their son Arthur, of 47 Black Rock Road recently returned from a three week vacation in Europe where they were based in Guildford, England at the home of Pam and Steve Palmer. The Palmer's came west and settled at the Meacham's home for their holiday. Both families are seasoned travelers and veteran house-swappers.

It all begins with a listing in a book published by Vacation Home Exchange. You state your desired destination, estimated time of vacation, and give a little information about yourselves, your home, and environs. The book suggests how to proceed once you've made contacts from among the 2,000 listers, but you're on your own from there. Once letters begin arriving things get exciting. Pictures and more detailed information are exchanged until the field is narrowed down and a definite swap is negotiated.

The Palmers have been vacationing this way for 10 years and have visited the U.S. many times before, although this was their first visit to the Northeast coast. Their family, including Mark, 16, Clare, 13 and Nicholas, 10, wanted a location where they could stay put. They did some sight-seeing, but mostly relaxed and enjoyed Sandy Beach, the Swim Center, the Sailing Club, and other summer activities of Cohasset.



"What struck us is that life would be most difficult without a sticker," comments Pam dryly. They met and made many friends and were generously welcomed. One big highlight of their visit was a lobster and clam dinner prepared by JoAnn Rossi — something they'd never have in England.

Pam is an economics teacher of 16 and 17 year old boys at the Royal Grammar School in Guildford, a county town of Surrey of 58,000, located about 30 miles south of London. Steve is an airline pilot for British Airways. They hope to return to Cohasset next summer and have made tentative plans to house-swap again with another family.

This was the third swap for the Meachams, and like the others to the New Jersey shore and Washington D.C., a very successful one.

Their interest was in touring, but they did have a chance to meet some English families and they were invited into several homes for traditional Sunday tea. The rest of their time was spent in one of three ways: they rode the train to London for sight-seeing and theatre; they walked the ancient footpaths which cover England and carry travelers far back into history; and they took day trips by car to Stonehenge, the ancient seaport of Rye, Winchester, and many other places. They also visited friends in Friel, France.

Both families managed a little overlap time on both ends to acquaint each other with their respective homes, neighborhoods, and countries, and to compare vacations. The "swap" was declared a unanimous success by all.

Operation Storage Vault

The storage vault for the town's permanent records, authorized and constructed under Article 20 of the 1977 Town Meeting, now is in full operation in the high school.

Most of the permanent records that were stored in the Town Hall have been moved to the new vault. These records include books formerly located in the auditorium vault, the cellar store room and the Selectmen's vault.

There are no permanent records stored in the cellar store room, nor should any be stored there in the future.

An extensive collection of documents, both old and new, also remain in the auditorium vault. Many of the oldest of these papers have been preserved within protective plastic folders of accepted archival material.

A large steel storage locking cabinet is located within the new high school vault for the additional protection of the oldest and most valuable documents and books. The folder has been given a coat of fire-retardant paint in accordance with state requirements.

Other features include new flourescent lighting, which has greatly improved reading capability within the vault, and a new wire screen enclosure, which has been constructed in front of the vault entrance to provide open space and to protect the combination lock on the vault door.

Of great assistance in the development of the new high school storage vault have been Superintendent of the Tree and Park Department Peter Laugelle and members of the Tree and Park Department; Superintendent of the Wire Department Stephen Wigmore and department members James McNamara and Richard Gallo; and custodians Kenneth Sargent of the Town Hall and Richard Ainslie of the schools.

The transfer of the Town's permanent records was aided by Wally Young and Herb March, also of the Tree and Park Department. Valuable assistance has been rendered by three recreation department summer CETA employees, Tara, Lauren and Chris McNabb, without whom the project could not have been carried out so expeditiously. They were instrumental in making the transfer, worked to organize the books in the new vault, and have aided in gathering together some of the short-term temporary records being stored in the Town Hall.

The Town should examine the advantages of installing air-conditioning and humidity controls in the high school vault to assist in the preservation of our older records.

The Men's Division, two rounds of 18 holes, Saturday and Sunday:

Championship Flight: Bill Fitzgerald defeated Bob Petrie, 8 & 6.

A Flight: Jim Froio defeated Dick Forrest, 4 & 3.

B Flight: Jim Benedict defeated Tom Churchill, 3 & 2.

C Flight: Ralph Ellis defeated Jeff Swain, 1 up (38 holes).

D Flight: Doug Bailey defeated Bill Glancy, 3 & 2.

E Flight: John Emmons defeated Dr. Folke Wiklund, 8 & 7.

F Flight: Dr. Ralph Struzzier defeated Dr. Richard Alemian, be default.

A week ago Saturday and Sunday, the President's Trophy, 36 holes Medal play with full handicap, was played and the winner was Jim White with 68-63-131; second place winner was Dr. Richard Hollander with 68-66-134; and third place winner was Dr. Ralph Froio with 68-68-136.

☐Scott Hurlbut of 20 Forest Notch won the Jr. Club Championship with an 82 in the 18 hole round held Aug. 24 for the 15-17 year olds. Scott also qualified and won his first round in the New England Jr. Open Golf Championship at Ponkapoag C.C. in Canton.

☐The Jr. Golf Club Championship for girls was won by Gina Froio. In the 13-14 year old division, Doug Clay won the 18 hole round with an 87; the 9 hole boys was won by Jeff Hartwell; 5 hole boys won by Glen Froio; 5 hole girls won by Susie McMahon; and the Fun Group, 3 holes, age 9-and-under, boys winner was Chris Spellman, and girls winner was Christina Buckley.

The Women's Championship was to have been played this week.

New Tennis Tournament

☐A new tennis tournament was launched this weekend by tennis enthusiasts and connoisseurs of fine food, and was sponsored by the Greenhouse Restaurant. Sixteen teams played in the mixed doubles, blind draw tournament on Saturday and Sunday.

Winners were Jim Hoy and Jill Tallman who received a silver bowl and gift certificate, each, for dinner at the Greenhouse. Runners-up were Larry Mayo and Susie Dalrymple who received a bottle of wine and a can of tennis balls. Plans will be made for a second annual Greenhouse Tennis Tournament next summer, with the possible addition of a men's and women's doubles games also.

Two Firsts At Horse Show

☐Lee Pfaffmann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Pfaffmann of 45 Sohier St., has been accumulating an impressive portfolio of equestrian awards this season. Last week she competed in the Whitman-Hanson 4-H Open Jr. Horse Show in Hanson, along with six other riders from Davenport Barn, Cedar Street. They also represented the Cohasset Riding Club. Lee took two first prizes on her 11-year old Thoroughbred, Mare, in the Hunt Seat Division: Hunter Under Saddle and Fitting and Showmanship. She also won an over-all second place award: "Reserve Champion."

Sheila Sillcocks of Scituate, also from Davenport Barn, took first place in the Senior Equation.

Several weeks ago Lee placed 1st, 2nd, and 4th in a 4-H Show held in Easton. Earlier this Spring she also won second place in the Cohasset Jumpathon, and 1st in 'Training Level One' in the Dressage Show. Lee takes weekly lessons from Chris Rowe, head instructor at Davenport Barn and rides Mare daily. It shows! Congratulations and keep up the good work!

☐Two junior sailors from the Cohasset Yacht Club and Cohasset Sailing Club placed 7th and 11th, respectively, last week in the Massachusetts Bay Midget races at MIT on the Charles River.

Scott Duncombe, 13, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Duncombe of 2 Sheldon Road, sailed his Tech Dinghy as defending champion of the Wood Trophy. His 11 year old sister, Amy, qualified to crew with him by placing second in the class competition at the Yacht Club. Tim Curran and Perry Harris sailed for the Sailing Club.

☐Children, teens and young adults returning to school at grammar, high, and college levels are no longer the only ones thinking about upcoming schedules and courses. Many adults, and many women, are returning to the fulltime student ranks to complete and further their education.

Mrs. Molly MaDan, who begins a two year course at the B.U. Graduate School of Management for a MBA degree this September, earned her Bachelors degree in economics at the Univ. of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. She worked in the Securities Department of New England Life Insurance Company for seven years.

Mrs. Denise Yess returns to B.U. for the last half of study for a Masters of Science degree in Speech and Language Pathology. She did her undergraduate work in speech pathology at Marquette University, Wis. After completion of the degree study, she will spend nine months interning for Clinical Certification, and afterwards will be qualified to work in hospitals, clinics, or private practice with people who have speech problems. She and her husband James have two children, Jimmy, 5, and Desiree, 8.

Christen Maki, 7½, and Sally Ash, 8, present their exhibit in the Sandy Beach Sandcastle Contest.

Mrs. Kathy Palimeri of 347 N. Main St., will begin a two year nursing program at Massasoit Community College in Brockton this September. She had worked at South Shore Hospital as a certified surgical technician. Supporting her efforts are husband Patrick, and children Kelly, 17, Joseph, 15, Alise, 12, and Leah, 10; the oldest, Michael, is in the Navy.

Kathy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Migliaccio of No. Main Street, were happy to learn of her brother Nicholas' recent promotion to vice president of the Joseph Garneau Co. in Louisville, Ky. where he lives. He and Kathy are both Cohasset High School graduates.

To all students — best wishes for a successful school year!

☐Bob and Carol Beggan of 4 Sankey Road, are parents of a daughter, Hannah Elizabeth, both Aug. 18 at Boston Hospital for Women. They have two other children, Matthew, 8, and Catie, 5. Grandparents are Mrs. Betty Grassie of Cohasset and Mr. and Mrs. William Beggan of Arlington. Great Grandparents are Mrs. Catherine Noonan and Mrs. Kathryn Grassie, both of Cohasset.

Richard Grassie, his wife Susan, and their children, Sarah, 8, Lauren, 5, and Paul, 2½, have been frequent visitors at Mrs. Betty Grassie's home this summer as they are in the process of moving back to the South Shore from Virginia. They will be living in Hanover.

☐The Cohasset Rec'ers 14-and-under tennis team were not surprised last Monday to meet very tough competition in the Sportsman Tennis Team, who defeated them 6-0 in the quarter-finals round of the Harris-Wightman League of the NELTA. In spite of the defeat, coach Helen Pratt says the kids felt good about their playing and the progress they have made this summer, their first as a team in this new junior league. They plan to invite the Sportsman Tennis Team to Cohasset at the beginning of the next season for the experience of more play with this excellent team.

☐Mrs. Tyler Pratt Mullally, formerly of Cohasset and daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Reginal Pratt, was married Aug. 1 to Henry W. Putnam of Lawrence, Long Island.

☐Bob Donahue of 185 Jerusalem Road was aboard the Five Queens on Aug. 25, assisting Captain Bob Baggs of Scituate and Bob's brother, Carl of Allston, when they landed the biggest bluefin tuna of the season, a 1,177 pounder! Donahue and Baggs have been fishing together for eight years and between them have caught over 60 bluefins by rod and reel. This enormous tuna was only 58 pounds short of the World's record bluefin caught last year off Prince Edward Island, weighing 1,235 pounds!

☐Hiller Zobel of 294 Jerusalem Road, was confirmed this week as a State Superior Court Justice by the Governor's executive council. Mrs. Rya Zobel was confirmed last March as a U.S. District Court judge. Mr. Zobel is a graduate of Harvard College and Harvard Law School; he attended Oxford University and has written many legal and historical articles; a book on the Boston Massacre and co-edited volumes of the John Adams legal papers.

He is a law partner of the Boston firm of Brown, Rudnick, Freed and Gesmer.

☐John Coe was spotted riding a ten-speed bike with no hands down a long portion of South Main Street — and on around the corner on Sumner Street — still with no hands! We were duly impressed.

Community Center Report

The Community Center program committee has announced its "Fall Spectacular" of programs which will be mailed to residents this week.

Courses include aerobic dance, Boston disco, stretch fabric sewing, cake decoration, dancerize, crocheting, needlepoint, creative reading, automotive self-help, crewel and embroidery, Oriental rugmaking, home decorating seminars and a repeat of the American-China Trade course by Ellen Woolf.

Workshops include nutrition and food costs, energy today, consumer affairs, stenciling, crafts, jams and jellies, Greek phylo dough, brunch omelets, CPR and Christmas wreath making. The popular breadmaking workshop will be held for the third time in succession this year.

AUTUMN EXCURSIONS

This Fall's monthly bus trips include an exciting roster: Newport's Strawberry Banke Village, Museum of Fine Arts Chardin exhibit, "The Nutcracker Suite" and a Broadway trip to "Annie."

CENTER SCHOOL OF BALLET

Debbie Edwards, the center's new instructor, currently dances with the Boston Repertory Ballet. She will offer courses for youths and adults Tuesday from 1:30-6 p.m. Ms. Edwards also instructs at the South Shore Conservatory, the Cape Cod Conservatory and Massasoit College. Call the center or Judy Volungis at 383-0752 for class times and registration information. Registration is by mail or in person at the center from 9 a.m. to 12 noon.

BOWLING LEAGUES

Bill O'Connell, supervisor of the CCC bowling alleys has announced the fall schedule for leagues and general bowling.

Open bowling Monday through Thursday is from 3-5 p.m. and 6-8 p.m. Women's League is Tuesday, 8-10 p.m., Couples' League is Tuesday from 8 to 10 p.m., Men's League, Wednesday 8 to 10 p.m. Thursday evening from 8 to 10 p.m. is available for a league.

Leagues signing up for mornings are the Roaring Twenty's on Tuesday, the Senior Citizens on Wednesday and youth will sign up on Saturday morning.

Call the center at 383-0088 for more information, or make sure you get a program mailing this week! Membership in the Community is required for all courses, workshops and instructions.

Sailing Club

committee thought it had been shot. Shortly following the blast, Steve Sprole of Scituate finished third, while David Lord and John Kean came in fourth and fifth, respectively.

The Mariner would like to thank the Yacht Club for allowing its reporter on the committee boat with committee members Susan McVeigh and Jeff Nothagle, and club steward Cliff Dickson, who reminds one not a little of Jaws' "Quint," and who we discovered does in fact have some real-life white shark experience.

Dickson said until recently he and Jack Lowes from Indian Trail held the record for harpooning a 1,700 pound white shark in Cohasset waters in 1956. The jaws are in the Scituate home of Mrs. J.W. Lowes.

Dangling our big right toe from the committee boat, we said: "Cliff, would a shark actually eat a boat — like in Jaws?" Quint-like, Cliff only grunted. We retrieved the toe.

Susan McVeigh, who sales a mean little red sailboat but only races in an occasional club chowder, said she would like to make it perfectly clear that she is not permanently volunteering as chairman of the race committee. And after last week, we can certainly see why not.

Some of what we heard we will dispell as rumor, but according to sources, committee boat duty can be dangerous. Of course there is always the possibility of cannon fire from Wakeman's, and Cliff said that one year a boat, while jockeying for starting position, rammed the committee boat causing considerable damage. And then there are the white sharks, which eat committee boats.

Bird-A-Thon Sponsors Needed

Jack Hubbard, Neil and Sharon Osborne of Cohasset will be participating in a special event — and a first for this area — a Bird-A-Thon. They will be out trying to identify as many different species as possible, birds seen or heard, during September 15 and 16.

They and other birders in the area need your support. Over 100 birders are already signed up and are seeking sponsors. Sponsors pledge a certain amount of each species the birder sees — therefore, the more species seen, and the more sponsors per birder, the more money raised! To add some fun and extra dimension to the Massachusetts reports, birders from Hawaii to Maine, England to Peru are also participating.

Bird-A-Thon returns will be reported at a 10th birthday celebration for MBO on Sunday night, September 16, at the Plymouth Yacht Club. Sponsors, birders and other MBO supporters will be on hand to hear the results.

The Bird-A-Thon is to benefit the Manomet Bird Observatory located in southern Plymouth. One of only three bird observatories in North America, it has gained a widely respected reputation for its research and education programs. Each year, college students from across the country spend 3-6 months at the observatory, learning field and research techniques.

MBO's research is especially directed at studying birds as indicators of environmental change. Studies underway or recently completed include seabird populations on George's Bank, prior to and during seabed mineral development; identification of coastal areas critical to migrating shorebirds; avian radioecology at the Pilgrim I nuclear power station; nesting biology of herons and ibises at Clark's Island, and banding approximately 12,000 migrating land birds annually for indications of change in population levels.

To participate in the Bird-A-Thon, call one of your local birders or MBO at 617-224-6521.

North River Players To Audition

The North River Players of the North River Community Club in Norwell have announced auditions for their first play of the season. Willy Wonka's 'Chocolate Factory', will be held the weekend of September 8 and 9 at the clubhouse, 513 River Street, Norwell.

The family comedy is made up of a diversified cast, according to producers Sue Rogers and Pat Tedeschi. Auditions for the three boys and two girls, in their early teens (10 to 14) will be held Saturday, Sept. 8, at 2 p.m.

Auditions for 20 adult male and female roles have been scheduled for Sunday, Sept. 9, at 2 p.m.

For more information call Mrs. Tedeschi at 659-4814 or Mrs. Rogers at 659-4709

Obituaries

Roger Coulter

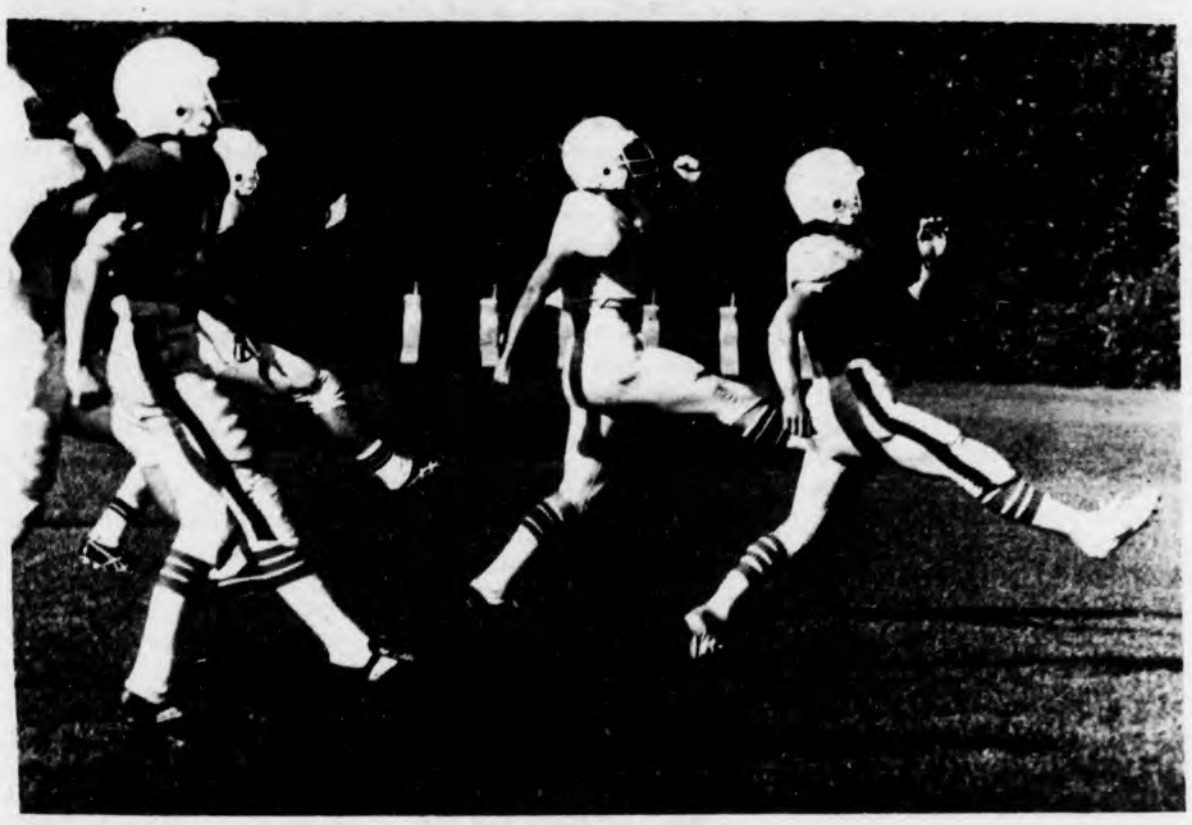
Roger Coulter, 82, of Cohasset, a prominent trial lawyer, died Wednesday, Aug. 29, after a long illness.

Born in Baltimore, Md., he had lived in Cohasset for the past 50 years.

He was a senior partner in the law firm of Parker, Coulter, Daley and White and was a fellow of the American College of Trial Lawyers, Boston Bar Association, Massachusetts Bar Association, and American Bar Association.

A veteran of World Wars I and II, he had served as a major in the Marine Corps.

He was prominent in many civic and social organizations, including the Ward Room Club and Cohasset Yacht Club; he was also active on various town committees.



Coulter was a graduate of Governor Dummer Academy, Williams College and Harvard Law School. He had been a trustee of Governor Dummer Academy and a member of the Williams Club and the Harvard Club.

He was the husband of the late Rosamond Coulter, and leaves a son, Robert O. Coulter of Guilford, Conn.; a daughter, Marion C. Bowditch of Cohasset; a sister, Jean O. Coulter of Cohasset and eight grandchildren.

A memorial service was held Sunday in First Parish Church of Cohasset.

Donations may be made to First Parish Church.

Season Starts

While the football hopefuls limber up their legs at football practice, Head Coach John Leone and his Assistant Coach John Anderson go over their grand strategy for the upcoming gridiron season.

LWV Opens Season with Membership Brunch

The Cohasset League of Women Voters begins its activities for the year with its annual fall membership brunch, Thursday, Sept. 13 at 9:30 a.m. at the Unitarian Parish House.

A guest speaker from the Massachusetts Office of Energy Resources will address the group. This office is providing energy training procedures for city and town officials interested in learning about energy conservation. It operates under the National Energy Conservation Act in administering energy conservation money for Massachusetts cities and towns. Five million dollars will be spent to run statewide energy training sessions and to grant communities money to make their schools more energy conscious.

The public is cordially invited to attend this function. Reservations are required. Please contact Mrs. Doris McNulty, 383-1886, by Sept. 10 if you wish to attend. Babysitting will be provided, but reservations are necessary, as the number that can be accommodated is limited.

The League, a non-partisan citizen's group, is a political organization which takes action on governmental issues in the public interest. Its purpose is to foster education in citizanship and to support improved legislation. The league may take action on governmental measures and policies in the public interest. It does not support or oppose any political party or any candidate. The Cohasset League meets monthly at the Unitarian Parish House. All meetings are open to the public.

Twin-Triplet Moms in Kickoff

The South Shore Mothers of Twins and Triplets Club will begin its 1979-80 season at 8 p.m. Monday, September 10, at the Eagles Hall in East Weymouth, where meetings will continue on the second Monday of each month. Mrs. Diane McStravick of Hanson, president, will preside.

Prospective new, active or inactive members are invited to attend.

"Consumer Protection" will be the topic of discussion for the September meeting, with Linda McCormack of the Massachusetts Attorney General's office discussing what consumers can do about "rip-offs"

Convention highlights will also be a topic of discussion.

The South Shore Mothers of Twins and Triplets Club is just one of more than two hundred clubs which comprise the National Organization of Mothers of Twins Clubs, Inc. The more than 9,000 members of the national organization have a common goal in broadening the understanding of those aspects of child development and rearing especially related to twins, as well as to cooperate and participate in projects conducted by doctors and other researchers in medical and psychological research with twins and/or siblings.

The club also provides a social setting for mothers where they can discuss problems and accomplishments and gain support.

Lights Out

preparing for temporary blackouts.

According to press reports, there are more than 10,000 people on the waiting list now, but Sue and Galt Grant recently converted their oil burner to gas at a cost of $600.

"Basically, what we're doing is going broke saving money," Galt said. "The Gas Co. gives you a pretty good deal. It will put the oil burner back within the year if you change your mind.

"Our unit had quite a few problems. The line from the street was partially blocked. We had this problem with the pilot light going off. It took 30 visits from the Gas Co. in two weeks to solve the problem."

Like many other residents, the Grants have been having additional storm/combination windows installed. And they will keep their thermostat at 66 degrees during the day and 60 degrees at night.

Sue Grant said: "Most people we know have been keeping their houses colder than ours. Luckily, our 1896 house was built with energy-saving in mind, i.e. west and south exposures. As for our conversion from oil to gas, I hope we were the exception, otherwise the Gas Co. is losing a lot of money."

Linda Henderson is still looking for a corner to put a stove. "We're keeping the thermostat around 60-62 degrees all the time. We've added combo windows and have a small car. We're only able to keep the temperature that low by having two sets of long underwear."

One group of women reached on Cohasset Beach when asked how they or the town should save energy chanted almost in unison: "Tell them to turn the heat down in the schools!" A quick check with Business Manager John Raftery proved the schools were actively perusing the problem and are due for the result of an "energy audit" by a Walpole architect within the week.

Langmaid, School Committee Chairman, said the School Committee already had been advised to put regulators on the furnaces at Deer Hill and the High School, although he said reluctantly they were not presently planning anything for Osgood, which has manual controls. A year ago the school committee had money in the budget for an energy audit...and they have received recommendations on how to spend it.

Bringing us back to the town...Selectman Henry Ainslie said the Selectmen have discussed energy conservation measures, but felt their biggest concern would be the old town hall, "and we're lucky to get money to paint it." Other town buildings are relatively "tight," while the town hall is still under study for rennovation.

Other comments from residents:

— "We're wearing more sweaters."

— "I take naps in the Winter — I almost hibernate. I won't go out at all. I very rarely socialize in the Winter."

— In past years I've turned off the upstairs radiators, this year I'm getting the kids down comforters, and my husband and I may indulge in an electric blanket. I recently bought myself two Lanz nightgowns."

Pat Delaney said she would like to see more crossing guards, and less busing of students in the village area. Another woman suggested villagers should not be allowed to use cars in the village. "No one who lives within a half mile of the village should be allowed to use their cars."

When we suggested that out-of-town athletic events might be curtailed for energy-saving, most individuals said they felt transportation to athletic events should be deemed necessary.

Several individuals said they had in recent years installed zone heating, and that it really helps. Also cited as helpful was keeping the temperature at one reasonable level.

Liz Holthaus said, "We have always conserved energy. I take the bus to work. We have a gas stove." She added the Holthaus are prepared for any emergency as a result of camping equipment.

Richard Callahan: "We have gas and we're hoping for the best." He might also invest in a pair of "colored" longjohns this year.

Frederick Howe said, "We have storm windows, period. We have insulation and we turn the heat down at night, but not too low. We're senior citizens."

Ed Fortier lives in a one-year old house which is completely insulated. "We kept the thermostat down to 68 degrees last year. My wife and I have energy-saving cars — a Datsun and a VW."

We hope there are some energy conservation measures within this article which you can borrow. But we hope that whatever you do — or don't do — you heed the advice of Robby Lawrence and at least, "Turn your lights off during naps."

Don Your Thinking Caps! Brainteasers Back

Comely Caroline's peacock lays an egg in Sheila's yard next door. Who owns the egg? And while you're at it, where can anyone but you sit?

The answers after this message.

Next week, the Mariner launches its fourth annual Brain Teaser contest, and if you are in the mood for mental puzzles, here's a chance to win some pre-Christmas cash and have fun to boot.

The contest will run for six weeks with prizes of more than $150 to be awarded. First prize is $100, second prize $30 and third, $20. Two-year Mariner subscriptions go to the fourth and fifth place winners and one-year subscriptions will be given to those who finish in the sixth through 10 spots.

THE RULES

The Brain Teaser rules are no puzzle. Each week contestants will be asked to answer 10 questions — plus a bonus to break ties. Most will call for nothing but straight logic; a few will require some knowledge of U.S. Presidents and once in a while we'll send you on a minor mission of research.

All answers must be typed or printed clearly. If we can't read your henscratch, we mark you wrong.

All entries must include the contestant's name, address and telephone number.

Each entry must be postmarked on or before the Tuesday following publication of each Brain Teaser. This gives contestants five to six days to mull over their choices.

All disputes should be made in writing (no calls) and mailed to the Mariner at Box 682, Marshfield, Mass. 02050. Every attempt will be made by the Brain Teaser judge to settle arguments. Should he need help, the Mariner editor in-charge-of contests will offer his flimsy assistance.

The contest will run for six weeks with a minimum of 60 questions plus bonus questions. The winners will be those hardy souls who correctly solve the most number of puzzles. Bonus questions will be used to break ties. Should they fail to do so, we will one, cross that bridge when we come to it; two, ask more questions, or three, choose a winner by lot.

THE JUDGE

The former Brain Teaser editor, having made so many dumb cluck mistakes, has been put out to pasture. This year the contest will be run by Stephan Hall of Marshfield who is a stock broker by profession and a wizard of the mental puzzle by hobby.

Hall is a two-time winner of the contest (he didn't enter the first year) and has generously agreed to retire so someone else can get rich. Crossword puzzles and other mental games are really much more than a hobby to him. He's addicted to the stuff, and he's not afraid of a little research now and then. Example —

One year our question about a U.S. President who was a shorthand expert sent him on a merry chase that began at Katherine Gibbs, a secretarial school in Boston. They were no help. He talked to history professors at Boston University, Brandeis and Harvard. The Harvard man suggested Grover Cleveland knew shorthand, so Hall called Buffalo (Cleveland's home) and was referred to the Buffalo Historical Society.

"Can I speak to someone who knows Grover Cleveland," asked the inquisitor.

"You mean who knows him personally?" answered the demure voice on the other end without so much of a hint that she might have kook on the line. She turned out polite but was no help.

Deterred? Never.

Hall had a hunch about Woodrow Wilson, so he called up a Professor Arthur Link at Princeton who confirmed that Wilson was indeed a shorthand expert.

What is smokeless tobacco used for? Snuff, Hall figured, but he decided to double check with Philip Morris. After calling Virginia he tracked down a chemist who agreed that snuff is smokeless tobacco.

So, you see we have no rookie running the Brain Teaser contest. All contestants have to worry about is the game and the cheer it will provide.

Until next week then —

Incidentally, peacocks don't lay eggs (peahens do), and anyone but you can sit on your lap.

By Joan Pinkham

When a group of women take the time to go through their files in search of their favorite recipes, you know the inevitable result will be a mouth-watering collection. That's just the way it was when the Moms of the Ella F. Osborne Elementary School of Norwell sent out an appeal for contributions to the cookbook they were compiling. The result? 'My Favorite Thing,' and it's great. Inside the plastic, loose-leaf cover, you'll find two hundred pages of delicious recipes I can't begin to catalogue. Just for teasers, I'll mention a few, though it won't be easy to choose. Among the more unusual are bagels, taco salad, pesto, beef chowder and this recipe for Joanne Lawrence's called

MUSHROOM SOUFFLE

3 T butter or oleo
2 small onions, chopped
2 eggs
2/3 c. packaged bread crumbs [Pepperidge Farm Stuffing]
3/4 c. milk
3/4 c. light cream
1 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. pepper
1 lb. fresh mushrooms [chopped coarsely]

Saute onions in butter. In 1 1/2 qt. casserole beat eggs. Mix in crumbs, milk, cream and seasonings. Let stand until crumbs absorb liquid. Blend in mushrooms and onions. Bake at 350 for 60 to 70 min., uncovered, until set. Joanne suggests this can be made a day in advance and used as a main meal for two, or in place of potatoes or rice along with meat and vegetables for four serving.

What better way to start the fall season than with a new cookbook? Jaded appetites perk up with the coming of cooler weather and the kitchen seems more appealing. Co-chairmen of this ambitious undertaking were Mrs. Edmund Dilorio, Mrs. Ronald Dolan and Mrs. Edward Lowe. There were 15 on their committee and drawings were done by Mrs. Dolan and Robert MacKinnon, Jr. Maureen Prince did the honors at the typewriter. All deserve a medal for a terrific job. This recipe alone is worth the price of the book and is from Barbara Slupski.

TWINKIE TORTE

1 c. chocolate bits
2 T water
4 pkg. Twinkies
3 egg yolks, 3 egg whites
2 T sugar
1/2 pt. heavy cream

Melt chocolate bits and water. Cool. Add yolks one at a time, beating well after each addition. Fold stiffly beaten whites to which sugar has been added, to chocolate mixture. Beat cream stiff and fold into chocolate mixture. Cut Twinkies in half lengthwise. Make layer of Twinkies in pan, cut side up. Pour mixture over top. Sprinkle with pecans. Refrigerate overnight.

Dale Dilorio is the one to call if you wish a copy of "My Favorite Thing," for she has copies at her Lincoln St. home. Two hundred books will be set aside for sale at "Introduction Night" at the school to be held the 27th, so hurry! Here is Leah Kean's recipe from the Appetizer and Beverage chapter, called:

CHEDDAR CHEESE PIE

1 10 oz. can green chili peppers [not hot]
1 lb. mild Cheddar cheese
3 T cream or milk
1 T chili pepper juice
1 egg

Line a 9" pie plate with peppers. Shred cheese and place on top of peppers. Mix cream, pepper juice and egg and pour over cheese. Bake at 350 for 40 to 45 min., until golden. Leah says this can be prepared well in advance and is great for entertaining.

Country Crafters Show On Tap

A group of local craftsmen known as the Country Crafters will be holding a show and sale the weekend of Sept. 8 and 9 at the Old Derby Building in Hingham Square.

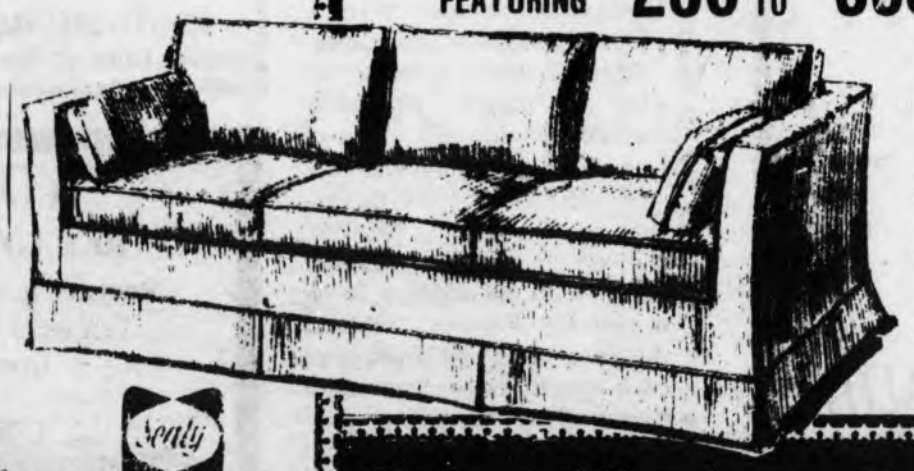
In its sixth year, the group continues to undergo changes in the crafts represented as new members join and others leave. Along with the usual items available such as stained glass, jewelry, stuffed animals and wooden toys, such unusual items as hand carved and painted birds, Nantucket baskets, Ukranian pysanky or hand decorated eggs and hand made Chistening gowns will also be represented.

The show will take place from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, and from 12 noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday. The Old Derby Building is located on Main St. on the hill overlooking Loring Theater. For further information, you may call 545-1034. Free admission.

Open House Supper At SS Art Center

Now is the time to make reservations for the Annual Opening Supper at the South Shore Art Center, Cohasset, Sunday, Sept. 16. Members, friends and the general public are welcome to join festivities that will mark the beginning of the Art Center's 25th year.

In response to a mailing for membership, the Center is happy to report there will be many new faces this year along with familiar ones, who will received special preview invitations, reduced fees for classes, supplies, framing and the Center newsletter.



The Open House from 4-6 p.m. will highlight an exhibit of Stain Paintings by Louise Kalish and Functional Forms by James Fitzpatrick. The public will be able to view the student-instructor exhibit, meet teachers and enroll in fall classes. The annual pot-luck supper will follow at 6:30 p.m. Reservations should be made by telephoning 383-95-8 between noon and 4 p.m.

ANGLER'S CORNER

By Roger Hare

We have had rather a quiet week of fishing, and while the weather cooperated, the fish for the most part did not.

The bluefish that were all over our coast the week before last have moved to parts unknown. A few blues were off Minot Light and a few could be found off the power station at Manomet but those big schools of bluefish were not around.

Chester Speed, who had caught some blues before, searched for those bluefish from the North River to Duxbury Bay where he caught a big mackerel, but those elusive blues were not there either.

My son Jim came home from Maryland and on Saturday we took several of his friends fishing. We found the blues on the inside of the tuna fleet in towards Provincetown. Some of Jim's friends had never been bluefishing before and had a big surprise when they caught them because of the fight the fish gave. The birds showed us the blues, and in all we caught 10 on swimmers and on poppers. We caught one blue that weighed 16 pounds, but they averaged 12 pounds each.

I had a bush fishing weekend. My sister, Barbara Grube is visiting us so we went down to Duxbury Bay to fish for flounder. We caught about 25 of those flatties in a little more than an hour. Kathy Stickles caught the most but Jayne Hare Dane caught the biggest ones. I took a lot of ribbing because all I caught was a small one that had to go back. But then, the ANGLER doesn't have to catch fish all the time, all I have to do is write about them. Besides, I hate cleaning flounder. I leave them whole unless they are very large.

Walter Kaminski and his family found some cod off the Gurnet so those fish are back again too. Now is the time to start filling the freezer for those long months when it is too cold to fish.

Those killer whales really ruined the giant bluefin tuna fishing this year. The whales appear to have left our corner of Stellwagen Bank, but there is only a fraction of the number of boats fishing out there and only a few of them are taking tuna. There are a lot of mackerel on the tuna grounds and there are a lot of bluefish that keep popping up near the tuna fleet.

Loring Packard, manager at the Home Savings Bank on Rte. 139 in Pembroke, has been fishing with Artie Maher, chef at the Bridgewaye, and while they haven't caught a lot of fish, they were out one day when a 50-foot came up near the boat. It was so close they were startled by the whale's blowing. They saw five whales that day, but the others kept their distance. Whales are always a fascinating sight especially when they surface right next to your boat.

The striped bass fishing slowed right down last week too, but I did hear that one boat caught about 300 pounds of bass on the other side of the Cape at Chatham so just maybe we will have a return of a fall blitz of these fine fish.

Women South ...Freedom With Finesse

By Lois Martin

You fellows turn around a minute. This is women's business. Don't get nervous. This'll be no devious ploy to trick families out of a decent supper by their favorite cook. Herein is no militant call for the sisters to arise.

Because they've already risen. Effective women are not striving for equal rights. They've simply taken them. That's not to say there aren't the lingering female forces still shutting doors on men's fingers.

And it's not to suggest "all thing being equal . . . " are equal.

But most women have philosophies that fall between that of the strident forces who fight men instead of working toward a reasonable mesh with them, and the go-home and stay there cred o propounded by Phyllis Schlaffly, who's busy pursuing and activating a productive career.

PATCHES

Most females are neither extreme We like men and often marry them for keeps. We view motherhood as the highest responsibility. In fact many of us will go so far as to say having children may be the best thing we've done.

But we know it's not all we can do. Smart women don't allow their minds to be dormant simply because they're mothers any more than men do because they're fathers. On the contrary, child rearing can be inspiring. We have impetus to think, to create, to pass along abilities so youngsters will pick up the baton of knowledge in life's relay race.

And there's a new, low-profile, high-toned organization for women of the ilk, called Women South. That of course, means south of Boston. That's us. It started in April, meets about nine times a year on the third Tuesday of the month, in Quincy.

I could say it's a men's club for women, except I've never attended a men's club. Women South gathers, more than 100 members strong, in the Neighborhood Club a pleasant building with lounge, nice enough appointments and a large dining area.

As a guest you get a name tag that doesn't say "Hello" on it and you're invited to display your business cards or other creations on a table. That table is heavily browsed. Women have always been good at browsing anyway. And the members and guests carefully note what the others have brought in.

They're friendly and unaffected. They represent nearly as many fields of endeavor as there are members.In some cases they offer job openings they'd like to fill. Some own their own businesses, some are administrators in somebody else's business and some are looking to be either one of the above.

In fact, from what I could gather, interest is the only prerequisite to being there. The women are confident but they were also on the alert for helpful information, not on motherhood, but in business. There was a teacher/long distance runner, an insurance executive, a chemist, a law student, realtors, even a complaint officer from Boston Edison who rolled her eyes when she announced her position. No one mentioned the ERA.

Not a peep came forth about liberation. They were as liberated as they chose to be.

But there were also things missing. There were no complaints, for example, no chit chat of children's accomplishments. As valuable as those are, they don't get top billing at Women South. Their mothers get the notice. And they don't use the time to fluff their feathers nor ruffle those on others. Those in some auspicious positions explain them without being bores or braggarts. And those who haven't yet managed to do what they can or choose to, took pride in the achievers and sought them for advice.

The tablecloths and dinner napkins were pink, a self-indulgence perhaps. All around the table the pleasant crowd showed no signs at all of guilt. Not one of them looked as if she should have been home mending. I can only assume we were all equally caught up on that chore.

Not an unkind word was mentioned of an employer, a firm, a husband, a child, a neighbor. It was upward and onward in thinking . . . so long as the aspirations didn't interfere with home and hearth.

The group next meets in October, starting at 5:30 p.m. Margaret Stone is founder of Women South as well as Women West and Northwest. She's at 35 Standish Road in Wellesley.

Women South won't get rid of your aversion to sit-ups; it won't help you get your spice rack in order. But it will offer you a perspective on avenues open to you or any other person. And with the exposure comes the support of women who don't plan to rule the world but who plan to make a contribution to it through work as well as through the home.

October 22 STM Planned

The upcoming special town meeting scheduled for Oct. 22 has been called as a result of a petition being circulated by police and fire departments to pay for their new contracts.

Town officials expect the warrant to include an article or articles regarding the expansion of sewer facilities for the town, as a result of the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering's recent request that the Environmental Protection Division of the Attorney General's office initiate appropriate legal action against the town for violation of its discharge permit.

William Montouri, chairman of the water and sewer commissioners, said Monday's meeting with selectmen and the advisory board to discuss the situation was attended by approximately 15 citizens, none of whom gave the commissioners a clue as to what they desired in the form of expanded facilities, if they did, or at what site.

Articles calling for the final plans and specifications of the Metcalf and Eddy proposed facility and site (Music Circus) were voted down at annual town meeting.

Montouri said the sewer commissioners welcome any proposals or articles from citizens dealing with the same. "We have been led to believe that petitions are being or are about to be circulated," Montouri said, adding that he had no idea who the petitioners might be, or the desired action.

He said he felt there was no way the town was going to escape taking some kind of action. "Delays are costly," he said, adding that he feels there is a movement in Massachusetts to have communities be sewered as a result of the clean water act. "Waste is a problem nation-wide, sanitary landfills are a problem nation-wide."

According to Montouri, even at this stage, the town's share of sewer expansion facilities will be at minimum in the vicinity of $3M. "At 10 percent a year, interest comes to $300,000."

The commissioners will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday at the Lily Pond facility.

Rev. Scott Pumps New Life Into The Nazarene Church

By Tanna Kasperowicz

The Cohasset Community Church of The Nazarene was formed July 9 with 25 persons in attendance from Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Braintree and Weymouth.

Eventually the Nazarenes would like to buy the almost 80-year old Pope Memorial Church on North Jerusalem Road, which they presently rent from the Cohasset Methodists, who are now in Hull.

In early spring, the Cohasset Methodists merged with the Hull church, and they now hold their services in a quaint old church in Hull Village.

Which brings us back to the Nazarenes.

Presently the membership is pretty sketchy. Approximately 30-50 people come to services on any given week, but the Rev. J. Scott Newell, Jr. of North Weymouth feels the church is off to a good start and can only succeed.

He should know. Over a lifetime Rev. Newell has helped to bring life back to six churches. The Cohasset Church is his seventh, but it is the first one he started.

There's only one small hitch to his pastorship. After the church becomes successful he might leave. At least that's been his script in past years.

"Like any other teacher, I teach them to take care of themselves, to go on without me," said Rev. Newell, a

Ocean Bay Faces Four Charges

Late last week Building Inspector James Litchfield cited Ocean Bay Nurseries on Rte. 3A with four violations of the zoning bylaw and registered his complaint in Quincy District Court.

Litchfield said Ocean Bay was in violation of the bylaw by its continuous use of a trailer as an office, off-street parking on a state highway, no sign permit and the display of goods too close to the street line.

The court action followed the planning board's reluctant approval last week of the site plan for the nursery, with six conditions of approval stipulated.

Prior to the above two actions Ocean Bay had notified the town that it would appeal a recent decision by the board of appeals to limit the business to one operation, and not permit the proposed two-story building to house any "offices" for unrelated use.

Kenneth Schult is a co-owner of both the Cohasset nursery and the Arcadia Gardens nursery in Hull. He is also a member of the Hull Planning Board. The Mariner had tentatively scheduled an interview with Schult last week, but he was unable to keep the interview.

Schult did tell the Mariner that current plans had been scrapped and new plans would be presented to the planning board.

Plans before the planning board last week, as drawn by architects Hidell-Eyster & Associates Inc. of Weymouth, showed a two-story building on a 72,000 square foot lot. The facade of the building proposed was red brick, rough sawed siding and asphalt shingling.

According to Litchfield, he

Scores Over Average

Student test scores have been maintained at a consistent level over the years, said Steven Hart, director of school testing.

"But each time the test is 'normed,' it's more difficult to do well," he said, adding that he feels the newly normed SRA's given to students in Grades 1-8 last year more clearly point out weaknesses in the system than do the Iowa tests given in Grades 9-11.

"Next year new norms will be established for the Iowa tests," Hart said.

School Superintendent John Maloney explained that when a test is normed it is more difficult to achieve a high testing score because a reduced range is used in the competition.

The School Committee voted to implement Hart's recommendations to strengthen listening and auditory skills in kindergarden and Grade 1 and emphasize the spelling program and review the science curriculum in light of test results.

In addition, a grade level review will be held as follows: Grade 3 capitalization, Grade 4 rate and percent, Grades 7-8 capitalization, Grades 9-11 maps and globes, Grade 10 percentage.

In a related matter, the Committee expressed its wish to further investigate advanced placement programs.

'Sargent' In Charge

Dependable Cleaners Live Up To Name

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Several years ago Pat Sargent was asked what happened to the garments left after 60 days.

"We write on them with ballpoint pen and scorch them," Pat said, dispersing her wit like so many gingersnaps.

But that's hardly the case. As long as Pat Sargent continues to be on duty at Dependable Cleaners, garments can be forgotten for years and still be retrieved.

Three years ago, the Grover Jackson family moved to Atlanta, Ga. When the Jacksons returned to town for a visit last summer Pat saw Betty Jackson on the street and called from the door: "Hey Betty — tell Grover his shirts are ready!" No one could claim the shirts were 'freshly' laundered, but they were waiting.

A tea kettle is stashed under the cash register, and from 8:30-9 a.m. Dependable is suspiciously looking like a little coffee club these days. But if you drop off an order in that busy half hour, you hardly have to wait. Pat can mend, make change, write up an order and gab all at the same time.

John Nash, Jr. and Mort Rose are coffee regulars who assist Pat and Dependable employees Lisa Marcagsi, Lydia Trettis and Ida Fortier (presently on leave because of a broken foot). Other regulars include Nancy McLaughlin, Kay Conte, James McArthur and Gert and Andy Davis.

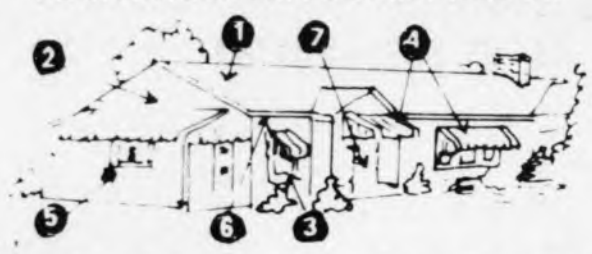
Stick around Dependable for awhile, and you can hear and see most of what's going on around town, i.e. last Wednesday Nash spent all night painting the Scituate Bowling Alley. "It took 35 gallons of paint for the ceiling," Nash said.

It's 9 a.m. last Thursday and Bob Hofferty arrives to pick up "the bag of complaints" and specials which must be back the same day. A couple of customers come in, they get Pat's complete attention, Pat-style. All customers require her to be a visible, negotiable personality. Tell her your problems and like a soap opera, she'll brighten your day by telling you something even more terrible. You think — hey, I don't have it so bad.

Recently Pat's boss, Donald Fawcett stumbled upon one of her larger coffee sessions and said: "Pat, some morning when you have time from your coffee break I'd like to talk business."

Her worst moments at the store were when she received "a whole suit full of ballpoint ink" — which got in that condition when its wearer, or its wearer's wife put it into a cleaning machine with a ballpoint pen. "But we got every bit out." And then there was the day a four-wheel drive jeep on its way to Texaco came down South Main Street on a sheet of ice and went right through Dependable's window.

Dependable has a vantage point in Cohasset, with windows on Border Street and South Main, it permits Pat to see the Log & Lion, In-Stitches, The Cohasset News Co., Texaco, and the people frequenting those businesses. She has worked at the cleaning company for eight years. "In fact next week is my anniversary." She started when Billy (her 13-year old) was in first grade (there are six Sargents, ranging from 13-29).



She likes her job and is always worried about getting fired. "I've never gotten up in the morning and said blank, I have to go to work today. Every day is different down here." Aside from working at Dependable, Pat serves as an on-call police matron for both Cohasset and Hull police departments.

She may well be among the greatest observers of the century. But she seems to be unaware that she herself is usually by far the most interesting person in any crowd.

Barn/Gallery Exhibition

Three young artists are holding a week-long show at a newly converted barn/gallery at 67 North Main St. at the corner of Sohier Street, through Saturday, September 15. Nathaniel Bowditch and Marsom Pratt, who grew up in Cohasset and went to Thayer Academy and the Museum School of Fine Arts, Boston, are living in the Coulter house (which is adjacent to the barn), with Bowditch's great Aunt Jean Coulter. They worked over the summer converting the barn into studio, work, and gallery space.

Bowditch is the son of Phil and Marian Bowditch of 33 Cedar Lane. Pratt's parents, Marsom and Tina (formerly of Cohasset) now live in Boston.

Bowditch works in painting, drawing, and photography.

Pratt crafts half hulls made from black walnut, mahogany, and sugar pine; he also has a beautifully carved, working dulcimer; and an interesting arrangement of child-size wooden shoe molds in a rack.

The third artist in the show, a friend and fellow student, is Cyndi Marland of Brookline, whose contribution was in the new art medium of video. After studying at the Museum School, Cyndi is now taking the Advanced Studies Program at MIT in video.

They hope to maintain the barn as a gallery for showings of their own work, as well as work of other young, talented artists, who like themselves, find the problem of exhibiting and having credentials, a Catch-22 situation. Good luck!

and a police officer asked that Ocean Bay cease and desist from using the trailer on December 13, 1978, and ordered that cars not be parked on the state highway.

The planning board's six conditions of approval were as follows: that no construction commence until Ocean Bay has received a water easement; that all parking be sufficient for employee/business and patron parking on the site.

And in addition that the front parking lot not be used for display or sale of any items and that lights in the parking area be shielded and the dumpster be enclosed by screening.

OCEAN BAY NURSERIES CALLED ON 4 VIOLATIONS.

Hydrant Flow Tests Monday

As part of the water distribution system study, fire hydrant flow tests will begin Monday. It is possible to pinpoint the exact time and location of these tests, but every effort will be made to minimize the inconvenience to homeowners.

Residents may experience brief periods of low pressure, discoloration of water. The water commissioners would appreciate your cooperation and understanding during this period.

Flu Shots

The Board of Health announced this week that flu shots will be available for citizens by the end of the month. Look for future announcements in "It's Happening."

At a health board meeting scheduled for September 24 the interpretation of the rules and regulations of disposal areas wtih regard to stumps and brush will be discussed as it pertains to local contractors. It has also been tentatively planned to discuss the Sawchuck/Pratt property at 79 Atlantic Avenue at that same meeting.

People Problem

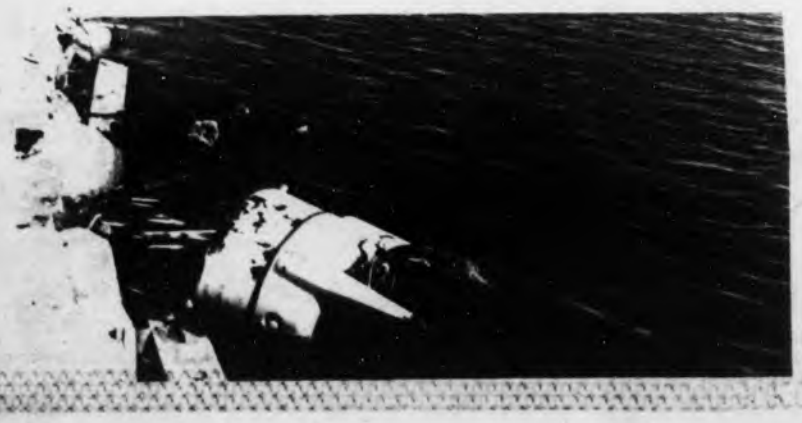
Gilbert Tower innundated The Mariner with four articles this week in which he made various arguments in support of home rule as it pertains to The Wetlands Act. He cited reasons why the planning board should expand its membership from five to nine individuals.

As usual, we were unable to publish all of his opinions in this week's issue of The Mariner. We did publish (see page 4) his letter taking exception to The Wetlands Act. And this is our response.

The political slogan synonymous with the American Revolution, as almost every schoolchild knows, is "No Taxation Without Representation." The slogan applies not just to taxation but to all actions by government that affect the lives of people.

However, that principle is in trouble with the modern world. Small towns and cities are only beginning to regard themselves as accountable for actions they take beyond or within their own boundaries. But there is only token recognition of the fact that we are all tied to the same life-support system.

"The people" complain about Straits Pond. But the only real problem with Straits Pond is — the people. The Coastal Zone Management grant recently awarded for study of the pond, will research technical data for short and long-term restoration of the pond, which "the people" destroyed.



At present, Straits Pond is a large cesspool. Not only do septic systems run into the pond, but culverts drain surface water into the pond.

We disagree with Mr. Tower's statement that "The Wetlands Act result has been to paralyze salt marshes by the attachment of the restrictions to the deeds of parcels of land in which there are areas of salt marsh." He adds: "Those restrictions are in effect and tie up the salt marshes so as to prevent them from being put to any use beneficial to mankind."

Ninety percent of all marine life is concentrated above the continental shelf next to land. This area represents the home of 90 percent of all marine life. This area is also an area of concentrated dumping and an outlet of all sewers and polluted river mouths.

It may take another generation before mankind begins to realize fully that the ocean is just another big lake, landlocked on all sides. And the marshes and the Straits Ponds are the Ocean's life blood.

We agree with Mr. Tower that the Wetlands Act had relieved us of charting our local, immediate destinies — had taken away our "home rule." But then we have been such despots.

Around Town Hall

DISCLOSURE BILL

"We'll fight it all the way," Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark said of the proposed bill which would require local officials to disclose their financial status and interests. "It's hard enough to find people to serve on town boards," Clark added. Other town officials appear equally unhappy.

SPECIAL PERMIT

Developer, David Bowering, had applied to the planning board for a special permit to develop three homes on Straits Pond across from Howe Road. Bowering told planners last week that all three septic systems perk and are out of the flood plain.

According to Bowering, the board of health inspector did the perks. Bowering plans to have the three lots use a common driveway.

POT HOLE

Selectmen are investigating a claim by Ms. Gertrude Fishwick of Scituate that her son's car received damages of $116.48 when it hit an unmarked pot hole on Stockbridge Street.

APPOINTMENT

Kenneth Sargent was appointed to the historical commission to fill a vacancy created by the resignation of Mrs. Avis Sweeney. His term will expire in 1981.

RESIGNATION

The resignation of R.J. Rotchford as assistant gas and plumbing inspector was accepted by selectmen last week. The new appointment will be made by the building inspector.

HUMPHRIES RETAINED

Selectmen were notified last week that the board of water commissionmers voted recently to retain the services of Atty. Charles Humphreys as special counsel for the water improvement program.

PROPOSED CUTBACKS

President Jimmy Carter will soon hear from selectmen regarding their concern of the effect any proposed cutbacks planned at the General Dynamics Quincy shipyard might have on the economy of the area. The South Shore Chamber of Commerce predicts the work force at the shipyard will drop from 4,700 to 400 by this time next year.

INTERVIEWED

Both John Roy and Jeremiah Delaney were interviewed by selectmen last week for an opening on the board of appeals.

SEA WALL REPAIRS

Selectmen planned to meet with the finance committee Tuesday (press day for us) in order to request a transfer of $4,169 from the advisory committee to repair sea walls along the harbor.

The April annual town meeting appropriated $15,000 for the deteriorating sea wall repairs along the harbor, but the lowest bid submitted for the work was $19,169 and selectmen could not proceed with advertising for the work.

If the board had decided to wait until the fall special town meeting for money from free cash, weather conditions might have delayed the work until Spring, Selectmen Chairman Arthur Clark pointed out.

REP. MURRAY

In a statement released this week, State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray, R-Cohasset, said while she was pleased that each of her towns (Cohasset, Hingham, Hull) is receiving extra revenue from the state, "I feel the amount returned should be still greater."

Rep. Murray said she voted against the new educational formula which has allowed the state to distribute excess funds to cities and towns in a different manner than in the past because "It has decreased the amount of return gained by each town in my district as it is geared to cities, and not towns."

The approximate extra revenue derived by each town is as follows: Cohasset $57,782, Hingham $174,039 and Hull $178,621.

Taking Legal Rights

Letters

To the Editor:

Imagine a young lady strolling down the street swinging a handbag. A youth comes along and sees the handbag. He knows it contains something he wants very much, so he snatches the handbag and makes away with it.

That anology illustrates perfectly how a Massachusetts state official grabbed away from the Cohasset Planning Board its right and duty to do some town planning in connection with the uses to be permitted, or not permitted, in connection with the town's salt marshes. The snatching was implemented by a state law known as the Wetlands Restrictive Act, G.L. Chapter 130-Section 105. When words are omitted which are not essential the "Act" reads as follows:

"The commissioner — may — adopt amend, modify or repeal orders restricting or prohibiting dredging, filling, removing or otherwise altering or polluting, coastal wetlands."

The reason given for the granting of that authority to the commissioner was " — for the purpose of promoting the public safety, health and welfare, and protecting public and private property, wildlife and marine fisheries — "

That pretended to be the reason for the "Act" but it was not the real reason. The real reason is disclosed by what the "Act" accomplishes. It grabs away from the town's planning board its legal right to prescribe the uses which the town wishes to be permitted in the districts described by the zoning bylaw. Furthermore the law places in the hands of the commissioner the right to prevent dredging and filling of salt marshes.

The snatching away of that right from the town's planning board and the conferring of that right to the state-appointed commissioner is clearly a violation of the "home rule" amendment to the Constitution. Therefore it is null and void and meaningless.

However its result was to paralyze salt marshes by the attachment of the restrictions to the deeds of parcels of land in which there are areas of salt marsh. Those restrictions are in effect and tie up the salt marshes so as to prevent them from being put to any use beneficial to mankind.

The next step should be to return the handbag to the lady, or in other words to remove the restrictions from the deeds. It will be evident from a careful reading of the legislation that the matter is very involved and difficult for the ordinary person to follow.

In the above simplification the words have been omitted which obscure the real meaning of the law. It is a clever and tricky piece of legislation. When it was proposed by Arthur W. Brownell, Jr., Commissioner of Natural Resources, it was accepted by the Legislative Committee on Natural Resources without an environmental impact study.

It was evidently presumed by that committee that the legislation proposed by Brownell was proper, so that it unfortunately became a law. The real purpose and meaning of the law is obscured by a lot of verbiage. If that has not been made evident by the above, please read the law carefully and see the real meaning of it which is so well concealed. Now the law is like an empty shotgun cartridge which has been fired. Now the problem is to remove the bullet.

Brownell was determined to restrict all salt marshes without making any exceptions and without discriminating. His intention to protect fisheries was commendable but he carried his method too far. In Cohasset it is desired to dredge Whale Meadow to deepen it for more boat moorings. The carrying out of that project is being prevented by the restrictions on deeds. Concurrently there is a Coastal Zone Management Author-

SCHOOL SCENES — Jimmy Yess and Bridget Leong get accustomed to first kindergarten class and Christian Downe to Osgood first grade.

Committee Votes In Cursive Writing Program

Remember cursive q's that looked like 2's — funny lower case cursive r's that could be mistaken for n's? Or v's?

Monday night the School Committee voted in a new style of cursive writing that will hopefully develop greater functional speed and handwriting skills.

The letters have an accurate motor patterning and rhythm which lends itself to kinesthetic training. Cursive also helps the student to see words as whole units rather than as separate letters as it does not start and stop but has continuity and rhythm.

Study Committee members May Benbow, Jeanne Fink and Raymond Levine spent the summer studying the program and recommended that cursive writing be taught earlier, "Before the advent of workbooks," Ms. Benbow said.

This year children in Grades K-2 will be introduced to manuscript writing and printing while Grade 3 will go directly into cursive. The program will be implemented in Grades K-6.

Ms. Benbow said it has been discovered that 15 per cent of all students have visual/motor problems. She added that the system the study group recommended had been used last year as remediation because "It teaches motor activity correctly the first time."

Screening will be done on every child at Osgood and Deer Hill Schools. Ms. Fink said she had already exposed her first grade class to the method — "It can be done, I've done it. I've experimented with the children on a few of the letters. Even on the first day of school the children knew what those words were immediately."

Steven Hart, director of testing, said each teacher will define students' skills at the end of the school year. "The program has to be phased in somewhat; we'll be using three levels of The Johnson handwriting program."

School Committee Appointments

The following individuals were appointed to school positions at Monday's session of the School Committee:

Carolyn Bennett, instructional aide; Janet Willis, METCO aide in mathematics; Carol Lash, elementary teacher; Joan Ferry as activity aide; Joanne Fichter and Barbara McCool as cheerleading coaches at a shared total stipend of $800.

Two resignations were accepted with regret: Judith Reagan, Title I aide at Deer Hill School. Ms. Reagan resigned to take a full-time teaching position in another community. Marjorie Anderson resigned as activity aide at the Deer Hill School.

John Mika was granted a sabbatical leave for the 1980-81 school year in order that he can meet residency requirements at Boston College.

SUPT. CONTRACT

Negotiations for the renewal of the school superintendent's contract was again postponed. The Committee voted, 4-2, to negotiate the renewal of the contract at its September 17 meeting because of the late hour. School committeewomen Irene Brown and Patricia Walsh voted against adjourning the negotiations.

"We've put it off four or five times — I think it's a disgrace," Ms. Brown said.

ity which wants to improve harbors.

Therefore there is a conflict. It is understood that C.Z.M. has awarded $17,000 for improving Cohasset Harbor. It is recommended to the Harbor Committee that the first expenditure from that money be for the preparation of a comprehensive map of Cohasset Harbor and the surrounding land areas.

This presentation is already too long and will be continued by other articles by the writer. It is regretted that the matter is so very involved but if readers will have patience the writer will try to explain it as he sees it.

Recreation Department Fall Program

FALL RECREATION PROGRAM INFORMATION

Baton Twirling: Grades K-12, $5 fee, 10 weeks. Beginner and intermediate classes, Tuesday, 3 and 4 p.m., Town Hall.

Participants will be taught basic skills, formation and group drills in the beginner class. Intermediate class 3-4 p.m.; advanced class 4-5 p.m. Children will be required to have their own baton. There will be three, 10-week sessions. Instructor not yet determined.

Creative Dramatics: Grades K-12, $4 fee, 10 weeks. Wednesdays, 3 and 4 p.m., Town Hall.

Grades K-4 will meet at 3 p.m. and Grades 5-12 will meet at 4 p.m. Participants will be taught the many phases of acting, role playing, improvization stage presence, terminology, as well as many technical aspects of play production. The intent of the program is not to produce a play but rather teach and practically apply the many skills involved. Ms. Rosamond Hooper will be returning for her second year as instructor. Ms. Hooper has been, and is currently involved with the theater and performing arts.

Game Time: Grades K-3, $4 fee, 10 weeks. K-1, 2:45 p.m.; 2-3, 3:45 p.m. Tuesdays, Osgood School.

Game time is a structured program intended to provide fun and recreation for children in Grades K-3. Games and activities will be geared to Grades K-1 during the first hour. While the basic intent of the program is to provide first plain fun via low-organized games and activities, the secondary results provide peer group relations, social interaction, and motor skill development. The program will be offered for three, 10-week sessions. Instructor not yet determined.

Open Gyms: Grades 7-12. Boys meet Tuesdays, 7-9 p.m. CHS gym. Girls meet Thursdays, 7-9 p.m. CHS gym. No fee.

A drop-in, supervised, but unstructured program for junior and senior high students. The seven week program will provide the opportunity for youth to utilize recreational/athletic facilities and equipment of their choice ie: basketball, volleyball, tumbling, etc. All students welcome to participate on indicated evenings and hours. Joseph Strazdes will supervise.

Camp Craft: Grades 6-12, $5 fee, six weeks. Saturdays, Town Hall, 9 a.m.

The program is designed to offer basic skills in camping, backpacking, and hiking. Participants will be taught how to read maps, compass, first aid, set-up camp-sites, etc. etc. Basic nature studies as related to survival in the outdoors will also be included in the format. Jean Gilbert will instruct the program. Mrs. Gilbert is a certified ACA Campcraft Instructor. She also is certified in first aid, CPR, and WSI. (Program will be limited in participants).

Adults Mixed Volleyball: Ages 17 and over, $6 fee, eight weeks. Tuesday evenings, 7-9 p.m., Junior High Gym.

Adult mixed volleyball is offered to players of all abilities. Program will be designed so that advanced players may utilize gym and equipment and play on their own. Instruction (on separate courts) for those who wish it, will be offered. Ideal program for socialization, exercise and fun.

Ms. Catherine McArdle will be in charge of equipment and facility. She will also be available to offer instruction for those who desire it.

Gymnastics: Grades 4-12, $6 fee, six weeks, Junior High Gym. Monday evenings, 6:30 p.m., Beginners; 7:30 p.m., Intermediates; 8:30 p.m., Advanced.

Three levels of instruction will be offered on Monday evenings. Classes will be organized by age and ability. Program is ideal for girls who are planning to join High School Gymnastic Team (advanced group) as well as beginners who have never participated (beginner group). Boys are welcome to join.

Instructor is Ms. Gay Ripley.

Afternoon Sports Program: Grades 4, 5, and 6, $4 fee, six weeks. Deer Hill School. Thursdays, 3-5 p.m.

Program is designed essentially for fun and games for Grades 4 thru 6. Team sports will be the emphasis and individual skill instruction will be offered. A variety of team sports and games will be offered. Instructor not yet determined.

Disco: (Youth) Ages 11-18, $5 fee, six weeks. Saturday evenings 7 p.m., Town Hall.

Professional dance instructor Ms. Francine Comeau will instruct both youth and adult Disco classes. Lessons will offer essentials of Disco Dance for beginners and will progress to more intricate dance steps during the six week course. Group and individual instruction will be provided in small class sizes.

Disco: (Adult) Ages 19 and over, $5 fee, six weeks. Saturdays 8 p.m., Town Hall.

Learn the essentials of Disco Dance. Amaze your friends and children with your newly acquired skills. Ms. Comeau will provide group and individual instruction geared to all levels of Disco Dancers. Great program for socialization, fun and recreation while learning the latest dance steps. (Classes will be limited in size).

Pre-School Play Group: Ages 3 1/2-5 years, $4 fee, eight weeks. Fridays 3-4:30 p.m., Joseph Osgood School.

Specialized play program designed for the pre-kindergarten child. Program will include low-organized games, group activities, and special activities designed for the pre-school child. Ideal for group and social interaction, peer group relations, and basic motor skill development. The emphasis will be on recreational games and activities, however, the secondary aspects of the program are such to help the young child become orientated to playing with other children, following instructions, and other necessary developmental traits that will help the child to adjust to kindergarten. Instructor not yet determined, but will have a degree in Early Childhood Education or Elementary Education.

Guitar Lessons: Ages 10 and over, $8 fee, six weeks. Beginners and Intermediates, Tuesday evenings, 7 and 8 p.m., Town Hall.

Professional recording artist and musican Mark Mincolla will teach the guitar program again this year. Each participant is required to have his own guitar. Classes will be offered for beginners from 7-8 p.m. and intermediates 8-9 p.m. The program is ideal for all members of the family. Class sizes will be small so that individual needs can be met.

Yoga Classes: Ages 14 and over, $8 fee, eight weeks, 7 and 8 p.m., Town Hall, Wednesday evenings.

Beginner class meets from 7-8 p.m. and intermediate class meets from 8-9 p.m. Ideal program for entire family. Participants should bring their own mats or blankets.

Tennis Lessons: Year round, $100 fee, six weeks.

Mr. Mark McGuire, Tennis Pro, will complete his last session of tennis this October. However, a new Tennis Pro will be engaged and new classes will be formed every six to eight weeks. If you are interested in joining a class please call the Recreation Office to find out when new classes will be registered.

Gold Lessons: As demand dictates, $10 fee, six weeks.

Golf lessons, taught by Mr. Richard Thibeault, Golf Pro, will be formed as demands indicate. Spring and summer classes have terminated and a fall class will begin if enough interest is generated. If interested call the Recreation Office.

SPECIALIZED PROGRAM

The following special interest programs will be offered this fall if enough participants register: biking, jogging clinic, walking clinic, target shooting (gun), and weight training. If you wish to register or obtain more information about the special programs or the regularly scheduled programs, please call the Recreation Office at 383-6791.

☐No wonder you were confused about the reported "going-away" party given two weeks ago for Peter and Marilyn Mazza. They were also confused as to whether or not they were moving. The truth is that there was a party (mostly factual, with a few embellishments) and even though they have decided not to move, the merriment was not wasted!

☐Eleanor Downs, a lifelong resident of Cohasset and its oldest citizen, celebrated her 102nd birthday last week. She began the day by playing a tune on the piano at the Ripley Road Nursing Home, where she lives and was treated to a luncheon at the Red Lion Inn. Many happy returns!

☐Mrs. Harold Coughlin and Mrs. Eric Pearson were members of the Doric Dames Committee which recently sponsored a thank you luncheon, held at Pier 4 Restaurant, for the 67 Junior Guides who worked as State House guides over the summer months.

☐Jim Clinton of Parker Avenue took 1st place in the A Division of the Hingham Sunfish and Force Five race at Hingham Yacht Club on Sunday. Jim finished ahead of the seven other boats with a total score of 18 3/4. Placing 3rd in the B Division with 16 points, was Chris Greenman on Stoneleigh Lane.

A candlelight flotilla celebrated the elevation of Richard Horn as Rear Admiral of the Cohasset Sailing Club over the weekend.

After a virtual grounding on Bassing Beach, the flagship Yaw'll wallowed majestically towards the dock, with Lady Caroline Horn in the bow — illuminated by twin hurricane lamps.

Wellwishers under the canvas at the Cox Home gathered to add their cheers of approbation to the grande spectacle.

The evening ended at the Conway Estate with a spirited and genteel discussion of naval action past and present. Captain Kirby Meacham raised his pewter mug in a final toast to the waning summer and cirrus nimbus.

"Just walk'n on Sandy Beach."

Fitzpatrick at Art Center

By Karin Bartow

The exhibition of James Fitzpatrick's "Functional Forms" at the South Shore Art Center from September 16 to October 12 is the first public showing of this young man's contemporary, sculptural furniture-forms which he only began designing and making four years ago.

With an education in biochemistry and electronics, and six months experience as an attendant on one of the last chronic mental wards of Boston State Hospital, Fitzpatrick became the Coordinator of a vocational rehabilitation center for the mentally ill in 1975.

Known as WestRox Park, and located in Hyde Park, the Center housed three units, two vocational and one clinical. Using his knowledge of wood working and tool handling from a youth spent helping to build a family house, Fitzpatrick established a shop that provided training in furniture making, refinishing and repairing.

Since Fitzpatrick was not a formal "art" student, his modesty (or honesty) prevents him from describing his current profession as artist/sculptor. The "Functional Forms" that he's created, however, are from an artist's eye and artisan's hand. What's commendable about what he's accomplished is that he never had any formal furniture-making or sculpting training, and yet both skills are fully utilized in his pieces.

Fitzpatrick found that working in mental health leads you to a lot of self-exploration and he can find explanations for the why's of some of his forms. For example, he has an aversion to angular pieces, which he says comes from the female half of his androgyny.

Fitzpatrick lives in a 'child-size' attic apartment on Jerusalem Road, hardly big enough for his own handmade furnishings, much less the machinery, tools, and raw materials of furniture making. He is looking for an old barn or stable or larger space where he can continue to create new and more varied functional forms.

Wood Stoves Need Permits

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, R-Cohasset, registered her concern this week that homeowners who have purchased woodburning stoves may not be applying for installation permits.

According to a federal Housing and Urban Development (HUD) study conducted through the state fire marshall's office, 95 per cent of all fuel stove-related fires are caused by faulty installation.

As of July 1, 1979, all wood stove installed in Massachusetts must bear a metal lable, indicating they have been properly tested by an approved testing laboratory.

However, regulations will only be in effect until November 15, 1979. Between November 15 and January 1, 1980 building inspectors will grant permits to install unlabeled stoves.

Rep. Murray feels the above situation is a reality which should be addressed.

Hell's Pussycats 'Hit' Town

HELL'S PUSSYCATS motorcycle club enjoys the Harbor.

Sunday —

Needham's "Hell's Pussycats" Wheel Through Cohasset.

Big bikes. Big smiles. Lots of laughter. It was a group we knew could only be up to no good. So we cruised into Hugo's parking lot behind them, lined them up and got our evidence. A Needham Times story, at least. Possibly even UPI would pick up this biggy.

The Massachusetts Chapter of Hell's Pussycats had invaded the town and Hugo's parking lot. H. Phillip Garrity, chairman of the Needham Board of Selectmen, admitted the group was causing a little commotion, but tried to smooth things over by telling us it is a Sunday morning breakfast bunch, which included the vice president of Filenes. Oh yeah sure, we thought.

"Our wives let us go because no bars are open," Andrew Picariello said. He said he was a former president of the Needham Exchange Club.

Cohasset Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark, who rides a mean moped himself, might be interested to know that additional members are being accepted. "We need a doctor and a psychiatrist, but no women," a chauvinist shouted.

Lloyd Remsen, who described himself as "The world's oldest juvenile delinquent," is club chaplin. While most of the members appeared to have valid credentials, even supplying business cards, we were saddened by the situation of one of the group.

Lou Ravech said he was unemployed, and looking for a job in Cohasset. "Every Sunday he rides around looking for a job," someone said.

Having our scoop, we alerted Police Officer Brian Cogill to the Pussycats' presence. But Officer Cogill seemed to be more interested in giving a redhead directions.

Community Center Marks 3rd Octoberfest

The community center will sponsor its third annual fun fair on October 6 from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. on the community center grounds.

Selectmen have granted the center a one day beer and wine license for the event which will include rowboats on the common duck pond, the Shriner's band, crafts, tables, a flea market, antique tables and a 4 p.m. preview of the auction that will highlight the day for adults.

For the youngsters - monkey magic, cotton candy, games and pony rides. Beer will be served with knockwurst and bratwurst and oom-pah-pah.

Peter O'Laughlin will determine by some method known only to him who is "The Great Pumpkin," a contest with several catagories and lots of ribbons.

The auction will begin at 6:30 p.m. under the direction of Robert Turner. Articles to be auctioned will come from The Carousel, a local estate, and other interested local dealers.

For information concerning the auction call the Turners at 383-6513. For information concerning crafts tables and flea markets call Nina Bird at 383-0659.

Food tables will be sponsored by the Nursery School Committee. Information concerning "The Great Pumpkin Contest" will appear in school lunch menus. Anyone interested in volunteering time or service should call Judy Volungis at 383-0752.

The group from East Wareham Evangelical United Methodist Church will also sing during the Sunday school hour at 10.

Members are Grace Perry, pianist and vocalist; Tom Perry, bass guitar and vocalist; Paul and Ruth Lombard, vocalists; John Perry and Faith Haraala, vocalists; and Bob Souza, drums. The Lombard children, Kristi, Tammy and Brian will also sing. Debbie Perry will use hand signals for the deaf.

POPE MEMORIAL CHURCH

Church

junior high school mathematics teacher and soccer coach at Broadmeadows, Quincy.

He likes both the church and teaching...but says he is a man who knows his limitations. "There are things that I do well, and other things I don't do well. I'm not well organized. I'm not an administrator. One thing I believe in is disorganization; it gets me a lot of situations I have fun in."

Rev. Newell combined both pastoring and teaching from the very start. When he was pastoring a little church in Zelienople, Pa., he became acquainted with the family of a boy who had damaged his nervous system as the result of an accident and could no longer attend school.

"The school superintendent told me he'd get a good home teacher for the boy as soon as he could find one. I kept pushing him. One day he came up to me all smiles. He said - I've found somebody. I asked who. And he said - you."

And from then on, Rev. Newell got hooked on both teaching and preaching. Oh, occasionally he thought he was at a church to stay, "Then more kids happened and I had to get a job. I never quite made it full time."

Both Rev. Newell and his wife, Dorothy, night city editor at The Patriot Ledger, were born and raised in Farringdale, N.Y. "All those potato fields are now known as Levittown," he said.

He and his wife raised five boys. "Bossy women have boys," and Mrs. Newell does have something to say about his sermons. "Dorothy says it's a good sermon if I preach it. If I preach it in 10 minutes it's a better one. If I preach it in five minutes — that's the best."

Nazarenes are basically Methodists, only Nazarenes have taken the precepts of John Wesley on holiness, who believed: you were saved; at a later date you are sanctified.

"He (Wesley) came as a missionary to Georgia. He was a complete failure and run out of Georgia because he stirred up the Indians and wouldn't marry the governor's daughter."

Methodists are very formal. "I'm very informal."

What does he do to make a church grow? "I don't do anything, really. Mostly it's the people who want their church to grow. What really splits a church is when adults and youth are separated. We have Bible study groups — it might be a geographical group, a group of women or men, who meet for breakfast because they have the same kind of time.

"I don't provide a special activity for youth. Everybody goes to Sunday School. I wouldn't force you to, that's just what I would prefer you to do.

One of my secrets is we're going to have special Sunday night vesper service, sing hymns, then everybody will read a favorite poem. And I do have a lot of special music, like the Mansionhiers."

"By the way, we need a piano player — no pay—but lots of good company. And we have a tremendous pipe organ, and no one to play."

The Pope Memorial Church was built by Albert Pope, a Bostonian, who imported Pope automobiles from England. It was built for the sum of $200,000 in 1900 in memory of Pope's son who drowned in Straits Pond.

Rev. Newell is assisted at the church by Rev. Hoy Richards of Melrose and Bob Weiss of Braintree. Both men will have a preaching, teaching and visitation ministry.

Jam, Jelly Time At Community Center

Jean Turner will direct her talents to jams and jellies in the community center's new kitchen on Thursday, September 20 from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m.

Demonstrated will be the three stages of old-fashioned grape jelly making, and the preparation of a special tomato jelly which can be used for Christmas giving.

There will be samples and recipes galore, and each participant will take home a jar of jelly.

Stir up some fun and meet some new friends. Call 383-0088.

AEROBIC DANCE

The class will meet at the center from 9:30 to 10:30 Monday, Wednesday and Friday under the instruction of Joanne Shephard. Call the center for details as it was incorrectly listed in the mailed program.

This new fitness program is designed to promote cardiovascular fitness through a gradual running program, achieving aerobic efficiency. The 30-minute exercise workout is applied to music.

Welcome Khlees!

By Karin Bartow

They were farmers in rural Cambodia. They spent three years in a refugee camp in Thailand, several weeks in the crowded city of Bangkok. In August, the Khlee family settled in Cohasset, at 13 Hill Street.

Mr. Vath Khlee, a farmer, his wife Chabeh, their children Vanny, 4 months (girl), Phally, 3 (girl), Phalla, 5 (girl), Bunny, 7 (boy), Et, 8 (girl), and Chien, 9 (boy), are glad to have finished the long ordeal of refugee life and the immigration process to a free country.

The South Shore Baptist Church in Hingham has made their move possible and will "support them until they can support themselves," said Mrs. Carol Zimmerman, a church member who spoke about Cohasset's newest family.

The Baptist Church voted unanimously to sponsor a Cambodian refugee family in order to help carry the burden of the Asia refugees who so badly need assistance. The Church was paired with the Khlee's by World Relief, the International Relief and Development arm of the National Association of Evangelistics.

Once sponsors and families are accepted and matched, World Relief moves quickly ahead to get families moved to their new homeland.

The Church leased an apartment for the Khlee's, fixed it up, and gathered donations of clothing and furnishings. The family will benefit from programs available to teach refugees English and will be assisted and supported morally by other Cambodian and Vietnamese families already successfully located in the Boston area.

Mrs. Zimmerman quietly explains that "the Church members will be looking out for them, standing by them; we will love them gently until they can take care of themselves." She says that while "They are going to need acceptance and kindness from the community, they will need some protection at first. They're shy people, and coming into this situation, we will try to see that they are not overwhelmed." She added, "they are a family of integrity, so we will be careful not to be patronizing."

All of Cohasset welcomes the Khlee's!
